Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my misery, ye are afrayed. Wyd I desyre you, to byng vnto me, or to geue me eny of youre substance: To deliuer me from the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the hande of exauntes. Catch me, and I wyl holde my toung: and when I do erre, direct me wherin. How stedfast are the wordes of treuth: And which of you can rebulle and reproue them? Do ye take deliberacyon to check mens saynges, and iudge a poze wordes spoken in vayne? Ye fall vpon the fatherles and go about to ouerthrowe your awne frende. And therfore be content, and loke now vpon me, and I wyl not lye before youre face. Turne (I praye you) be indifferent iudges, turne agayne, and ye shall se myne vnguiltynesse. And therfore be eny vnguiltynesse in my tong, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that thys lyfe is but a vayne geyse.

Job man: any certayn tyme vpon the earth? * Are not bys dapes also lyke yf dapes of an hyed ferraue? For lykes a bonde struunt deperth the shadowe, and as an hyselynge wolde sayne haue all ende of hys woche. ¶ And to haue I laboured whole monethes longe / but in dayne ¶ and many a ca-refull night haue I told. ¶ When I laye me downe to slepe, I saye: ¶ When shall I rise: I saye, I longed sore for the nyght. And in the meane tyme am I full of sorowes: untill the twynght. ¶ My fleth is clothed with wormes and dust of the earth: my spynne is withered, and become horrible, ¶ my dayes passe ouer moze spedyly, then a weccer can weccer out his webbe: and are gone: or I am aware. ¶ Remember, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall nomoze se pleasures therof, yee, & that none other meys eye shall seme my moze. ¶ For yf thou fasten thyne eye vpon me, I come to naught. ¶ The cloude is consumed and vanysshed awaye, euen so be that goeth downe to the graue, I shall come nomoze vp, ner tuene agayne into hys house: nether shall hys place knowe hym any moze.

Etherfor, I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my sprete, and muse in the bytternesse of my mynde. ¶ Am I a seer as a whalsph, that thou kepest me so in pysion: ¶ When I saye: my bedd shall com-forte me. ¶ I shall haue some restfulynge by talking to my selfe vpo my couche. ¶ When troubleth thou me with dreames, ad makest me to asprayed thowout visions, that my soule witheth rather to perishe and dye, then my bones to remaine.

I can ke no remedy, I shall lye nomoze: I spare me then, for my dayes are but daye-ny. What is man, that thou hast hym in such reputacyon, & settest him soch by hym: ¶ Thou visitest hym early, and euery daye, sodenly doest thou & tye hym.

Why goest thou not fro me, ner lettest me alone, ¶ so longe tyll I maye knowe do-wne my selfe: ¶ I haue offended, and what shall I do vnto the, O thou pzeleuer of me: Why hast thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuy a burden vnto my selfe: Why doest thou not forgive me my synne: Why-for: takest thou not awaye my wickednes: Wholde, now must I slepe in the dust, ad yf thou schelt me to moze in the moynynge, I shal be gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue desecured hys payne. A description of mozt pyn.

When answered Baldad the Shuhite, and sayde: how longe wilt thou talke of such thynges: how longe shall thy mouth speake so pyonde wordes: ¶ Woth God peruerter the thynges that is lauffull: ¶ Or both the almyghtey destroye the thynges that is ryght: ¶ For seyng that thy sonnes synned agaynst hym, dyd not he punishe them for theyr wyked-nesse: ¶ I thou woldest not reuolt vnto God by thyms, and makee thyne humble prayer to the almyghty: yf thou woldest lye a pzere and a godly lyfe: ¶ Quide he not awake vp vnto the immediately, and geue the, the bewe-type of ryghtwysenesse agayne: ¶ In so moche, that where in to euer thou haddest lyte afore, thou quidest now haue greates aboundance.

Enquere: ¶ I praye the of them that haue bene before the, & search diligently amonge theyr fathers. ¶ For we are but of yesterdaye, and knowe not, yf oure dayes vpon earth are but a very shadowe. ¶ Shall not they the we the, and tell the, yee, ad glorily confesse the same.

Have a replie be grene without moystnesse: ¶ O maye the grasse growe without water: ¶ No: but (or euer it be shot forth, & or euer it be gathered) it withered, before any other herbe. ¶ Euen to goeth it with all them, that forget God: and euen thus also shall the pyocites hope come to naught. ¶ Hys confidence shal be destroyed, and hys trust shal be as yders webbe. ¶ He shall leane vpo his house, but it shall not stande: he shall holde hym fast by it, yee shall it not endure. ¶ It is cut as a grene trete before the sonne, & witherth forth the braynches in hys garden. ¶ It taketh many rotes by a well lyde, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stoncs.

But yf it be taken out of hys place, euery man denpeth it, sapenge: ¶ I knowe the not.
So, thus is it with hym, that reioyseth in his owne doynges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Behold, God will not cast awaye a vicitious man, nether will he helpe the vngod-ly. ¶ Thy mouth shall be full with laughing, and thy lippes with gladnesse. ¶ They also yf hate the, shal be confounded, and the wel-linge of the vngodly shall come to naught.

10. whan he goeth ouer by me, I shall not se hym. And whan he departedh, by me, I shall not loke vpon hym. I shall not per-ceiue hym. If he be hasty to take eny thyng awaye, who wil make him restoe it agayne? Who wil saye vnto hym what doest thou? he is God, whose wach no man maye withstande: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym. how shulde I then answer hym? What woordes shulde I synde oute agaynst hym? Yee, though I were ryghteous, yet might I not geue hym one worde agayne, but incheily subwypte my self to hym as my iudge. If I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet wold I not beleeue, that he heerd my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. he wyll not lett my spete be in rest, but spileth me wth bitterness.

Gen. i. 5.

If men wyll speake of strength, lo, he is stronge: If men wyll speake of ryghteounes, who dare be my recorde. If I wyll iustifye my selfe, & my aunc mouth shall condemne me: If I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wylke doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare, yet am I weep of my selfe.

One thyng it is and therfore I sayed. he destropeth both the righteous and vngodly. And though he slaye sodenly with the leunge, yet wil he lauzh at the punyement of the innocent. As for the wozde, it is geuen ouer into the hand of the wicked, and he shal couer the faces of the iudges therof. Is it not so: where is there eny, but he is soch one:

Job. vi. 1.

* If by dayes are more wyfye then a runner: they are gone & haue sene no good thyng. They are palled awaye, as the thypyes that be good vnder sapir, and as the negle & fierch to the pyae. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynge, to leaue of lea my wozard, and to comforte my selfe, then am I afrayed of all my sorowes, for I knowe, that thou wylt not iudge me innocent. If I be then a wicked doer, wyl labour I in vayne: If I wash my selfe with snowe water, and make myne hādes neuer so cleane, & at the wyl, yet shal thou dyppe me in the myer: and & myne aunc clothes shall defyle me. For he that I must geue answer vnto, ad with whom I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Rather is there eny dapesman to laze hys hande betwene vs. Lett hym take hys rod a waye from me, yee, lett him make me nomore afeared of hym, and then shall I answer hit without eny feare. For as longe as this thus, I can make no answer.

Chapter.

Job is weep of hys lyfe, and letteth out his regrettable brāne. He despayeth the tyme to repent. & setteth vpon a death.

11 E greutch my soule to lye. I wyl make my complaynte, and wyl speake out of the very heupne of my soule. I wyl saye vnto God: I do not condempne me, but therewe me the cause, wherfore thou contendest to with me? Thynckest thou it well done, to oppresse me, to cast me of: beyng the woiches of thy hādes and to mainteigne the council of the vngodly? Hast thou fleshy eyes: or doest thou loke as a man lokech? What thy dayes are & thy dayes of man, and thy yeares as mans yeares: that thou makest soch inquisicō for my wickednes, & searchest out my synne: where as (not withstandinge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to deluyne me out of thyne hande. * Thy hādes haue made me, and fastidoned me all together toūde aboute, wilt thou then destrope me sodenly? Remember: (I beseeke the) how that thou madest me of the mould of y^r earth, & thale bryng me into dust agayne. Wilt thou not turned me, as it were in mylk, and turned me to cruddes lyke cheie? Thou hast couered me with skynne and fleshe, and ioyned me together with bones and synnower. Thou hast graunted my lyfe, and done me good: and the diligent beede that thou tokest vpon me, hath preserved my spete.

Gen. i. 5.

Thou hast hyd these thynges in thyne heart. I am sūre, that thou rememberest these thynges. If I byd synne, thou haddest an eye vnto me, and shalt not declare me innocent because of myne offence. If I haue done wylke, wth is me therfore. If I haue done righteously, yet dare I not lye vnto my beede: so full am I of confusion, and le myne aunc miser.

Thou hunttest me out (being in heuynes) as it were a lyon, & troublest me out of measure. Thou byngest fresh wyneke agaynst me, and thy wozard increaseth thou vpon me, very many are p^rlagēs & I am in. * Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe: what I had persued, and I no eye had sene me. If they had carped me to my graue as lone as I was boine, then shuld I be now, as though I had nyne bene.

Job. vi. 1.

Are not my dayes fewere? Lett byn then krate of frome and let me alone, that I maye take my selfe a lytle afore I go thether, from whence I shall not turne agayne: cuento the lande of darcknesse and shadowe of death: ye, into that darck cloudy land and deadly shadowe, where as is no adye, but terrible fearre as in the darcknesse.

C The .xi. Chapter.

Job is humblyly reuerent of God. And is thoroughly humble. He is mercifull to his repen-tantes.

J Then answered Sophar the Anamatit, and sayde: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shulde he falslyfie much, be commended therein? Shulde men geue care vnto the auncle? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorn, and that no body mock the againe?
Wilt thou saye vnto God. The thyng that I take in hande is perfect, and I am cleane in thy syght? What God wolde speake, and open his myttes agaynst the, that he myght showe the: out of his secreet wysdome? Why rewardest thou the double as he was appoynted to do: then shuldest thou knowe, y God had forgotten the because of thy lymie.

Art thou able to fynde out the secretes of God? Wilt thou attayne to the perfect-nesse of the almyghty? He is hyer then heauen, what arte thou able to do? Deper then the hell, how wilt thou then know him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of the see. Though he turne all thynges vp lyde downe, close them in, gather them together, who wilt turne hym from his purpose? * (S) who maye scape unto hym, whye seest thou so.)

*Job. xxi. v. 10.
Job. xxi. v. 11.
Job. xxi. v. 12.*

* For it is he that knoweth the vanite of men: he seeth thez wyckednesse also, shulde he not then confide it? A vayne body exalteth hym selfe, and man new borne is lyke a wynde asseycolte. If thou haddest nowe a ryght hert, and lyfedyt by thyn handes to-warde hym: yf thou woldest put a waye the wyckednes which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwell in thy house. Then myghtest thou lyfe vp bye face without shame, and then shuldest thou be sure, and haue no neede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy miserie, y thynke nomaie vpon it then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld the residue of thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and sprynge forth as the moonyng. Then myght-est thou haue coforte, in the hope that thou hast: and sleepe quietly, wile thou art buried.
Then shuldest thou take thy rest, & no man to make the askepe, yee, many one shuld see moch by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: theyz hope shalbe miserie and sorow of mynde.

C The .xii. Chapter.

Job sheweth his parents declared the myght and power of God.

S Job answered, and sayd: Then I (no doute) ye are the men alone, & wysdome shall perishe with you.
But I haue vnderstandyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yee, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of hys neyghboure: the godly and innocent man is laughed to scorn. Godly-nes is a lyght bespyde in heres of the re-pche, and is set for them to stamble vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealth & prosperite: and they that maliciously medle agaynst God, dwell without care, in those thynges that God hath geuen repchely with hys hande.

As for the cattell, and they shall infourme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the. What the increace of the earth, and it shall shewe the. What the spylers of the see, ad they shall certifie y. What is he, but he knoweth that the hande of the Lorde made all these?
* In whose hande is the soule of every liuyng thyng, and the birth of the flesh of all men.
* I haue not the eares pleasure in bering, and the mouth in tastyng the thyng that it eateth: * Amonge olde perlonnes there is wysdome, and in age is vnderstandyng. Yee, with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hath counsell and forknowledge. Reholde, If he brake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? * If he shut a thyng, who will open it? Behold, yf he withold y waters, they drye vp. If he lee them go, they be-strove the erth. Wilt thou be stronger & wyf-dome: he knoweth both the discauer & hym that is discaued.

He carrieth awaye the wysme, as it were a spolie, and byngeth the iudges oute of theyz wittes. He taketh awaye the subiects of the people from their kinges, and gyrdeth theyz loynes with a bonde. He ledeyth awaye the grate mern into captyvte, and turneth the myghty vplyde downe. * He taketh the wrepte from out of the mouth, and disapowneth the aged of theyz reason. He poureth the confusion vpon pyppes, and comforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke: what lyeth by in darcknes, he declared it openly: and the deep shadowe of death byngeth he to lyght. He both increaseth the people, ad destroeyeth them. He maketh them to mul-typle, and byneth them a waye. He chaun-geth the herde of them that rule the people of the erthe, and disapownteth them: so that they go wanderyng out of the waye, and grope in the darcke without lyght: he ma-keth the also to stacher to and fro lyke byz-chen men.

Job sheweth his friends with theyr alme expences, and conuincyng theyz.

Let all thys haue I sene with myne eye, heard with myne ear, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that same do I knowe also, neither am I inferior vnto you. Renerthelike, I talke with the almyghtye, and my desire is to comen with God. As for you, ye are woekemasters of lyes, and vnproufable. * Whilicpains all together. Would God ye kepte your tongue, for then myght ye be taken for wyle men. Now heare my chydying, and ponde the sentence of my lippes. Do ye speake iniquite against God, and talke agaynst hym with discreat? Will ye not accepte the person of hym? Or will ye contende with God? Shall that helpe you, whe he calleth you to reckninge, for as one man mocketh another, so do ye mocke hym. I thinke ynnuysly you, and reprove you, yep do secretly accept any persone. Shal he not make you a scraped, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terrible fence fall vpon you? Poure remembrance is lyke vnto a sparker, and your bodyes lyke the claye. Holde your tōges for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorow shall be lesse. Wherfore do I beare my selfe in my teeth, * and put my soule in myne handes? Lo, though he slaye me, yet will I put my trust in hym. But * I will reprove myne a wile waynes in his sight, he shall make me whole: and there maye no pproctie come before hym. Hearc my wordes, and ponde my sayenges with your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe y I shall be founde eyghtrous. What is he, that wil go to lawe with me? What hym come that I maye nowe holde my tongue, and dye. Renerthelike, graunte me two thynges, and then will I not hyde my selfe from the.

Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearful drede of y, make me a scraped. And then call me, & I wil answer: or els, let me speake, & ad geue me thou an answer. How many are my myscodes & synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences: Wherfore hydest thou thy face, & holdest me for thyne enemye? Wilste thou be so cruel and extreme vnto a flying leafe, & do folowe vpo dyce trouble: for thouapest sharply to my charge, and punysshest me * for the synnes of my youth. And thou putttest my feet also in the stocks: and holdest narrowly vnto all my pathes, and marchest the steppes of my feet: where as I (not without anpynge) must come: sume lyke as a foule carion, & as a cloth that is mofbraten.

Job despayeth the life of man, and propheseth of the resurrection. How comforteth the good, yll they esteeme that they loke for.

Man that is boine of woman, hath I but a thort pme to lyue, and is full of miserie. He cometh vp and is cutt downe lyke a flower. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Wouldest thou open thine eyes vpo soche one, and bypunge me in thy iudgement? Who can make cleane, that cometh of an vncleane thyng? No body. * The dayes of man surely are determyned, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his monethes, whiche he can not go beyonde. Goo from hym, that he maye rest: * a lyte; vntyll his daye come: which he loaketh for, lyke as an bypynge doth.

If a tre be cutt downe, there is some hope yet, that it will sproute, and quite forth the bianches agayne. For though the rote of it be woren olde, and the stock therof be dead in the ground, yet when it getteth the sent of water, it will budde, and bypunge forth bowes, lyke as a tre that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed a waye, what becometh of hym? The floudes when they be daped up, and the spuers when they be empty, are filled agayne thoroze the flowynge waters of the see: but when man slepeth, he retyrth not agayne, (of hys awne strength) * vntyll the heauen perishe: he shall not wake by nyte rpe out of hys slepe. O that thou woldest kepe me, and hede me in the bell, vntyll thy wrath were stilled: and to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou myghtest remember me. Ad aye a dead man put agayne. * All the dayes of my lyfe will I waite tyll, tyll my chaingynge shall come. Thou shalt call me, and I shall answer the: * despyse not thou the woyle of thine a wile handes.

For now thou nombrest all my goings, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. Hysiquite is sealed vpo, as it were in a bagg but be mercifull vnto my wickednesse. De mountaynes fall a waye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of theyr place, the waters pearle thoroze the very stones by lytle and lytle, the floudes wylthe a waye y granell and carth. And destroyest thou the hope of man: Thou pryncipalst tyll agaynst him, so that he passeth a waye: thou chaugest hys estate, and putttest hym from the. And whe- ther hys chyldren come to woithypp or no, he cannot tell. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, hys flesh must haue traunple, and while the soule is in hym, he must be in sorowe.

Elijahs reuerbereth Job because he afterbeith myseuse and punes to hym selfe. He deserveth the curse that shall be in the wynde, reuenging Job to be one of that nombre.

1 Then answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said: Shall a wise mans answer be the secrecy of the wynde, and fill any mans Belly as it were with the wynde of the east? Shall he reprove wth a word, that is nothing worth: and speake the thynges, which can do no good? Is for shame, thou hast sett it aspre, eke woldst thou not make so many wyndes before God: but thy wylfulness reacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftye tongue. Thyne awne mouth condemneth the, and not I: per, thine awne lippes shapen an answer agaynst the. Art thou the fyrste man, that ever was bozne? Or, wast thou made before the hylls: hast thou hearde the secreete counsell of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the: What knowest thou, þ we knowe not? And what understandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men, per, for as haue luyed longer then thy father.

Thynerketh thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God? with the is a lyeinge word. Why doest thou here to bewteche the? And wherfore wynerketh thou with thyne eyes, that thy mynde is to put by agaynst God, and lettest such wordes go oute of thy mouth: What is man, þ he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be righteous? * Behold, he doth not trust hys sapnetes: per, the verp heauens are not cleane in hys syght. Howe much more then an abhominable and vyle man, which dynckerly wicheidnesse lyke water? I wyl tell the, heare me: and I wyl shewe the that I haue seue: which wyl men haue tolde, and hath not bene hyd from theire fathers: vnto whom onely the earthe was geuen, and no stranger went amonge them.

* Smt. liti. b
The * vngodly forsooth all the dayes of hys lyfe as it were a woman with a childe, and the nombre of a tymeantes peares is unknowen. A fearfull sounde is eue in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered oute of darchenes, for the swearde is alwaye before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get his luying, he seeth plainly, that the daye of darchenesse is at hande. Howe and carefulnesse wyl make hym asprad, and compass hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with hys hoost ready to the batayll. For he hath stretched out hys haunde agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghty, he runneth proudly vpon hym, and with a stiff necke fygtheth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth hys face with fatnesse, and maketh hys body well luyng. Therfore shall hys dwellinge be in desolate cyties, and in houles which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be riche, neither shall hys substaunce continue, necease vpon earth. He shall neuer come oute of darchenesse, the flame shall drye vp hys braunches: with the blast of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vayne, and yet he is oute of the wyne, and vayne shall be hys recompence.

He shall perishe, afore hys tyme be wone out, and hys braunche shall not be grene. He shall be plincht of as an untymely grape fro the vyne, a shall lett his house fall, as the olpue doth. For the congregacyon of ypocrites shall be desolate and vnfirmitull, and þ fyre shall consume þ houses of such as are greedy to receaue giftes. He concealeth transgression, and deneth vayne, and the yz bodye byngeth forth blycate.

1 Ob answered, and sayde: I haue 2 lost tyme: hearde such thynges.

¶ Miserable gentes of comfort are ye, all the soite of you. Shall not vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet any more to saye? I cande speake, as þe do also. But wold God, that youre soule were in my soiles strade: then shuld I heape by wordes agaynst you, and shoke my heade at you. I shuld comforte you with my mouth, and relesse youre payne with the talking of my lippes. What shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorow wylle cease: and though I tolde my tonge, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath sente me aduersite, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon. And that thou hast spiled me with wynerkles, my flesh is recozde, and my leane flesh is seth by agaynst me, and beareth wyntnesse agaynst me. He is angrie at me, he hateth me and gnasheth vpon me with hys teth. Myne enemye shoulde vpon me with hys eyes.

¶ They haue opened thei mouthes wy de vpon me as myneten me vpon þ cheke despitfully, they gather thei felus together agaynst me. God hath put me in prease with the vngodly, a deliuered me into the handes of the wyched. I was in wealthe, but he hath brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the neck, he hath rent me, and lett me as a marck for hym to lye. Hys archers compass me rounde rounde aboute: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. he hath gūte me one wound vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my lapine, & lye with my heare in the dust.

My face is swollen with weppinge, and in myne eyes is the shadow of death. howbeit, there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. My mouth coulde not thou nupbloude, and lee my cypenge lynde not rowme. For so, my witnesse is in heauen: & he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth: & my frendes geue me many wordes, to scorne, and in myne eye pouerth out teares vnto God. That a body might pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my peares is come, and the waye that I must goe is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

Job seeth that hee consumed awaye, and yett doth presently abyde it.

I My flesh sticketh, my dayes are thozened. I am harde at deathes doore. Forwarde men are wme, and in myne eye: must continue in the bitteresse of them. He hurt me, and loke out one to be my suertie in thy light, whnt is he that knoweth who wilt promise for me: for thou hast withheld their brethes from vnderstandynge, therefore shalt thou not sette them vpon hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his wone children spende it. He hath made me as it were a bywyde of the people: where as afore, I was the people's ioye. Myne eye is dymme, for very heynesse, & all my strength is become like a shadow. Eternous me therefore shall well consyre this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the pproccre.

C The righteous also will kepe hys waie, and he that hath cleane handes, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence: I praye you, seynge I cannot fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my counsellis and thoughtes of my hart are vanysched awaye chaunginge the night into daye, and y light into darcknes. Though I tary neuer so much, yett the graine is in my boult, and I haue made my bed in the darcke. I call corrupcion my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my sister. What helpeth then my longe taryenge: Or, who hath consydered the thynges, that I loke for: All that I haue, shall goe downe into the pytt, and lye with me in the dust.

Job also relecteth the paynes of the vnfaithfull and wythp.

Hen answered Salbad the Sathir, and sayde: when wylt thou make an ende of youre wordes: Marke well, and then we wylt spake. Wherfore are we counted as bestles, & reputed to vyle in your sight: he destroyed him selfe with his anger: Shall the earth be for taken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the: Per, the light of the vngodly shall be put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The light shall be darcke in his dwelling, and his candle shall be put out with him. his presumptuous goings are kepte in, and his wane counsell shall cast him downe. For his fete are taken as it were in the nett, and he is at his wites ende. his fote shall be holden in the snare, and it shall catch them that be thyrst of bloude: The snare is layd for him in the grounde, ad a pyfall in the waye.

Fearfullnesse shall make him afraied on euery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. hunger shall be his strength: myfortune shall hange vpon him. he shall cate the strength of his awne flayne, eue y first borne of death shall cate his strength. his hope shall be coted out of his dwellinge, very feruile shall bringe him to the kyng. Other men shall dwell in his house: but shall be none of his) and bymstone shall be scattered vpon his habitacion. his rotes shall be dreyd by veneth, and aboue shall his branch be cutt downe. his remembrance shall perlysh from y earth, and he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall dyspse him from y light into darcknesse, and cast him cleane out of the worlde. he shall neither haue chyldre no: kynfolckes amonge his people, no, ner any posterite in his dwellings. They that come after hym, shall be astonied at his daye, and they that go before, shall be afraied. Such are now the dwellinges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym y knoweth not God.

Job receyved hymselfe and greuous paines, & the prospereth of the gentill clarification.

Hen answered, and sayde: how longe wylt ye were my soule, and trouble me with wordes: Lo, I tarye: I haue ye repoyued me: and are not a thained, for to laugh me so to scorn: yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your felous agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked personne because of the thame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violently and hath compased me aboute with his nette. If I coplayne of the violer y is done vnto me, I cannot be herbe. And yf I crye, there is no on euery hyde, and I am bidone: My hope pluckt by þe roote. My wrath is kindled agaynst me: he taketh me, as though I were hys enemy.

16 ¶ My men of warre came together, which made their waye ouer me, and beseged my dwellinge rounde aboute. * He hath put my brethren farre awaye from me, and soch as were of myne acquaintance, are become strangers vnto me. * Myne auncle kyn-folkes haue forsake me, and my frendes ha-

¶ The xx. Chapter.

¶ Eliphaz sayth, that the wycked shall, the conuolse and the wycked shall haue a short ende.

1 ¶ When answered Shophar the Na-mathite, and sayde. For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why? my mynde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently herde thy checking and reproofe, therefore am I pur-posed to make answer after myne understandinge. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynnyng (euer sence þe creacion of man vpon earth) þe gladnes of the vi-gily hath bene thore, and that the roye of pyccities continued but the tryumphtinge of an eye? Though he be magnified vpon the heauē, so that his head reacheth vnto þe cloudes: yet at a turne he periseth for euer. In so much that they which haue sene hym, shall saye. Where is he? He shall vanishe as a drea-me, so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in þe nyght. So that the eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more sight of hym, and hys place shall knowe hym no more. ¶ Hys chyldren shall be fayne to agree with the poore, and his handers shall restore them their goodes.

2 ¶ His ponyt his bones are full of pleasures, but now shall it lye downe within him in þe earth. When wyckednesse, was sweete in his mouth, he hid it vnder hys tongue. That he knowed, þe wolde he not forsake, but he pate it close in his throte. The brende that he dyd cate, is turned to the popson of serpents, within his body. The eyes that he deuour-ed, shall be perchaunce agayne, for God shall draue them out of his bely, he shall liche the gull of serpentes, and the adders tongue shall slape hym: so that he shall no more se the cyuers and brokes of hony and butter. The thing that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not cate it vp.
Greate trauayle shall he make for cyphes, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, & not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, & not buylded them.
His bely coulde neuer be filled, therefore shall he perishe in hys conuolse onnesse. There shall none of hys meates be left behinde, therefore shall no man loke for hys prosperite. Whan he had plente of the cyphes, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

3 ¶ For though the wycked haue neuer somuch to fyl his bely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to ragyne ouer him: so that yf he fle the pzoweapens, he shall be shot w the stele bowe.
The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyer, & a glysterng spearward shalowe the gull of him, hence shall come vpon hym.
There shall no darcknes be able to hyde hym.
An vnquybled spee shall consume him, and loke what remoueth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The distance that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and perye the in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the pzoeyon that the wycked man shall haue of God, and the beryng that he maye loke for of God. ¶ Because of his wordes.

C The xxij. Chapter.

¶ Job receiveth the prosperitie of the wyched, & after theye becomen godfaynfull and blesyd.

IN answer, and sayde: I heare my wordes, and that thyltamp co-wort of pou. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, & then laugh my wordes to scorn. * (ye shall see you.) Is it for manns sake that I make thes disputation?
 Which yf it were so, shulde not my sprete be then in foz trouble? Wherke me well, and be abashed, and laye poure hand vpon poure mouth. For when I consyder my selfe, I am nshayed, and my fleshe is snypeten with feare. * Wherfore do wyched melyne in healt and prosperite, come to thes olde age, and increase in ryches? Their chyldren lyue in thes sygh, and thes generacion befoze thes eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, and the rodd of God doth not snype them. Their bullocke gendzeth, and that not out of tyme: theye cowe calueth, and is not unfrutefull.

They sende forth their childzen by floc-kes, and their sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare with them tabyettes and harpes, and haue instrumetes of musycke at their pleasure. They spede their dayes in welthyngne: but tobenly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowlege of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghy, that we shulde serue hym?
 And what profyte shuld we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly.
 How oft shall the cable of the wyched be put out: how oft shall the cable of the destruction vpon them? What forowe shal God geue them for their parte in hys wryth: yee, they shall be cut as haye befoze the wynde, & as chaffe that the fozowe carpeeth awaye.

And though God saue their childzen from such forowe, yet will he so rewarde the sel-ues, yf they shall knowe it. Their awne destruction and misery shall theye with their eyes, & dzycke of the fearfull wryth of the Almyghy. For what careth he what become of his household after hys deathe, when yf nombe of his monettes is cut thozt: In as much then as God hath the hest power of all, who can teach him eny knowlege? One dyeth now when he is myghty and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperite: euen when his bowels are at the fastest, and hys bones full of maner. Another dyeth in forowe & heminesse, and neuer had good dayes. They shall slepe baly a lytle in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Beholde, I knowe what ye thinke, yee, and the sorlyte that ye praye agaynst me. For ye saye: Where is the princes palace? and where is the dwellinge of the vngodly: haue ye not asked them yf go by the waye? Doubtles ye cannot deirpe their tokens, that * the wicked is kepte vnto to the daye of destruction, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth to the daye of wryth. Who darre reponne him for hys wape to hys face? Who will rewarde him for the vngaciousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwell among the heape of the ded. Then shall he be sayne to be buried among the stones of the pyapne.

 All men also must folowe him, and there are innumerable gone befoze him. How bayne then is the comfort that ye geue me? Doth not falsche remaine in all poure answers?

¶ Eliphaz receiveth the 3 of his brethren's answers.

Eliphaz the Temanite gaue answer, and sayde: Wape a man be profitable vnto God, as he that is wyle maye be profitable to hym selfe? Is it anye dauntage to the Almyghy that thou art egypteous?
 Or shall it profyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes perfect? Is he afrayed to reponne the, & to steepe forth with the into iudgment? Is not thy wickednesse greace, and thyn vngacious dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for naught, & robbed the naked of their clothinge: To soche as were werry, hast ygeuen no water to drynke, & hast withdrawn byd from the hungrye: Shulde soch one the as with violence, wrong & opprellio: doing all thyng of partialite, and bawning respect of personnes, dwell in the lande: Thou hast sent wyddowes awaye emptye & oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore art thou compassed aboute with snarcs on euery syde, & suddenlye vered with feare. Shuldest thou then be no darchenesse?
 Shuldest not the water floude runne ouer yf?
 Now * because that God is hyer then yf hea-uens, and because thou seest that the starres are to hope, wilt thou therfore saye: Tylke, how shulde God knowe? Doth his domynye reache beyonde the clowdes? Enly, the cloudes couer him that he maye not se, & he dwelleth aboue heauen. Wolt not thou hepe the olde wape, that vayne me haue gone: which were cut downe out of tyme, & whose foun-dacyon was as a runnyng water, which laped vnto God: go from vs, and what byd the Almyghy with them: he spyled thes houses with good thynges. But the counsell of the vngodly is farr from me. The cryghtious sawe it and were glad, and the innocet laughed the to scorn. Is oure increase hewe downe? Is for the remnant of them, the fyze hath consumed it.

Therfore reconcile the vnto God, and be countt, so shall all thynges prospeere with the ryght

the cloude fro my face.

Onyberlinge then that there is A no tyme hid from the Almightye, how happeneth it, that they which knowe hym, do not regard his dayes? For some men there be, that * remove other mens lande-marks: that robbe them of their cattell, and kepe the same for theyr awne: that * dygne a waye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wyldebeestes ore for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, and oppresse the simple of the wylde together. Beholde, euen as the wylde asses in y desert goe they forth to their wyke, and ryse by tymes to spoyle: yee y very wylbernelle minstreth foode for their chyldre. They reape the corne felde that is not their awne: and let the vyne-parde of the vngodly alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, havinge no clothes to couer them and to kepe them from colde: So that whē the snowes in the mountaynes haue rapyned vpon them, & they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rocks.

They spoyle y suckinge fatherlesse childe, and take the pledge fro the poore. In somuch that they let him go naked without clothing, and haue taken a waye the sheafe of the diligent. The poore are fayne to labour in their oyle milles, yee, and to trade in theyr wyne presses, and yet to suffer thys. The men of the cytie crieth vnto the Lorde with fying, * the foules of the flape also make theyr complaine: But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstandinge) are conuersant amonge them that abhoire the lycht: they knowe not hys waye, ner conspyue in his pathes. * Tymely in the moynynge do they arise, to murder the simple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stallynge.

Theyr eye of the aduonterer wynteth for the darcknesse, and sapeyth thus in him selfe: With, there shall no eye seme, and so he disgysteth his face. In y night season they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but will not knowe the lycht. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death cometh vpon them, and they go in horrible darcknesse. The vngodly is swifter then the water: their poison shalbe cursed in the earth, and he shal not beholde the waue of the vineyardes. What they (for the wickednesse which they haue done) were drownded to the bell, I see, he maketh my hearte soft: and seynge that he is Almyghty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gett out of darckenesse, neither hath he couered ryght well. Receaue the lawe at his mouth, and lape vp his wordes in thyne herte. For * yf thou wilt turne to the Almightye, thou shalt stode fast, and put all vnrighteousnesse from thy dwellynge: Thou shalt make golde as plentifull as the dust, and the golde of Ophir as the spynes of the pures. Yee, Almightye God hys awne selfe shalbe thy defence, and thou shalt haue plentye of spure. Then shalt thou haue thy desire in the Almightye, & lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promysse. Then, loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prosper with the, and the lycht shall shyne in the wayes. For * who so humblyeth hym selfe, him shall he set vp: & who so lokech meely, shalbe blessed. If thou be innocent thou shalt deliuer the counter because of the vnglytynesse of thyne bandes.

¶ I answered, and sayde: My sayynge is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hande heuy because of my groynynge. What I myghte se him, and synde hym: What I myghte come before his seate, to plete my cause before him, and to spyl my mouth with arguments. What I myghte knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: & that I myghte vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he plete agaynst me with his great power and strenght? No, but he wyl make me the ströger. He that is iust, shall entre disputation with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. Beholde, though I go before, I synde him: If I come behynde, I can gett no knowledg of him: If I go on the left syde where he doth hys wycke, I cannot atteyne vnto hym. I gayne, yf I go on the ryght syde, he hydeh hym selfe, that I cannot se him. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: and * trespeth me as the golde in the fyre.

¶ I saye both kepe his path, his hye waye haue I holden, and will not go out of it. I will not forsake the commandment of his lippes, but loke what he charged me with his mouth, that haue I shewt vp in my herte. He is ityll at one popnet, and who wyl turne him back: he doth as him listeth, and bingeth to passe what he wyl. He performeth the thyng that is appoynted for me, & many such thynges doth he. This is y cause that I shynke at his presence, so that when I conspyre hym, I am afraied of him. For in somuch as he is God, he maketh my hearte soft: and seynge that he is Almyghty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gett out of darckenesse, neither hath he couered lyme before God.

Athen answered Baldad the Sulhite, and sayde. Is there power and feare with him above, that maketh peace, setting in his hyghnesse, whose men of war-re are innumerable, and whose lighteneth ouer all. But how maye a mā compare vnto God? He is mistyke: How can he be cleane, that is bozne of a woman? Beholde, the Doone synners nothinge in comparison to him. And the scarres are vncleane in his sight.
How moche more then man, that is but cor-Athen answered, and sayde. Whom hast thou helpe? him that is wout strenght: what comfote geueth thou vnto hym that hath no strenght? Where is the counsell y thou shouldest geue him, which hath no wyf-dome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryght lyuynge. To whom hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the beth to come out of thy mouth? Are not deed thinges happen vnder the waters: & thinges by the waters syde? Hell is naked before him, and the very destruction it selfe cannot be hyd out of his syght. He stretcheth out the north ouer the emptie, and hangeth the earth vpon nothing. He hyndeth the * waters in his cloudes, and the cloude is not broken vnder the.

He holdeth back his stole, that it cannot be sene, and spredeth his cloude before it.

taine boundes, vntill the dawe & nyght come ¶ Job sheweth that the wisdom of Job is vnderstandable.

I here is a place where silver is brought out of, and where golde is tried * where yron is dygged out of the ground, and stones resolu'd to me-tall. The darkenes shall once come to an ende, he can seeke out the grounde of all thin-ges: the stones, the darcke, ad the shadow of death. With the ryuer of water parteth he a funder the strange people, & knowe no good neyghbour heab: soch as are rude, vnma-nerly and bofull ours. he byingeth foode out of the erth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. ¶ There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane Sappirs, and where the clottes of the earth are golde. There is a wape also that the byzdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hath sene: wherein the lions whelpes walke not, and where no lion commeth. ¶ There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, ad onerthroweth the mountaines. Waters flowe out of the rockes, and loke what is pleiaunt, his eye seyth it. Out of dyoppes byingeth he greates flounders together, and the thinge that is hyd byingeth he to light. how commeth a man then by wis-dome? ¶ Where is the place that men fynde vnderstanding: wercely no man can tell how worthy a thinge he is, nether he is founde in the lande of them that lyue. ¶ The depe saith: he is not with me. The feir saith: he is not not with me. ¶ She can not be gotten for: (for meall price) golde, nether maye the price of her be bought with eny syluer. No wedges of golde of dyphir, no pfections Onix stones, no Sappirs maye be compared vnto her. No, nether golde ner chistall, nether swete odours ner golden

¶ Job bewaileth of the pynfulnes of the time past, finally renounceth his friends of iustice, because they sayde that Job suffered wronge to bys detractinge.

S Job proceeded and went forth in his communicacion, sayenge.
 ¶ That I were as I was in y^e monethes by past, and in the dayes when God persecuted me: when his light shyn-ned vpon my head: when I wente after the same lycht and shynynge, euen thowoe the darknesse. As it stode with me when I was yonge: when God prospered my house: when the Almighty was yet with me: when my chyldren stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and whe the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thowoe the cryte vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayne in the streete: when the yonge men (as soone as they sawe me) hid them selues, and when they aged arose, and stode by vnto me, when the wyntes left of their talkinge, and layed their hande to their mouth: whe the myghthy kepte still their voyce, and when their tonge cleued to the rofe of their mouthe. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when they cried, and so did I the fatherlesse and him that had none to holde him. he that shulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good wyorde, and the wyde dowes herte playfed me. And why? ¶ I put vpon me ryghte outnes, which couered me as a garment, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore: and when I knewe not the cause, I sought it out diligently. I bane the chawes of the vnyghteous man, and plucketh the spoule out of his thide.

¶ Therefore, I thought verely that I shuld haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shulde haue bene as many as the sondes of ter syde, and the braye laye vpon my coine.

 ¶ Ynne honour encreased moze and moze, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hand.
 ¶ Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with sylence they rayed for my coun-cell. ¶ If I had spokē, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well takē amonge them. They wnted for me as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as y^e grounde

 I laughed, they knewe well it was not ear-

C The xxx. Chapter.

Of the grete dyspynges of men and curtes of God that Job describeth.

BE know they that are pouger then I, haue me in dyspylon: yee, euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thoughte to haue set with the dogges of my catell. The power & strength of their handes might do me no good: for the tyme is but lost among them. For very misery and hunger, they liden in to the wyldrenesse horrible & waiste, pluckinge vp nettels amonge the bulshes, and the Juniper rottes for their meate. And when they were dyspylled forth, me cryed after them, as it had bene nether a thefe. Thei dwelling was besyde foule brookes, yee, in the cannes and demes of the earth. Amonge the bulshes wente they a-boute crying, and vnder the thornes they gathered them frutes together. They were the chyldren of foolles and vplaines, which are deceitfull. Job. cxx. v. 1.

They doted out of the wolde. * Now am I their sonne, and am become their teakinge stock: they abhorre me, and fflye farre fro me, and shapne my face with spelle. For y Lord hath loosed the strength of my body, and brought me lowe. The byrde haue they cast out of my syght. Upon my right hande eple the pouge men agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete, treadinge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wolde destroye. My pathes haue they cleane murthered. It was so easy for them to do me harme, that they needed no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakeinge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfullnesse is turned agaynst me.

C Myne honoure banished awaye moze woefully then the wynde, and my prosperite departed hence, lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde powred full of heurynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearled thorow, in the night season, and my synewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorow is my garment chaunged: and accordyng to the diuersite of heuynes am I gyrded with my coate. he hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like asnes and dust. Wher I crye vnto the, thou dost not heare me, a though I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, and with thy violent hande thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou diddest set me vp on hie, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou gyven me a very soxe fall. Surely I am, that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death, and sende to the lodging that is due vnto all me luyng. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed already: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Did not I wepe with him that was in trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuer thelesse, where as I looked for good, euell happened vnto me: and where as I waited for light, there came darke nesse. My bowles sette within me, & take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Gredely and lowly came I in, yee, and without any displeasure: I stood vpon the congregation, and communed with them. Now, I am a companion of dyablon, and a fellowe of Estriches. My slippne vpon me is turned to black, and my bones are brest with heate: my harpe is turned to sorow, and my pype to wepyng.

C The xxxi. Chapter.

Of Job recerth the innocencye of hys purgynge, and nombis of hys vertues.

HADE a couenaunt with me I saye * y I wolde not lye vpon a damell. For how great a porcyon shall I haue of God: & what inheritaunce from the almyghty on hie. As for the vngodly and he that toyneyth him selfe to the company of wycked doers, shall not destruction and misery come vpon him: * Woth not he se my wyces, and tell all my goynges? If I haue walked in vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceance: let me be weyed in an eue balace, that God may se my innocency. * If so be that I haue witholden mine eye out of the right waye, and yf my hert hath folowed mine eye sight: If I haue flained or defiled my handes: then shall I sowe, and another eate, yee, my generation shal posterite shall be cleane rotted out. If my hert hath lusted after my neighboures wyffe, or yf I haue layde wyfte at his doore: When shal I let my wyffe grinde vnto me: ther ma and let other me lye with her. * For this is a wickednesse and synne, that is woorthy to be punished, yee, a fere that vererly shalbe consumed, and rote out all my substaunce. Did I neuer thinke to come to do right vnto my seruantes and maydens, when they had enymater agaynst me? But I sence that God will spere in iudgment, what shall I do? And for so much as he will needs visite me, what answer shall I geue him: he that hath shamed me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also: were we not both shapen like in oure mothers bodies? When the poore desired any thinge at me, haue I denied it them: haue I caused the widow to stande waitinge for me in bayne: haue I eat of my porcion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me: for mercy grew vnto me fro my yowthe, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perille thorow nakednesse and want of clothinge? Or any poore ma for lack of framynt, whose

Now taried Elisha, till they had ended the communication with Job, for why, they were elder then he. So when Elisha the sonne of Sarachel the Bullyste sawe, that these thye men were not able to make Job answer, he was discontent: Elisha the sonne of Sarachel the Bullyste answered hym selfe, and sayde: * Consideringe, that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayed, and durst not shew forth my mynde, for I thought thus within my selfe. Great men are not all waye wysse, neither doth every aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therefore will I speake also (hence me) and I will shewe you also myne vnderstandinge. for when I had wayted till ye made an ende of youre talkyng, and hearde youre wysdome, what arguments ye made in youre communication: yee, when I had diligently pondered what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coude make answer vnto his wordes: left ye shulde saye. We haue founde out wysdome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. he hath not spoken vnto me, and I will not answer hym as ye haue done (for they were to be rebuked, that they coude not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in to moche as ye will not speake, standyng still lyke dom: men, and makyng no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to haue hym an answer, and to shewe him my meenyng: for I am full of wordes, and the spete that is within me, compelleth me.

foze punishment vpon hys bones, to that hys lype maye awaye wpyth no byed, and his

¶ He sheweth howe vngodlynesse prouoketh to God but to man.

Jhu spake mozeouer, & sayde: Thyngest thou it right, that thou sayest: I am righteous before God: For thou sayest: What advantage will it be vnto the, and what profit shal I haue of my synne. Therefore will I geue answer vnto the, and to thy companions with the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consider the cloudes, whyped are hyer then thou. If thou hast sinned, what hast thou done against him? If thine offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be righteous what geueth thou him: what will he receaue of thy hand? Of soche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greater try and complaine made by them that are oppressed with violence, yee, euery man capieth vnto the crueltie of tyrannues. For soche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me, & that geueth vs occasion to praple him in y^e night: Whych geueth vs more vnderstanding then he doth the beastes of the earth, & cracheth vs more then he doth the sonnes of heauen.

If any such complaine, no man generally answer, and that because of the wickednesse of proude tyrannues. But yf a man call vpon God, doth not he heare him: doth not the almyghty accept his cryer? When thou speakest then, whide not he pardon the, yf thou open the selfe before hym, and put thy trust in hym? Then vltch he no violence in hys wrath, neither hath he pleasure in carpinge depe iniquities. Therefore doth Job open hys mouth but in vayne, and folpshp doth he make so many wordes.

Lihu proceeded forth in hys talking, and sayd: holde the still a litle, & I shall shewe y^e. What I haue yet to speake on Goddes behalf. I will open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding, & proue my mater righteous. And truly, my wordes shall not be vayne, se yuge he is with the: that is perfect in knowledge: behold, the great God calterly awake no man, for he him selfe is myghty in power and wyf soone.

As for the vngodly, he shall not perserue hym, but shall helpe the poore to their right. he shall turne hys eyes awaye fro the righteous, but as lynges shall they be in theye throne, he shall stablysh them for euer, & they shall be reatren. But yf they be layed in prison and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyl he helpe them theye woicke, and the synners wher with they haue vsed cruell violence.

He wyl punishynge and nurtyng of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theye wyckednesse, & to amende. * If they now wyl take heed to adserue him, they shall were out theye dayes in prosperite, and theye yeares in pleasure and ioye. But yf they wyl not berche, they shall go thorow the swearde, and percyth of euere they be aware. As for soch as be fayned ypoctites, they shall heape vnto wrath for them selues: for theye call not vpon hym, though they be hys persons. And shall theye soule perple in folpshnesse, & theye lyfe shall be condemed amonge the fornicatours. The poore shall be deliuered out of his affliction, & a rōde them in the care wher they be in trouble. Ene so shall he kepe the yf thou wylt be content: from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneath: yf thou wylt holde y^e gyrete, he shall Epil thy table with plenteousnesse.

Acuerthelesse, thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yee, euen soche a iudgement and sentence wait thou suffer.

For then shall not thy cause be spilled with cruelty, nor perished with many griefes. Thinkest thou, that he will regarde thy riches? he shall not care for golde, nor for all them that excell in strength. How long will thou p[er]sue, till there come a night for thee, to set other people thy scale. But beware that thou euen not as yet to wickednesse and synne, which bitteth to thou hast chosen more the mekenesse. Behold, God is of a mightie hye power: Where is there suche a gyde as lawe geue as he: who will reprove hym of hys wyse: who will saie vnto him: thou hast done wrong?

D Consider how greate and excellent hys voyces be, whom all men loue and prapier, wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but in farr of. Behold, to grate is God, that he passeeth oure knowledge, neither are we able to come to the experience of hys p[er]cences. * he turneth the water to small dropes, he dryneth hys cloudes together for rayne, so p[er] they poure downe and droppe vpon men. he can sp[er]de out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cause hys l[igh]t to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of y[er]see. By these thinges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them abondance of meate. W[hen] the cloudes be hyed the l[igh]t, and at hys commaundement it cometh agayne. The r[ai]nyng v[er]y therof sheweth he to hys frendes & to the cattell.

And this, my heart is assuaged, and moued out of hys place. Hence then th[is] sounde of hys voyce, ad the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. he gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his l[igh]t reacheth vnto the ende of the world.

A roaring voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiesty geueth suche a thondre clappe, y[et] (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. Je geueth an horrible sounde, when God sendeth oute hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, whych we can not compare hende. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it fallth vpon the erth. As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediately the shewes haue theyr strength, and fall downe. he sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their awne voyces. The bestes crepe into theyr denes, and take theyr rest.

25 Out of the south cometh the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the breath of God, the frost cometh, and the waters are fered abroad. he maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour in geuyng moste n[ecess]e, & agayne with his l[igh]t he dryneth awaye the cloudes. he distibuteth also on euery sp[er]e, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out hys workes, that they maye do whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorow the whole world: whether it be to punish any lande, or to doo good vnto them, that feke hym.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stande still, & consider the wondrous workes of God. Art thou of counsell with God, when he doth these thinges? When he causeth y[er] l[igh]t to come forth of hys cloudes? Art thou of hys counsell when he sp[er]deth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of hys wyders: & how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is still thorow the south wynde? Hast thou helped hym to sp[er]de out the heauen, whych is to l[igh]t vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Canst thou what we shall saie vnto hym, for we are vnnit because of darcknesse. Shall it be tolde hym what I saie? Shuld a man speake, or shuld he kepte backe? For euery man seyth not the l[igh]t, that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes whych he cleareth when he maketh y[er] wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of y[er] south, but the people and honour of Gods feare cometh from God hym selfe. It is not we y[et] can fynde out the almightye: for in power, equite, and righteouslyte, he is hyer than can be expelld.

Let men therefore feare hym, for they shall no man se hym that is wise in his awne conceite.

Wheroe, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that strueth with Almightye, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue hym an answer? Job answered the Lorde, saying: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therefore wyl I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twise haue I spoken, but I wyl lase no moze.

Then answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the thowme, and sayde: * Gyde vp thy loynes now lyke a man, ad tell me the thinges that I will aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou cōdemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous? Is thy power then lyke the power of God? Wakerh thy voyce such a founde as hys both? cannot be moved:

his here is as hard as a stone, and as fast as the freybe that the smyth smytheth vpon. When he goeth the myghtye are afrayed, ad fear to troublet them. If any man draw out a sweerde at him, it shall not hurt him: there may nether feare, launcinge ner byst plate, abyde hym. he fetherth as much by a strawe as by yron, and as much by a rotten stocke as by hyale. he fetherth not a wape for hym that benderth the bowe: and as for spynge stones, he careth as much for stubble as for the. he counteth the darteres no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorn that shaketh the speare. he treadeth the gold in the myte lyke the charpe pottherdes. he maketh the depe to hople lyke a pot, and fetherth the see together lyke an oymment. he maketh a path to be sene after hym, the depe is bys walkynge place. vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. ¶ The xliij. Chapter.

When Job answered the Loyde, and sayde. * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought byd vnto þ. for who can kepe hys awne counsell so secrete, but it shalbe knowne: Therfore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges that are so hye, & passe myne vnderstanding. O hearken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answer vnto the thyng that I will aske þ. I haue geuen diligence vnto the, and now I se the wryth myne eyes. Wherefore, I geue myne awne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and ashes.

Now when the Loyde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Loyd sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thyre two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thynges that is ryght, lyke as my seruauit Job hath done.

Therfore, take you now seven oxen and seven rammes, and go to my seruauit Job, and * offre vp for pouce selfes a burnt offering: and my seruauit Job shall praye for you. hym wyll I accept, ad not deale wryth you after youre folythnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thynges wyth is ryght, lyke as my seruauit Job hath done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Shuhite & Sophar the Naamathite wote their waye, and byd accordyng as the Loyd commaunded them. * The Loyd also accepted the personne of Job, and the Loyde turned the captiuite of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: See, the Loyd gaue Job * twyse as much as he had afore.

And then came there vnto hym all hys brethren, all hys sisters, & all they that had bene of hys acquaintance afore, & byd eat & drab with him in his house, wondrynge at hym, and confortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Loyde had brought vpon hym. Euerie man also gaue hym a certayne some of money and a Jewell of golde.

And the Loyde made Job ryche then he was before: for he had fourtene ¶ shepe. vi. ¶ camels, a ¶ poulke of oxen, and a ¶ asses. He had seuen sonnes also & thye daughters. The fyrst daughter called he ¶ Jemima: the second ¶ Kezia, and the thirde ¶ Henhapuch. In all the land were no wemen so fayre, as the daughters of Job, and their father gaue them inheritance amonge their brethren. After this luyed Job an hundred and fourty yeres, so that he sawe * hys chyldren, & hys chyldrens chyldren into the fourth generacion.

And so Job dyed, beinge olde & of a perfect age.

DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

To hym that excellyth in Gethirh, a Psalme of Dauid.

The Lorde our gouernour, howe excellēt is thy name in all the world, thou that hast sett thy gloie aboue the heauens.
¶ Out of the mouth of very babes and sucklings hast thou ordeined strength because of thyne enemyes, that thou myghtest kill the enemye and the auenger. For I will confesse thy beautes, euen the woiche of thy fingers: the moone & the starres which thou hast ordeined. ¶ What is man, that thou art myndfull of hym: and the sonne of man, that thou visytest hym? Thou ma-dest hym lower then the aungels, to crowne hym with glory & worshippe. Thou ma-dest him to haue dominyon in the woiches of the handes: and & thou hast put all thynges in subiection vnder his feete. All the pee and oren, ye and the beastes of the felde. The fowles of the ayre, and the fyshes of the see, & whatsoeuer waldeyth thorow the parkes of the sees. O Lorde our gouernour, howe excellent is thy name in all the worlde.

CONFITEOR TIBI DOMINE.

To hym that excellyth vpon Akmuth Labben, a Psalme of Dauid.

I will geue thanks vnto þe, O Lorde with my whole herte, I will speake of all thy marvellous woiches. I will be glad, and reioyce in the, pec my son-ges will I make of thy name. O thou most hyest. While myne enemyes are broken backe, they shall fall, & perishe at thy presence. For thou hast mainteyned my ryghte & my cause: thou art sett in the throne that in-degeth ryght. Thou hast rebuked þe heyrthen, a deceptoure the vngodly, thou hast put out their name for euer euer. O thou enemye: destrucours are come to a perpetuall ende: euen as the cities which thou hast destroyed: their memoriaill is perished with the. But the Lorde shall endure for euer, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgement: for he shall iudge the world in ryghte conscience, and minister true iudgement vnto the people. The Lorde also shall be a defence for the oppressed & a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And they þe knowe thy name, will put their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) hast neuer saped the, that seke the. ¶ Psa. lxxv. & which dwellerh in Syon, shewe the people of bys doings. For when he maketh inquiring for bloud, he remembreth them: & forgetteth not the complaynte of the poore.

¶ Haue mercy vpon me (O Lorde) consider the trouble which I suffer of them that hate me, thou that testest me wth from the gates of death. That I may shewe all thy praies wth in the portes of the daughter of Syon, I will reioyce in thy saluacion.

The brethren are sunken downe in the pytte that they made: in the same nette which they bydd purpury, is their awne foot take.

that the brethren may knowe them selues to be but men. Selā.

¶ The x. Psalme.
VT DAVID DOMINI.

Why standest thou farre off, O Lord? a bydest thy face in that needfull tyme of trouble? The vngodly for his owne lust, doth persecute þe poore: let them be taken in the crafty & vniuerselle that they haue ymagined. For the vngodly hath made boalt of hys awne hertes despise, & speaketh good of þe courteous, who God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, neither is God in all his thoughtes. His wayes are all way greuous, thy iudgements are farre aboue out of his sight, & therefore despyeth he all his enemyes. For he hath sayed in his brest: Cuth I shall neuer be cast downe, they shall no harme happen vnto me. His mouth is full of cursyng, and delectate and fraude: vnder his tongue is vngodlynesse & vanite. He syreth lurkinges in þe thickest coyners of þe tree, a princely in his lurkinges denieth doth he murder þe innocent: his eyes are set agaynst þe poore. For he lyeth waitinge secretlye as a lyon, lurkinge he in his den: & he maye rauishe the poore. He doth ranshe the poore, whi he getteth him i to his nette. He sal-leth downe a hideth him selfe, that the congregeth of the poore maye fall in to þe habde of his captaynes. He hath sayed in his brest: Cuth, God hath forgottē, he bydest a waie his face, and he will neuer lete. Arise (O Lorde) God and syre with thine habde, forges not the poore. Wherefore shuldest thou we-

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

To the chaunter, A Psalm of Dauid.

The Lord put I my trust: howe saye ye then to my soule: that the chyldeyn * he as a byrde vpon your hyll? For so, the vngodly benche theyr bowe, and make ready theyr arrows wth in the bowe: that they maye pynely shote at them, which are true of hert. For they foundacionys wil be cast downe, and what hath the ryghteous done? * The Lord is in hys holy temple: the Lordes seat is in heauen: hys eyes conspyde: the poore: & hys eye lyddeth: the chyliden of men. The Lord aloweth the ryghteous: but the vngodly, and hym that despereth in wickednes, doth his soule adpoyre. Upon the vngodly he shall rapine sinners, fyre, and byrminstone, stone & tresp: thus shall be theyr portyon to byrnicke. For the ryghteous Lord toucheth ryghteousnes: hys countenance wil beholde the thyng that is iust.

SALVVM ME FAC DOMINE.

To him that excelletth vpon an instrument of cythar pynge: A Psalm of Dauid.

Help me Lord, for there is not one godly man left. For the faythfull are mynished from age the chyliden of men. They tolke of vanyte, euer one woth hys neyghboure, they do but flatter wth theyr lippes & byssenble in theyr double herte. The Lord shall rote out all disceitfull lippes, and the tonge that speaketh proude thynges. Whych haue lypde: wth oure tōge will we preuaple: we are theyr pought to speake, who is Lord ouer vs. Nowe for the comfortes troubles sake of the needyr, & because of the deape syghing of the poore, I will wpe (sayer) the Lord) and will helpe eueri one, from hym that swelleth agaynst hym, and will set the

at rest. The wordes of the Lord are pure wordes euf as the syluer, whych from earth is tryed and purifyed leuetyes in the fyre.

Thou shalt kepe them (O Lord) thou shalt preserue hym from thys generacyō for euer. The vngodly walke on euery fyde: whan they are craelled, the chyliden of men are put to rebulke.

EXAUDI DOMINE IVSTITIAM.
A prayer of David.

3 Care the right, O Lorde, cōfyde me in thy prayer, & broken vnto my prayer, that goeth not out of ofpaued lippes. Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: and let thine eyes looke vpon the thyng that is equall. * Thou hast proued & visited myne herte in the nyght season: yf haste teped me and shalt fynde no wickednesse in me: for I am vtruly purposed, p my mouth shall not offend. Because of mens workes that are done agaynst the wordes of thy lippes I haue kepte me from the wapes of the destroyer. O holde p by my goynge in thy pathes, p my fote stremes shalpe not.

I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalt heare me: encline thine eare to me, and herke vnto my wordes. Shewe thy maruelous louynge kyndnesse, thou part the fauour of them which put thei trust in the, from such as celsyth thy right hande. Itepe me: as the apple of an eye, hyde me: vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. Ite the vngodly p trouble me: mine enemies copalle me round about, to take a wape my soule. They are enclosed in thie a wone fatt: thie mouth speaketh proude thynges. They lye wapeynge in our waye on euery syde, turnynge their eyes downe to the groude. Ite as a lion that is greedy of hys praye, and as it were a lions whelp lurking in secrete places. * O p Lorde, disapoynte hym, and cast hym downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly which is as a swearde of thine.

From the men of thy hnde, O Lorde fro the men, I saye, and from the euill worlde, which haue their portion in thys life, whose belyes p spillt vnto thy hyd treasure. They haue children at their belyes: & leaue the reste of thei substance for thei babes. But as for me, I will be holde thy presence in righteounes: & when I awake vpon after thy iplacenes, I shall be satisfied with it.

C The xvij. psalme.
DILIGAM TE DOMINE.

To the chaunter of Dauid the seruaunt of the Lorde, which spake vnto the Lorde the wordes of thys song. (In the daye that the Lorde deliuered hym from the hande of all hys enemyes, and from the hande of Saul, and he sayde:

4 I will loue p, O Lorde, my strength. * The Lorde is my stony rock, & my defence, my saluour, my God, & my might, in whō I will trust: my buckler, yf home also of my saluacyō, and my refuge. * I will call vpon p Lorde, which is worthy to be prayed, so shall I be safe from myne enemyes. * The sowowes of death copalled me, & the ouerflowynge of vngodlynesse made me afraied. The paynes of hell came about me, the snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble will I call vpon the Lorde: & coplaine vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his: & (hoie) teple, & my coplaine shall come be fore him, it shall entre euen into hys eares. * The erth trembled & quaked, the very foundacions also of the hylls shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. There wert a smoke out in his presence: & a consuming fyre out of hys mouth, so p oacles were kindled at it. He bowed the heauens also, & came downe, and it was darcke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye: he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darcknes hys secrete place: hys paphion rounde aboute hym, with darcke water and thyche clowdes to coure hym. At the byghthe of hys ptesence hys clowdes remoued, hys stones and coales of fyre. The Lorde also rhoude out of the beauen, & the hest gaue hys thonder, hys stones, and coales of fyre.

He sent out his arrowes and scattered the, he cast forth lghthynge, & destroyed them.

The fpynges of waters were sente, & the foundations of the round worlde were discovered at thy chpyding. O Lorde, at the blastynge of the bierth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe fro the heghth to fetch me, & shall rale me out of many waters.

He shall deliuer me fro my strongest enemye, & fro the which hate me: for they are to myghth for me. They persecuted me in by daye of my trouble: but the Lorde was my upholder.

He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a fauour vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my righteous dealing: according to the clemens of my handes shall he recopense me.

Because I haue kept the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not forsaken wyckedye my God. For I haue an eye vnto all hys lawes: & wil not cast out hys commaundementes fro me.

I was also vncorrupte before him: and eschued myne aune wyckedures.

Therefore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my righteous dealing: and according vnto the clemens of my handes in hys eye sight.

With the holy thou shalt be holy, and w a perfecte man shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane: and with the frowarde thou shalt lerne frowardnes.

For thou shalt saue the people that are in aduersite, and shalt bypnde downe the hys lookes of the proude.

Thou also shalt lighte my candle: the Lorde my God shall make my darcknes to be light.

For in the I shall discover an host of men: and w the helpe of my God I shall leape ouer the wall.

The waie of God is an vndychyd waie

* 118. 12. b. the word of the Lorde also is tryed in the fye: he is the defender of all them that putt their trust in him.

* 118. 12. b. For who is God but the Lorde: or who hath any strength except the God? It is God y gyrdeth me w strength of warre, and maketh my waie perfecte.

* 118. 12. b. He teacheth myne handes to fyghe, & myne armes shall beate euen a bow of sterle.

He thou hast geuen me the defence of the saluacion: thy right hande also shall holde me vp, and thy loupnge correction shall make me grate.

He thou shalt make rowme prouough vnder me for to go, & my fete shalpe shall not slyde.

I will folowe me vpon myne enemies, & ouertake them: neyther wyl I turne agayne, tyll I haue destroyed them.

I will smyte the, & they shall not be able to stande: but shall vnder my fete. Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto the battayle, thou shalt throwe downe myne enemyes vnder me. Thou shalt made myne enemyes also to turne theyr backs vpon me, & I shall destroye the that hate me.

* They shall crye: but there shall be none to helpe them: yee, euen vnto the Lorde, shall they crye: but he shall not heare them.

I will beate them as small as the dust before the wynde: I will cast them out, as the claye in the stretes.

Thou shalt deliuer me fro the tryunges of the people: and thou shalt make me the head of the herthen.

A people whom I haue not knowe shall lerne me.

A stone as they heare of me, they shall abyre me: but the straunge chyldren shall discemible with me.

The straunge chyldren shall saye, and be afrayed out of theyr prynces.

The Lorde thyng: blessed be my strong helpe, and prynced be the God of my saluacion.

Euen the God which seeth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that deliuereth me from my on enemyes, and letted me vp above myne aduersaryes: thou shalt rpyde me from the wycked man.

* For this cause I will geue thanks vnto the, O Lorde, amonge the Gentyles, and syng playes vnto thy name.

harder at hande, and ther is none to helpe me.

Great oren are come aboute me, fast bulles of Israhel close me in on euery syde.

They gaze vpon me with theyr mouthes as it were a rampunge and roaringe lyon.

I am powred out lyke water, & all my bones are out of ioyne: my bert also in the myddest of my bodye is euen lyke the meltinge ware. My strength is dreyed vpon lyke a pot-therde, & my longe cleureth to my gounes: and thou shalt drynge me in the dust of death.

For (many) dogges are come aboute me, & the coucell of the wycked laye trageant me. They perced my handes and my fete, I maye tell all my bones, they ston-de flarynge and lookinge vpon me.

They parte my garmentes amonge the,
and cast lottes vpon my vesture. But be not y farre from me, O Lord: thou art my suc-course, haste the to helpe me. Deliuer my soule from the swarde, my dearyng from the power of the dogge. Sane me from the IVDICA ME DOMINE.

Of Dauid, (A psalme of Dauid, when he was exiled.)

BE thou my iudge, O Lord, for I haue walked innocently: my trust shall bene also in the Lord therefore shall I not fall. * Examine me, O Lord, & proue me: trye out my reyned and my heart. For thy louinge kindnesse is befoye mine eyes, & I will walke in thy trouth.
I haue not dwelt with vayne personnes, neither will I haue fellowship with the disceatfull. I haue hated the congregacion of the wicked, and will not spe amonge the vngodly. * I will walke my handes in innocence, O Lord, and to will I go to thyne aulter. That I maye heare the voyce of thankes geuyng, and tell of all thy wonder-ous workes. O Lord, I haue loued the ha-bitacion of thy house, & the place where thy-ne honoure dwelleth. Trust not vpon my soule with the synners, nor my lyfe with the bloudthirstie. In whose handes is wephednesse, & their right handes full of cystes.
But as for me I will walke innocently:
O deliuer me, and be mercifull vnto me.
My forte standeth right: I will praise the Lord in the congregacions.

Ch. xviij. Psalm.
DOMINVS ILLUMINATIO.

Of Dauid.

The Lord is my light and my sal-uacion: whom then shall I feare: the Lord is the strength of my lyfe: of whom then shall I be afrayed? When the wicked (even mine enemyes and my foes) came vpon me, to eate vpon my flesh, they shal-bledes fell. Though an host of men were layed agaynst me, yet shall not my heart be afrayed: and though there rose vpon warre a-gaynst me, yet will I put my trust in this.
* One thinge haue I desired of the Lord, which I will requyre: men that I maye dwell in the house of the Lord all the dayes of my lyfe: to beholde the fauour brewe of the Lord, and to vpright his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall hyde me in his tabernacle, pee in the secret place of his dwell-lynge shall he hyde me, and set me vpon a rocke of stone. And now shall he lyft vpon my head aboute mine enemyes rounde aboute me. Therefore will I offer in hym dwellynge, an oblation with great glad-nesse: I will synge and speake prayes vnto the Lord. Herken vnto my voyce, O Lord, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me, and heare me. My heart hath talked of the: shewe pe my face: thy face will I see. O hyde not thou thy face fro me, nor call thy seruant awaye in displeasure. Thou hast bene my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, O God of my sal-uacion. When my father and my mother forsake me, O Lord take the vpon. Teache me thy waye O Lord, & leade me the right waye, because of myne enemyes: Deliuer me not ouer into the will of mine aduer-saries, for there are false wytnesses cryen vpon agaynst me, and such as sweare wronge.

I shalbe betterlye haue saynted: but that I beleue verily to see the goodnesse of thy face in the lande of the lyuinge. Trust thou the Lordes leysure: he be stronge, and he shall conforte thyne heart, and put thou thy trust in the Lord.

AD TE DOMINE CLAMABO.

A Psalm of Dauid.

Mighte thyne no score of me, lest if thou make lyke them, thou hear-dest not. I become lyke them, that go downe into the pyrite. Hence the voyce of my disciple peticions, when I crye vnto the, when I holde vpon my handes toward the inercefate of thy holy temple. O plynke me not a waye: neither deuoce me with the vngodly and wicked doers: which speake frendly to their neyghbours, but vygaine myselve in their herres. Rewarde them accordinge to their dedes, and accordinge to thy wepche-nesse of their awie inuencions. Recompense them after the worke of their handes: pape them that they haue deserued. For they regarde not in their mynde the workes of the Lord, nee the operation of his handes: therefore shall he breake them downe, & not bryde them vpon. Displeas be the Lord, for he hath hearde the voyce of myne humble petitions. * The Lord is my strength & my shield: my heart hath trusted in him, & I am helped: therefore my hearte daunteth not fear, and in my songe will I praise hym. The Lord is their strength: and he is thy wholsome defense of his anointed. O Saue thy people, & geue thy blessing vnto thyne church: for canne: fede them, & set them vpon foot.

AFFECTU DOMINO.

A Psalm of Dauid: in the conuincement of the Blyng vnto the Lord: O ye myghtie: unto the Lord worshyppe & singe.

Geue the Lord the honour due vnto his name: worshyppe the Lord with holy wor-shyppe. * It is the Lord that commaundeth the waters: It is the glorious God that maketh the thonder: * it is the Lord that ruleth the see. The voyce of the Lord is myghtie in operation, the voyce of the Lord is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lord breaketh the ice. * Cedre trees: yee, the Lord breaketh the Ceders of Libanus.

He made them also to shyppe lyke a Casse: Libanus also, and Sion lyke a pouge in yncorne. The voyce of the Lord be drupeth the flames of fyre: the voyce

Of the Lorde, that he the wilderness, y^e the Lorde that he the wilderness of Cabod.

The voice of the Lorde maketh the hynde to hynde forth yonge & discovereth the thicke bushes: in his temple doth every man speake of his honour. The Lorde sytteth above the water founte, & the Lorde remaneth a hynde for ever. The Lorde shall geue strenght unto his people, the Lorde shall geue his people the blisynge of peace.

¶ The xxx. Psalm.

EXALTA. TE. DOMINE.

A Psalm and songe of the dedicacion of the house of Dauid.

I will magnifye þe, O Lorde, for thou hast set me up, & not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast healede me. Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, fro them that go downe to the ytte. Spryng prayes vnto the Lorde (O ye saintes of his) and geue thanks vnto him for a remembrance of his goodnesse. * For þys warth endureth but the twinkling of an eye, and in þys pleasure is lyfe: beynesse maye endure for a nyght, but hope cometh in the mornynge.

And in my psoferte, I sayde: I shall neuer be remoued: thou Lorde of thy goodnesse habest made my hill to stronge. Thou dydest turne thy face * (to me) and I was troubled. Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, & gat me to my Lorde right humbly. What praye is there in my bloude, when I go downe to the ytte: Shall the dust geue thanks vnto the? O shall it declare thy trueth? Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper. Thou hast turned my beynesse in to hope: thou hast put of my sacke cloth, and gyrded me with gladnesse. Therefore shall (every good man) syng of thy people without ceasinge: O my God, I will geue thanks vnto the for ever.

¶ The xxxi. Psalm.

IN TE. DOMINE. SPERAVI.

A To the chaunter a Psalm of Dauid.

I will truste in the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion: beynesse in thy rightousnesse.

Howe downe thine care to me, make haste to helpe me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For part my stronge rocke, & my refuge: be thou also my gyde, & leade me for thy names sake. Woe me out of the net that they haue layed pryly for me, for thou art my strength. * Into thy handes I commende my spere: for thou hast redeemed me, O Lorde thou God ouer all.

I haue hated them that holde of lyes: thow haue hated them that holde of lyes: my trust hath bene in Lorde. I will be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast conspyed my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities.

Thou hast not put me up into the hande of the enemye, but hast set my feet in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, & myne eyes are consumed for very beynesse, yee my soule & my body.

It is my lyfe is waken olde with beynesse, & my teares with mornynge. My strenght faileth me because of myne iniquite, and my bones are corrupte.

I became a reprobate amonge all myne enemyes, but specially amonge my neygbbours, and they of myne acquaintance were asayed of me: & they that dyd se me without, conueryed them selues from me. I am cleane forgotten, as a dead man oute of mynde: I am be come lyke a broken vessel. For I haue beede þe blasphemy of the multitude: and leare is on every lyde whye they conspire together agaynst me, & take they counsel to take awaye my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lorde, I haue sayde: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: deliuer me fro the hande of myne enemyes, and fro them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruauit the light of thy countenance, and saue me for thy mercyes sake.

Let me not be confounded, O Lorde, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodly be put to confusion, and be put to spliche in the grane. Let the lyege lyppes be put to spliche, which cruelly, & disdainfully, & despitefully, spake against the rightous. Howe pleynfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast layed by, for them I feare the: and that thou hast prepared for them, & put their trust in the, even before the sonnes of men.

Thou shalt hyde them privately by thine awne presence fro þe prouokinges of all men: I shall kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, fro the steppe of tonges. Thales be to the Lorde, for he hath shewed me maruelous greates kyndnesse in a stronge cite.

And when I made hast, I sayde: I am cast out of thy sight. Heerethiles, thou bredest the voice of my praye, when I cryed vnto the, O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for þe Lorde preferreth the that are saythfull, and plentyrouly rewardeth þe the paynfull doer.

* Be stronge, & he shall stablish the poure hart, all ye that put your trust in the Lorde.

BEATI QVORVM.

A An instructioun of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vngodlynesse is forgiven, and whose synne is couered.

Blessed is the man, vnto whome the Lorde imputed his synne, and in whose synne there is no guyle. For whyle I holde my tounge, my bones consumed & waspe thow me my synne to complayninge: For thy lande,

Thy hande is heuy vpon me daye and nyght, and my moſt grace is like the brounch in ſommer. Sela. I will knowlege my ſynne vnto the, and myne vngyghteouſneſſe haue I not hid. I ſayde: * I will confeſſe my ſynnes vnto the Lorde, & ſo thou forgaueſt the wickedneſſe of my ſynne. Sela. For this ſhall every one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the & in a ſynne when thou maſteſte be founde, but in the great water floudes they ſhall not come npe hym. Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou ſhalt preſerue me from trouble: thou ſhalt compaſſe me about with longes of deliuerance. Sela. I will enſourme the, & teache the in the waye wherein thou ſhalt go: & I will guyde the with myne eye. Be not pe like hoſe and muſe, which haue no vnderſtandynge. Whoſe mouthes muſt be holden with byt & bydle, leſt they ſail vpon the. Grete plagis remaine for the vngodly, but who ſo putterh hyſ truſt in the Lorde, receyue embraceth him on euery ſyde. We glad, & ye ryghteous and reioyſe in the Lorde, and beioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

EXVLTA IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Rioyſe * in ſ Lord, & ye ryghteous, for he is become well the luſt to be thankfull. * Praise the Lord with harp: ſynge pſalmes vnto hym with the lute and inſtrument of ten ſtringes. Synge vnto the Lorde a newe ſonge, ſynge pſalmes liſtly * (unto hym) with a good coage. For the worde of the Lorde is true, and all hyſ woikes are ſaythfull. He lonerh ryghteouſnes and ingement: the earth is full of the goodneſſe of the Lorde. * By the worde of the Lorde were the heauens made, and all the hoofers of them by the luyth of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the ſee together as it were vpon a heape, & a ſapeth vpon the depe as in a treſure houſe. Let all the earth feare the Lorde: ſtande in awe of hym, all ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he ſpake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it ſode faſt. The Lorde bynageth the * counsell of the heathen to naught, and maſterh the deupes of the people, to be of none effecte. * (and gathereth out the counsell of wyckednes.)

The counsell of the Lorde ſhall endure for euer, and the thoughtes of hyſ herte from generation to generation. Bleſſed are the people whoſe God is the Lorde Jehovah, & bleſſed are the folke that haue choſen hym to be theys inheritance. The Lorde looked downe from heauen, and behelde all the chyldren of men: from the habitation of his dwelling, he cōſpyereth all them that dwell in the earth. He ſheweth all the hertes of them, and vnderſtanderh all theyſ woikes. There is no pryge that can be ſaued by the multitude of an hoole, neither is any myghtie man deliuered by moche ſtrength.

A hoſe is counted but a vayne thyng to ſaue a man, whether ſhall he deliuer any man by hyſ greute ſtrength. Behold, the eye of the Lorde is vpon them that feare hym, and vpon them that put theyſ truſt in hym mercy.

To deliuer theyſ ſoules from death, & to ſede them in the tyme of death. Sure ſoule hath patiently tarped for the Lorde for he is oure helpe and oure ſhyde. For oure herte ſhall reioyſe in hym, becauſe we haue hoped in hyſ holy name. Let thy mercy, full kyndneſſe, O Lorde be vpon vs, like as we haue put oure truſt in the.

deliuereth the soules of hye seruantes: and all they that put theyr trust in hym shall not be deficiēt.

C The xxxv. psalme:

IVDICA DOMINE NOCENTES.

Of Dauid.

Releaue thou my cause, O Lord, with them that speake with me: and fygge thou agaynst the that fygge agaynst me. Laye hande vpon the shilde & buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Wrynge forth the speare, & stoppe the waye agaynst them: y persecute me: save vnto my soule: I am thy saluacion. Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let the be turned backe, and brought to confusyon, that pynagyn mpheche for me.

* Psal. lxxviii.

* Let the be as the dust before y wynde, and the angell of the Lord scatterynge the. Let theyr waye be darcke and slippery, and let the angell of the Lord persecute the.

For they haue pynuely layd theyr net to destroye me without a cause, yee euen without a cause haue they made a pytte for my soule.

28 Let a soden destruction come vpon him vnawares: & hye net that he hath layd pynuely, catch hym selfe, that he maye fall into hye awne mpheche. And my soule be topfull in the Lord: it shall reioyce in his saluacion. All my bones shall saye: Lord, who is lyke vnto the: which deliuerest the poore from hym that is to stronge for hym, yee the poore and hym that is in misery, from hym that spoyleth hym. Falso witness dyd eyle by: they layd to my charge, thynge that I knowe not. They rewarded me euell for good, to the greates dyscomforte of my soule. Reuerchelesse, when they were lyke, I put on a sacke clothe: and biled my soule with fastynge, and my prayer shall turne into myne a woe bosome.

C I behaued my selfe as though it had bene my frende or my brother, I wente heuelp, as one that mouereth for hye mother.

But in myne aduerpse they reioyced, and gathered them together: yee the very abscres came together agaynst me: vnawares, makinge mowes at me, and censled not.

Which the flaterers were vnde mockers, which qualshed vpon me with theyr teeth.

Lord, howe longe wylt thou loke vpon thys? O deliuer my soule from the calamities which they byngge on me, and my deapynge from the Lyons.

DIXIT INIUSTVS.

To the Chaunter, of Dauid the seruante of the Lord.

My hart the with me the wychednesse of y the vngodly, that * there is no feare of God before hye eyes. For he flattereth hym selfe in hye owne ryght, yll hye abhominable speme be founde out. The wordes of hye mouth are vnyngheous, and full of disceate: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wysely and to do good. He pynagyneth mpheche vpon hye bedde, and hath let hym selfe in no good waye, nether doth he abhoze any thyng that is euell. Thy mercy, O Lord reacheth vnto the beauen, and thy sayethfullnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy ryghteousnesse shanderth lyke the strage moystaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the greates depce.

Thou Lord shalt saue both man and beest. Howe excellent is thy mercy, O God: and the chyldren of me shall put theyr trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satysfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dyneche of thy pleasures, as out of the eptur.

For with the is the well of lyfe, and in thy lyght, shall we le lyght.

¶ Continue forth thy tourage kyndnesse vnto them that knowe the, and thy ryghteousnesse vnto them that are true of hert.

¶ Let not the foete of wyche come agaynst me: and let not the hande of the vngodly call me downe.

Ret not thy self because of the vngodly: neither be y enuyous agaynst y enuell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke y grasse, & be withered euen as y greue herbe. Put y thy trust in the Lorde, & be doinge good: dwell in the lande, and verely thou shalt be fedd. De-lyte thyon in the Lorde, & he shall geue the thy hertes desire. Conmyt the wape vnto y Lorde, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall bypnye it to passe. he shall make thy rightuousnesse as cleare as y light, & thy suet dealing as y noone dape. Holde the still in y Lorde, & abyde patiently vpon hym: but geue not thy selfe at hym, whose wape doth wofull agens y man y doth after euell counceyl. Leue of froo wrath, & let go displeasure, stett not thy self, els shalt thou be moued to do euell. Wpke doers shall be roted out: & they y patiently abyde y Lorde, those shall enheret y lande.

Yet a lyric whyle, & the vngodly shall be elene gone: thou shalt loke after hys place, & he shall be awape. But the meke quieted shall possesse the earth, & shall be refresshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly sekerh counceill agaynst y iust, & gnaweth vpon hym with hys teethe. The Lorde shall lauge hym to scoone, for he hath sene y hys wape is comynge. The vngodly haue dwelt out the swerde, and haue bended their bowe: they cast downe y poore and needy, and to slape such as be of a ryght conseruacion. Their swerde shall go thorow their adue herte, & their bowe shall be broken. A small thinge that the ryghtuous hath, is better then greates riches of y vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, & y Lorde upholdeth the ryghtuous. The Lorde knoweth y dayes of the godly, & their inheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in y perelous tyme, and in the dayes of derth they shall haue enough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: & the enemyes of the Lorde shall consume, as the fatt of lambs: yet, euen as y smoke shall they consume awape. The vngodly bozoweth and papeth not agayne, but y rightuous is increffull & y berrall. Soch as be blessed of God, shall possesse the lande, & they that be cursed of hym, shall be roted out.

The Lorde ordereth a good mans goynge, & maketh hys wape acceptable to him self. * Though he fall, he shal not be cast awape, for y Lorde upholdeth him with his hande. I haue bene pouge, and now am olde: & yet in the I neuer y rightuous forsaken, in his sece bringinge thep bread.

* The ryghtuous is euer mercifull, and kinder, and his sece is blessed. Fle from euell, and do the thyngs that is good, and dwell for euer. For the Lorde lowereth the thyngs that is ryght, he forsaketh not hys y be godly, but they are preferred for euer: more: * The vngodly shall be punished: and for the sece of the vngodly, it shall be roted out.

The ryghtuous shall inheret the lande, and dwell therein for euer. * The mouth of the ryghtuous is exercised in wisdom and his tongue wilbe talkyng of iudgement, & the laue of his God is in his hert, & his goynge shall not slippe. The vngodly seeth the ryghtuous, & sekerh occasion to slape hym. The Lorde wyl not leaue hym in hys hande, nec cōdēme him when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his wape, & he shal promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: when the vngodly shal perishe, thou shalt se it. I myselfe haue sene y vngodly in great power, & flourishyng lyke a grene bape tree: & he was withed awape, & so, he was gone: I sought hy, but & (his place) could be nowhere found.

Kepe innocency, and take hede vnto the thyngs that is ryght, for that shall bypnye a man peace at the last. As for the trasgressours, they shall perishe together, and the ende of the vngodly is, they shall be roted out at the last. But the saluacion of the ryghtuous cometh of the Lorde, which is also their strength in the tyme of trouble. And the Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, because they put thep trust in hym.

THE li. PSALME. MISERERE MEI DEVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of Dauid, wht p prophet Sathā came vnto him, after he was gone in to Bethsabe.

I Due mercy vpon me (O God) after thy multitude of thy mercyes, do awaye myne offences. Wash me thowoly fro my wickednesse, & cleanse me fro my synne. For I knowledg my fautes, & my synne is euer before me. Agaynst the onely haue I spon-ned, and done this euell in thy sight: & thou in ptydest be iudged in thy sayinge, & cleare when I art iudged. Beholde, I was cha-pen in wickednesse, & in synne hath my mother conceived me. But lo, thou requirest truth in the inward partes, and shalt make me to vnderstande whydome secretly. Thou shalt pource me with hyssope, and I shall be cleane: thou shalt wash me, & I shall be whiter then snowe. Thou shalt make me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones wyche thou hast broken, maye reioyse. Turne thy face fro my synnes, & put out all my mysde-des. Make me a cleane hert (O God) ad-renue a ryght herte wchyn me. Cast me not awaye fro thy presence, & take not thy holp hynde fro me. Geue me the comforte of thy helpe agayne, & stablysh me with thy fre hyete. Then shalt I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and synners shall be con-uerted vnto the. Despyre me fro bloud gy-tynesse (O God) thou that art p God of my health, and my tonge shall sing of thy ryghteousnesse. Thou shalt open my lippes, & my mouth shall shewe thy praise.

QVID GLORIAS IN MALITIA.

To the chaunter, an exortacyō of Da-uid, when Dorig the Chompe came to Saul, and he wed him, sayinge: Dauid is come to the house I hymlech.

Why boastest thou thy selfe, thou Tyrant, that thou canst do myghte?
Where as y goodnesse of God endureth per daylie. Thy rage pur-gueth wickednesse, & wryth lyes thou cut-test lyke a sharpe saoure. Thou hast loued vngyngynges more then goodness, & to talke of lyes more then ryghteousnesse.
Sela. Thou hast loued to speake all wodes that maye do hurt, O thou false tonge.
Therefore shall God destroye thee for euer:
he shall take y & plucke y out of thy dwelling, & rote the out of the lād of the lyming. Sela.
The ryghteous also shall se this, & feare, & shall laugh him to scorn. Lo, this is y mā, that toke not God for his strength, but & tristed vnto the multitude of his ryces, & stre-ngthed hym selfe in his wickednesse. As for me, I am lyke a grene olyue tree: the house of God my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer & euer. I will alwaye geue thankes vnto the, for y hast done: & I will hope in thy name, for thy lapedes lyke it well.

DIXIT INCIPIENS.

To the chaunter vpon a Mahalath, an instrucion of Dauid.

Why foolysh bodye hath sayed in his hert: there is no God. Corrupt are they, & become adomyable in their wickednesse: there is none that doth good.

God looked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to se yf there were eny that wolde vnderstande, and seke after God.

28 But they are all gone out of the waie, they are all together become abhominable:
there is none now that doth good, no not one.
Are not they without understandinge that worke wickednes, eating up my people as yff they wolde eate bread: they haue not called vps God. They were afraide, where no feare was: for God hath broken the bones of them that belinged to it: thou hast put them to confusion, because God hath despised the DEVS IN NOMINE TVO.

To the chaunter in melodies, an instruction of waile, when the zephites came and sayde vnto Saul: hath not Dauid hys honselfe amongstest vs?

Sue me, O God, for thy names sake, and Iudge me in thy strength. Heare my prayer, O God, & hearken vnto the wordes of my mouth.

For straungers are eysen vp against me, knowne vpon earth, thy sauynge health amonge all nations. Let the people praye the. O God, yee, let all people praye the.

O let the nations reioyce and be glad, for thou shalt iudge the folke ryghteously, and gouerne the nations vpon earth. Sela. Let the people praye the, O God, let all people praye the. Then shal the earth bring forth hys increase, and God, euen oure awne God shall geue vs hys blessing. God shall blesse vs, and all the endes of the world shal fear hym.

C The. lxxvij. Psalme.

EXVROAT DEVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of Dauid.

God arse, ad let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him, flye before him. Like as the lincke banyeth, so shalt thou depue the awape: and lyke as waxe melteth at the fyr: so let the vngodly perishe at the presence of God. But let the ryghteous be glad e reioyce before God: let the also be merc and topfull. Oh syngye vnto God, and syngye praises vnto his name: magnifie him that rydeth vpon the heauens as it were vpon a voice: praye ye hym in his name. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000.
Sela. The earth shoke, and the heauens dropped at the presence of God, euen as Sinai also was moued at the presence of God, which is the God of Israel. Thou O God send-dest a gracious rapne vpon thyn cubert-taunce, and reuestedst it, wher it was wee-rye. Thy congregacion shall dwell therein: for thou (O God) hast of thy goodnesse prepared for the poore. The Lord gaue his voyce: great was the company of the preachers. * Rynges with theyr armyes bydste, and were discorned, and they of byhold despyed the people. * Though ye haue iwen amonge pottes, yet shall ye be as the wynges of a doue that is couered with spuer wynges, and hyr fetters lyke golde.

When the Almyghthy scattered rynges for these sake, the were they as white as snowe in zalm. As the hyll of Salan so is Gods hyll: euen a hye hill, as the hyll of Salan.

Why hope ye for the hyll of Salan?

Thys is Gods hyll, in the which it pleaseth him to dwell: yee, the Lord will abyde in it for euer. * The charrettes of God are twen-tie thousande, euen thousandes of angels, ad the Lord is amonge them as in the holy place of Sinai. * Thou art gone vpon a hye, thou hast led captiuite captiue, and receu-ed gyftes for men. Yee, euen for thyn enemies, that the Lord God myght dwell amonge the. * Wasped be the Lord dayly, euen the God which helpeth vs, and pouert his benefices vpon vs. Sela. He is oure God, euen the God of whome cometh salua-cion: God is the Lord by whom we escape death. God shall woude the heade of his enemies, and the bearte scalpe of such our goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lord hath sayde: I will bringe my people agayne as I byd from Salan: myne owne wyll I bringe agayne as I byd somtyme from the depe of the see. That thy foete maye be dipped in the bloude of thyn enemies, ad that the toge of thy dogges maye be dredo thow the same. It is well sene, O God, how thou goest, how myn God and hyge goest in the Sanctuary. The synners go be-foze, the mynstris folow after: in mynstris are the damocles playng with the mynstris.

True shalke O Israel, vnto God the Lord be in the congregacions from the gronde of the hart: There is lyte Beniamin thyn ruler: and the Princes of Iuda, thyn counsell: the Princes of Zabulon, and the Princes of Asephthal. Thy God hath sent forth strength for the, stablysh the thing, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Ierusalem: O shall bynges byngye presenters vnto the. * When the company of the fyeare men and multitude of the myghte are scattered abroade amonge the beastes of the people (so that they bumbled byng peccs of synner) and wha he hath sented the people that deluyet warre. Then shall the Princes come out of Egypte, the Mozyans land shall soone stretch out her bades vnto God. Syngye vnto God, O ye lyngdomes of the earth: O syng praises vito the Lord. Sela. Which lytteth in the heauens ouer all from the begynnyng: Lo, he doth sende out hys voyce, yee, and that a myghty voyce. Asepe ye the power vnto God, ouer Israel: his woodyppys stretch in the cloudes. O God, wonderfull art thou in thy holy places: euen the God of Israel, he will geue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

that I longe for, thou art my hope euen from my yowth. ^{psal. lxxij. 1.} ^{170. xlii. 1.} Thow wylt haue I bene holden vnder euer sence I was borne * thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, my people shall be all waye of the. I am become as it were a monster vnto many: but my face trust is in the. ^{170. xlii. 2.} Whet my mouth be fylled with thy prayre: * that I maye singe of thy glorie with honour all the daye longe.

Cast me not awaye in the tyme of age, forsalake me not wile my strength faileth me. For myne enemies speake agaynst me: & they that laye waite for my soule, take theyr counsell together, sayenge: God hath forsaken hym, persecute hym, and take hym, for there is none to deliuer him. So not farre frome. ^{170. xlii. 3.} O God: my God, halke the to helpe me. Let them be confounded and perperche, that are agaynst my soule: let them be conuerted with shame and dyshonour, that seke to do me euill. ^{170. xlii. 4.} As for me, I wylt patiently abyde all waye, and will praye the more abun- dantly.

My mouth shall daylye speake of thy righteousnesse a saluation, for I knowe no ende therof. I will go forth I strengthe of the Lord God, & will make mencion of thy righteousnesse onely. Thou, O God, hast taught me from my yowth vntill now, therefore will I tell of thy wondrous workes.

Forsalake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am gray headed: vntill I haue shewed thy strength vnto this generacio, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come. Thy righteousnes (O God) is verp hie, and great thynges are they y thou hast done: O God, who is lyke vnto the?

What greates troubles and aduersities hast thou lyewed me: ad yet didst thou turne and reke the me: yee, and broughtest me from the depe of the earth: * ^{170. xlii. 5.} ^{170. xlii. 6.} ^{170. xlii. Psalmc, lxxiii, lxxv.

W blasphemye: they talkynge is agaynst the most hieft. For they stretch forth theyr mouth vnto the heauen, & theyr tonge goeth thowyn the world. Therefore fall the people vnto them, and there out sucke they no small aduantage. * Cast (saye they) how shuld God perceaue: is there knowlege in the most hieft? Lo, these are the vngodly, these pposers in the world, and these haue eyes in iollisyon. * Euen haue I clenid my heere in dayne and washid my handes in innocency: All the daye long haue I bene pnnished, and chastened euery moynge. * Per, and I had almost sayde euen as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generacon of thy chyl-dren. Eth thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to hard for me. Untill I wente into the Sanctuary of God, then vnder-stande I the ende of these mē. Namely, how thou best sett them in slippery places, and callest them downe and destroyest them.

When suddenly do they consume, perysh, and come to a fearfull ende: * Per, euen like as a drame when once awaketh, so shaldest thou make & theyr ymage to vanysh out of the eyre. This myn hart was grieved, ad it wente euen thow my crynes. So softly was I and ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the. After thelesse, I am all waye by the, for y hast hold me by my right haude. Thou shalt gyde me with thy counsell, and afterwarde receaue me with glory. Whom haue I in heauen but y? And there is none vpon earth, that I helpe in coppyson of the. Eppleasid and myn hart sayeth, that God is the strength of myn hart, * and myn poyson for euer. For lo, they that forsake the Hall perysh: thou hast destroyed all them that commytte fornicacyon agaynst the. NOTVS IN IDEA.

To the chaunter, in melodys, a psalme, y songe of Aaph.

In the wyse is God knowne, his name is greater in Israel. His schall is his tabernacle, and his dwelling in Sion. There shalbe he the arrowes of the bowe, the spide, the fwerde, and y bat-rable. Sela. Thou art of more honour and myght then the bylles of robbers.

The proude are robbed: they haue slepe their slepe: and all the men (whose handes were myghtie) haue found nothinge. At thy rebuke (O God of Jacob) both the cha-cer and hoyle is fallen. Thou, euen thou art to be feared: and who may staube in thy syght, when thou art angrye. Thou dyd-dest cause thy iudgement to be herde from brauen, the erth trembled and was still.

When God arose to iudgement, & to helpe all the meke vpon earth. Sela. The fearenesse of man shall turne to thy playe: and the fearenesse of other thait thou re-frayne. Shoompe vnto the Lord your God, & he pe it, all y that be rounde about hym: bying presentes vnto hym that ought to be feared. He shall refrayne the spiers of Synner, and is wonderfull amonge the kpinges of the earth.

VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

To the Chaunter, for Ieruthun a psalme of Aaph.

I* will crye vnto God w my voyce, euen vnto God wyl I crye wryth my voyce, and he shall hearken vnto me.
 In the tyme of my trouble I soughte the Lord: my voyce ranne and crisled not in the nyght season: my soule refused comfote.

When I am in deuynesse, I wyl thynke vpon God: when my heart is vexed, I wyl complayne. Sela. Thou holdest myne eyes wakinge, I am to feble, that I cannot speake. I haue choryed the dayes of olde, and the yeares that are past. I call to remebrance my songe: and in the nyght I commune with myne awne heart, and search out my synetes. Wyl y Lord ablent him selfe for euer? And wyl he be no more intreated?

 As hys mercy cleme gone for euer? And is hys promise come vnto an ende for euermore? hath God forgotten to be gracious? And wyl he shut vp hys louynge kynnesse in dyspleasure? Sela. And I sayde: It is myne awne infirmyte: But I wyl remember the peaces of the ryght hnde of the moost myght. I wyl remember the woekes of the Lord, and call to mynde thy wonderes of olde tyme. I wyl thynke also of all thy woekes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy doynge. Thy waye, O God, is holp: who is so greute a God as God? Thou art the God that doth wonderes, ad hast declared thy power among people. Thou hast myghtely deliuered y thy people, euen the iannes of Jacob ad Joseph. Sela. The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, & were afraide: they sayde also were troubled. The cloudes poured out water, the aper thondered, & thyn arrowes went a boade. The voyce of thy thoder was heard rounde aboute, the lychtenynges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke wrythall.

Thy waye is in the ier, and thy pathes in the greute waters, and thy footstepes are not knowne. Thou ledest thy people lyke shepe, by the bande of Gols and Aaron.

DEVS VENERVNT GENTES.

A Psalme of Asaph.

God * the heathen are come into thy inheritaunce: thy holy tpybe haue they despyled, and made Ierusalem an heape of stones. * The deyd bodyes of thy seruantes haue they geuente to be meate, vnto the foules of the ayre, and the fleshy of thy saynctes vnto the beastes of the lande.

Their bloud haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Ierusalem, and there was no man to burye them. * We are become an oyle shame vnto our enemyes, a verye scoone and derpylon vnto them that are rounde aboute vs. * Lorde, how longe wilt thou be angrye? Shall thy glowrye burne lyke fyre for euer? * Pour out thyne indignation vpon the heathen that haue not knowen y, and vpon the kynngdome that haue not called vpon thy name. For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layed waste his dwellinge place.

* Remember not oure olde synnes, but haue mercy vpon vs, and that soone, for we are come to greake misery. Helpe vs, O God of oure saluacion, for the glory of thy name: O deliuer vs, and be mercifull vnto oure synnes for thy names sake.

* Wherefore do the heathen saye: where is now thy God? * Let the vengeance of thy seruantes bloude y shed, be openy shewed vpon the heathen in oure syght.

* Let the sorrowfull syghyng of the prisoners come before the: accordyng vnto the greatnesse of thy power, pelerne vnto those that are appoynted to dye. And for the blasphemy: wherewith oure neyghbours haue blasphemized thee: rewarde thou them, O Lorde, leuen foule into their bosome. So we, that be thy people and shepe of thy pasture, shall geue thee thanches for euer, and wyl alwaye be thy prayng forth thy prayng from generation to generation.

QVI REGIS ISRAEL.

To the chaunter: vpon Solaum, a testimonye and Psalme of Asaph.

Sace O thou Shepherd of Israel, thou pleadest Joseph lyke a tpybe: he wth thy selfe also thou that spakest vpon the Cherubyns.

Before Ephraim, Ben Jamin, and Manassers: stert vp thy strength, and come helpe vs. Turne vs agayne, O God, the- we the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole. O Lorde God of hostes, how longe wilt thou be angrye wth thy people that prayeth? * Thou feedest the with y of teares and geuest them plecter outnes of teares to drynche. * Thou hast made vs a verye stycke vnto oure neyghbours, and oure enemyes laugh vs to scoine. Turne vs agayne, thou God of hostes, the we the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole. Thou hast brought a tpyne out of Egypte, thou hast cast out the heathen, and placed it. Thou madest to come forth, and when it had taken rote it spyled the lande.

The hylls were couered with y shadowe of it, so the bowes therof were lyke goodly Cedre trees. She stretched out her bzaunches vnto the see, and her bowes vnto the ryuer. Wth hast thou then broken downe her hedge, that all thy whych go by, plucke of her greaves? The wynde bose out of the wood both rote it vp, and the wynde beastes of the felde deuoured it. Turne y agayne, thou God of hostes, loke downe from heauen, beholde, and vyset thys vnc. And the place of the vnygarde that thy ryght hande hath planted, and the bzaunch that thou madest so stronge for thy selfe. * It is bent wth thyre, and cutt downe: & and thy shall perishe at the rebuke of thy countenance. Let thy hand be vpon the man of thy ryght hande, & vpon the sonne of man whom thou madest so stronge for thyne a wne selfe. And so wilt not we go back from the: O let vs lyue, & we shall call vpon thy name. Turne vs agayne, O Lorde God of hostes, the we the lyght of thy countenance, & we shalbe whole.

C. The 133rd. Psalm:

BENEDIXISTI DOMINE.

To the chaunter, a psaline of the sonnes of Cozab.

Lorde, thou art become gracious vnto thy lande, thou hast turned awaye the captiuitie of Iacob. Thou hast forgiven the offence of thy people, and * covered all therr synnes. Selah. Thou hast taken awaye all thy displeasure, and turned thy selfe from thy wrathfull indignacyon.

Turne vs then, O God our Saviour, and let thy anger cease from vs. Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer: and wilt thou stretch out thy wrath from one generacion to another? Wilt thou not turne a-gayne & quicken vs, that thy people maye reioyce in thee: Shewe vs thy mercie O Lord and graunt vs thy saluacion. I will be-lieue.

Bye. Wherey and trueth are met together, ryghtuousnesse and peace haue kylled eche other. Trueth shall flozke out of the earth, & ryghtuousnesse hath loked downe fro heauen. See the Worde shall shewe louenge kyndnesse, and our lande shall geue her encrease. Rychtuousnesse shall go before hym, and he shall directe hys goynge in the waye.

INCLINA DOMINE AVREM.
A prayer of David.
¶ BOWE downe thyne eare, O Lord, & heare me, for I am poore & in misery.
Preferre thou my soule, for I am holý: my God saue thy seruants, that put ted by trust in the. Be mercifull vnto me (O Lord) for I will call daily vpon the.
Comforte the soule of thy seruants, for vnto the (O Lord) do I lyft vp my soule.

* For thou Lord art good and gracious, and of greafe merry vnto all them that call vponthe. Geue care Lord vnto my prayer, and vouchsafe the voyce of my dumbe desires

In the tyme of my trouble I will call vpon the, for thou hearest me. * Amonge the Goddess there is none lyke vnto the Lord there is not one that can do as thou doest.

All narcons whom thou hast made, shall come and worshyppe the (O Lord) and shall glorify thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous thynges, thou art God alone. Teach me thy wayes, (Lorde) and I will walke in thy truth: O banet my bett vnto thee, that it maye feare thy name. I wyll thanke the, O Lorde my God with all my hart, and will prays the name for ever.

For great is thy mercy towarde me and
* thou hast deliuered my soule from the nethermost hell. O God, the proude are re-* ^{Cal. 1. 28. 11} senced agaynst me, and the congregacions of naughtie men haue sought after my soule, and haue not set the before their eyes.

* But thou, O Lord God, art full of compassion, and mercy, lōge sufferynge, pleteous in goodnes and trueth. Turne the then vnto me and haue mercy vpon me: ge-ue thy strength vnto thy seruauit, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

As heve some token vpon me for good, that they which hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed, because thou Lord hast helped me, and comforted me.

abroad with thy myghtie arme. The heauens are thyne, the earth also is thyne: thou hast layed the foundations of the earthe, and all that therein is. Thou hast made the north and the south, Ebor and berris shall reioyce in thy name. Thou hast a myghtie arme, stronge is thy hand, and thy seide is thy right hand. Righteousnesse and equite is the habitation of thy state, mercy and truth shall go before thy face. Blessed is the people (O Lord) that can reioyce in thee: they shall walke in the light of thy countenance. Thy helpe shall be dayly in thy name, & in thy righteousnesse shall they make theyr boast. For thou art the glory of thy strength, & in thy louping hyndnesse shall they boast theyr hope. For the Lord is our defence, he is the help one of Israel: our Kinge. Thou shakest some tyme in thy wrath vnto thy synners, and saydest: I haue exalted one chosen out of the people. * I haue to vnderstand my seruaut: with my holy oyle haue I anointed him. My hand shall holde hym fast, and myne arme shall strengthen hym: The enemye shall not be able to do hym violence, the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym. I shall smyte downe bys foes before bys face, and pinge the that hate hym. Thy truth also and my mercy shall be with hym, and in my name shall bys home be exalted. * I will set bys dominion also in the see, and bys right hand in the founteyns. He shall call me: thou art my father, my God, & my stronge saluacion. And I will make hym my first borne, better then the kynges of the earth. Thy mercy will I kepe for hym for euermore, & my couenaunt shall stande fast with hym. Thy seide also will I make to endure for euer, and bys throne as the dayes of heauen. But yf bys chyldren forsake my lawe, and walke not in my iudgements. * If they breake my statutes, and kepe not my commandementes. * I will vyle their offences with the rod, and theyr synne with scourges.

All they that go by, people hym, and he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou hast let by the rygge bande of hye enemies: & made all his aduersaries to reioyce. Thou hast taken a waie the edge of his swerde: & geue hym not victorie in the battayle. Thou hast put out his glory, & cast his throne downe to the ground. The dayes of his youth hast thou shortened: and covered him wth dishonoure. Selab. Lorde, howe longe wilt thou hid thy selfe: for euer? and shall thy wrath burne lke fyre?

*Q*uere the, howe longe my tyme is, when thou hast made all me for naught? What man is he that lyueth, & shall not be death? and shall he deliuer his owne soule from the bande of hell? Selab. Lorde, where are thy olde louping kyndnes, which thou swordest vnto Dauid in thy trowth? Remember (Lorde) the rebuke thy seruantes haue done: I do beare i my bosome thy rebukes of many people. When with thine enemies haue blasphemed the, & slea under the shaddowes of thine anoynted. Paped be the Lorde for euermore. Amen.

DOMINE REFVIVM.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

*L*orde, thou hast bene oure refuge from one generacyon to another. Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth the worlde were made, thou art God from euery thing and wouldest without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruction. I gayne, thou failest: come agayne ye chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeares in thy lyght are but as yesterdaye, seyinge that is past as a watch in the nyght. As soon as thou scarest them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lke the grasle.

*I*n the morninge it is grene and groweth up, but in the eueninge it is cut downe, & withered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, & are stayed as the wastfull indignacye. Thou hast set oure misdeeds before the, and oure secret spynes in the lyght of thy countenance. For when thou art angrye, all oure dayes are gone: we bypne our yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are thye score yeares and ten: and though men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeares, yet is theyr strength then but labour & sorrow: to some passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen threether as a man starteth, for thy displeasure. * Teach vs, to no bye oure dayes, that we maye applye oure heertes vnto wysdome. Turne the agayne (O Lorde) at the laste, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. O satisfye vs with thy mercy, and that soule: so shall we reioyce and be glad all the dayes of oure lyfe.

Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme that thou hast plagued vs, and for the peeres wherin we haue suffered aduersitye.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke, and theyr chyldren thy glory. And the glorious maiesty of the Lorde oure God be vpon vs: prospereth thou the worke of oure handes vnto vs, O prospereth thou oure hande worke.

C The. xcii. Psalm.

QVI HABITAT.

*W*ho so dwelleth vnder the shaddow of the most hye, shall abyde vnder the shadow of the Almighty. I will saye vnto the Lorde: Thou art my hope, and my stronge holde, my God, in hym will I trust. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter, and sea the some pestlence. He shall defende the vnder hye wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder hye fetters: hye saythfulness and trowth shall be thy wynde and buckler. Thou shalt not be afrayed for any trowne by night, ner for the arrow that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darknesse, ner for the sicknesse that destroyeth in the noone daye. A thousande shall fall besyde the, & ten thousande at thy rygge hand, but it shall not come nye the. Per, with thine eyes shalt thou beholde, and se the rewarde of the vngodly. For thou Lorde arte my hope, thou hast set thine house of defence vnto the, here shall no euel happen vnto the, ne the shall any plage come nye thy dwelling.

* For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shall beare the in theyr bandes, that thou hurt not thy fote agaynst a stone. Thou shalt go vpon the Lyon and a vnder, the yonge Lyon and the Dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete. Because he hath set hye lone vnto me, therefore shall I deliuer him: I shall set hym by, because he hath knowen my name. * He shall call vpon me, & I will beare hym: pee I am with hym in trouble, I will deliuer hym, and bypne hym to honour. With longe lyfe will I satisfie hym, and shewe hym my saluacion.

*I*t is a good thing to geue thanks vnto the Lorde, and to syng psalms vnto thy name, O moste hye.

C 4. Tofell

Psal. xciiij. & xciiij. & xcvi.

To tell of thy longynghynesse early in the morning, and of thy trust in the nyght season. Upon an instrument of ten stringes, & vnder the lute: vnder a lowde instrument & vnder the harpe. For thou Lord hast made me glad to showe thy workes, and I will reioyce in thy people for the operations of thy handes. O Lord, how glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are deep depe.

B An vnwyse man doth not well consider this, and a fooles doth not vnderstande it. When the vngodly are grene as the graspe, & when all the workes of wyckednes do flourish, then shall they be destroyed for euer. But y Lord art the most hyest for euermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lord, lo thyne enemyes shall perishe, and all the workes of wyckednes shall be destroyed. But my house shall be exalted like the house of an vngodlye, for I am anointed with thy oyle. Myne eye also shall see byssul of myne enemyes, and myne ear shall heare hys despayre of the wycked that crye vngodlye. The vngodlye shall flourish like a palme tree, and shall spreade abroad like a Cedar in Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of y Lord shall flourish in y court: (of the house) of our God. They shall also bypyn forth more fruite in theyr age, & shall be fat and well lhyng. That they maye thewe, how true y Lord my strength is, and that there is no vngodly couynesse in hym.

DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

And the Lord is sayng, and hath put on glorious apparell: the Lord hath put on his apparell, & gyrded hym selfe with strength: he hath made the coude world to surre, that it can not be moued. Euer sens the world began hath thy seat bene prepared, thou art from euerlastyng. * The soundes are cylen: (O Lord) the soundes haue lyft vnder the people, the soundes lyft vnder the wanes. The waves of the see are myghtie, a rage hoisibly: but yet the Lord that dwelleth on hye, is myghtier. Thy testimonies, O Lord, are deep sure, holpnesse becomnieth thyne house for euer.

C The. xciiij. Psalme.

And the Lord God: to whome vengeance be longeth: thou God to whome vengeance belongeth, we thy selfe. Arise thou iudge of the world, and reward the proude after theyr despyng. Lord how longe shall the vngodly, how longe shall the vngodly triumph? howe longe shall all wycked doers speake so dissaufully, & make such proude boasting? Theyr smyte downe thy people, O Lord, and trouble thyne heritage. They march vnder the wyddow and the stranger, and put y fatherlesse to death.

And yet they saye. Cursed be the Lord that is not se, neither shall y God of Jacob regard it. Take heede, ye vnwyse amonge the people, O ye fooles, when will ye vnderstande? He that planted the care, shall be not beare: He that made the eye, shall not be se: He that smureth the beathen, it is he that prayeth man knowlege, that not be punysshed. * The Lord knoweth the thoughtes of man, & they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whome thou shalt enest (O Lord) & teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayest geue hym patience in tyme of aduersitie, vntill the pee be dygged vnder the vngodly. For the Lord will not faile hys people, neither will he forsake his inheritance. Untill righteounesse turne agayne vnto iugement: all such as be true of heart shall follow it. Who will crye vnder me agaynst the wycked? Who will take my part agaynst the cruel doers? If the Lord had not helped me it had not failed, but my soule had bene put to silence. * But wher I sayd: my forte hath slipped, thy mercy (O Lord) shalde me vnder. * In the multitude of the sorowes y I had in my better thy comfortes haue refreysd my soule. While thou haue any thyng to do with y scoole of wisdomnes, whiche ymagineth mischance as a lawe: They gather the together agaynst the soule of the righteous, and condemne the innocent bloude. But the Lord is my refuge, & my God is the strength of my confidence. He shall recompense the their wickednes, and destroye them in their owne malice, yee the Lord our God shall destroye them.

C The. xcvi. Psalme.
VENITE EXULTEMVS.

B Come, let vs syng vnto y Lord, let vs hartely reioyce in the strenght of our saluation. Let vs come before his presence with thankesgyng, & we oure selfe glad in hym w plumes. For the Lord is a great God, & a great hyng above all goddes. In his hande are all the coryners of the earth, & the strenght of the bysses is in his al. The see is hys, and he made it, & his hande prepared the drye lande. Come, let vs worshyppe & fall downe, and kuele before y Lord oure maker. For he is: (the Lord) oure God: and we art y people of his pasture, and we are the shepe of his handes. * O daye y we will heare his voyce, hardt not pour heartes, as in y psonakaciō as i daye of teptacion in the wilderness. While poure fathers syped me, proued me, and saw my workes. Fourty yeres long was I grieved with y generation, & sayd: it is a people y do erre in theyr better: for they haue not knowen my wayes. * Vnto wher I sware in my wrath that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

CANTATE DOMINO.

O syng

Singye vnto the Lorde a new songe, singye vnto the Lorde all the whole earth. Singye vnto the Lorde, and praise his name, be tellinge of his saluacion from daye to daye. Declaire hys honoure vnto the heathen, ad his wonders vnto all people. * For the Lorde is great, and can not worthely be prayd: he is more * to be feared then all goddesses. As for all f gods-des of the heathen, they be but Idols, but it is the Lorde that made the heauens.

Glorie and worshippe are before hym, power & honoure are in hys Sanctuary.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde, (O ye hundredes of the people) ascribe vnto the Lorde worshippe and power. * Ascribe vnto f Lorde the honoure due vnto his name, byngye presented, & come into hys courtes. O worshippe the Lorde in the beute of holynesse, lett the whole earth stande in awe of hym.

Tell it out amonge the heathen, that the Lorde is kyng: and that it is he which hath made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shall iudge the people ryghteously. Let the heauens reioyce, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, and all that therein is.

Let the selde be ioysfull and all that is in it, shall all the trees of the wodde reioyce. before the Lorde, for he commeth: for he commeth to iudge the earth: and with rygh-teousnesse to iudge the worlde, and the people with his trouth.

¶ The. xcvi. Psalme.

DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lorde is kyng, the earth maye be glad therof: yee the multytude of the Iles maye be glad therof. Cloudes and darknesse are rounde aboute hym, ryghteousnesse and iudgment are the habi-tacion of his seate. There shall go a fye before hym, and burne vp hys enemyes on euery syde. His lightenynges gaue fyrre vnto the worlde, the earth sawe it and was afraied. * The hilles melted lyke waxe at the presence of the Lorde, at the presence of f Lorde of the whole earth. * The hea-uens haue declared his ryghteousnes, & all the people haue sente hys glorie. * Confounded be all they f worshippercarued ymages, and that bespe in vayne goddesses: worshippe hym & all ye goddesses. Sion heard of it and reioyced: and the daughters of Juda were glad because of thy iudgements, O Lorde. For thou Lorde art hyer then all that are in the earth, thou art exalted farre aboue all goddesses. O ye that loue the Lorde, let that ye hate the thyngs which is euill: the Lorde preferreth the soules of hys sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly. There is no ydole but a lyght for the ryghteous, and a ioyfull gladnesse for such as be true herted.

* Reioyce in the Lorde, ye ryghteous: * For the Lorde and grue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

¶ Psalme. 98. (to Dauid.)

Singye vnto f Lorde a new songe, for he hath done maruelous thyn-ges. With hys owne ryghte hande and with his holp arme hath he gotten hym selfe the victorie. The Lorde declared hys saluacion, hys ryghteousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen. He hath remembered hys mercy and trouth to-warde the house of Israel: & and all the endes of the worlde haue sene the saluacion of oure God. Shewe youre felices ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes, singye, celeste, and geue thankes. * Playe f Lorde vpon the harpe, singye to the harpe with a psalme of thankesgeuyng. With troy-nettes also and Gammes: O shewe youre felices ioyfull before the Lorde the kyng.

Let the see make a noyse and all f therein is, the rounde worlde, and they that dwell therin. Let the cloudes clappe their han-des, and let the hylls be ioyfull together.

Before the Lorde, for he is come to iudge the earth. With ryghteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, & the people with equite.

thanks vnto thy name, which is great, woderfull & holy. The kynges power loureth iudgement, f had ye parr'd equyte, thou hast executed iudgment ad ryghteousnes in Jacob. O magnifye the Lorde oure God, and fall downe before his fote stole, for he is holy. Moses and Aaron among his ppe-sents, and Summel amonge soche as call vpo hys name: these called vpon the Lorde, and be hearded them. He spake vnto them: out of the cloudy pylle, for they kepte hys testimonies, and the lawe that he gaue them.
Thou heardest them (O Lorde oure God) thou forgauest them (O God, and pnyshedst they: a woe inuencions. O ma-

A prayer of the aſſyret, when he hath an hey hart, and powereth out hyſ complainte before the Lorde.

* Caremy prayer, O Lorde, ad lett my cryenge come in vnto the. I prayd not thy face for me in the tyme of my trouble: eſpyce thyne eares vnto me when I call. O deare me, and p cryght ſoone. For my dayes are conſumed a waye lyke ſmoke, ad my bones are bzient by, as it were a fyre byande. My hert is ſmytten downe and withered lyke graſſe, ſo that I forget to eat my bred. For the voyce of my gromynge, my bone will ſcarle cleue to my ſkech. I am become lyke a bellycane of y wilbernes, ad lyke an owle yis in y deſert. I haue watched, I am euil as it were a ſparow, that ſitteth alone vpon the houte tope. Myne enemyes reuyle me all the daye lode: & they that are madde byd me, are ſwozne together agaynſt me. For I haue eaten aſhes as at were bred, and meyled my drynch with wepyng. And that becauſe of thyne indignacyon & wrath, for thou haſt taken me by, & caſt me downe. My dayes are gone lyke a ſhadowe, and I am withered lyke graſſe. But thou, O Lord, wilt endure for euer, and thyne remembrance ſhall row out all generacyons. Thou ſhalt aſcpe, & haue mercy vnto Sion, for it is tyme that thou haue mercy vnto her, yee the tyme is come. And why: thy ſeruantes ſtynch vpon her ſtones, and it pitieth them to ſe her in the duſt. The heathen ſhall feare thy name, O Lord, & all the kynges of the earth thy maieſty. When the Lord ſhall buyde by Sion, and when his glory ſhall appeare:

When he turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore deſtitute, & deſpyeth not the prayer deſyre. Thy ſhalbe written for thoſe that come after: & y people which ſhalbe doyne, ſhall praye the Lord. For he hath looked downe from his Sanctuary, out of the heauen vnto the Lorde beholde y earth. That he might heare the mourninges of ſuch as be in captiuite, and deliuer the chyldren appointed vnto death. That they maye declare the name of the Lorde in Sion, ad his worſhippe at Ierusalem: Whet the people are gathered together, & y kyngdomes alſo to ſerue the Lorde. He brought downe my ſtrength in my iourney, and ſtrengthened my dayes. But I ſayd: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddelt of myne age: as for thy yeares, they endure thowout all generacyons. * Thou Lorde in the begynnyng haſt layed the foundation of the earth, and the heuens are the worcke of thy handes. They ſhall periſhe, but thou ſhalt endure: they all ſhall were olde as doth a garment, and as a veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be chaiged. But thou art y ſame, and thy yeares ſhall not fayle. The chyldre of thy ſeruantes ſhall conſume, & their ſede ſhall ſtonde faſt in thy ſyght.

* Rayle the Lord, O my ſoule, and all that is win me praye his holy name. Praise the Lorde, O my ſoule, and forget not all hyſ benefytes. Whych ſtrengtheneth all thy ſynne, & healeth all thy infirmities. Whych ſaueth thy lyfe from deſtruction, and crowmeth the with mercy ad louynge kyndneſſe. Whych ſatiſfeth thy mouth with good thynges, makinge the yonge and luſty as an Eagle. The Lorde executeth ryghteouſneſſe and iudgment, for all them that are oppreſſed with wronge.

He ſheweth

he shewed vs wayes vnto Moyses, bys workes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

* The Lord is full of chastytyon & mercy, longe suffering, and of great goodnesse.

He will not all waye be chydynge, nether hepeth he his anger for euer. He hath not dealt with vs after oure synnes, ner rewarded vs according to oure wickednesles.

* For loke how bye the deauen is in comparison of the earth, so greate is bys mercp also towards the p feare him. Loke how wyde also the east is from the west, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs. Pee like as a father pitieth his awne children, eue so is the Lorde mercyfull vnto the p feare him.

* For he knoweth wher of we be made, & he remembeth p we are but dust. The dayes of man are but as grasse, for he flourisheth as a floure of the felde. For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and p place therof shall knowe it no more. But the merciful goodnesse of p Lorde endureth for euer & euer, vpon them that feare him, & bys righteousnesse vpon chylders chyldren.

Eue vpon Iohas kept his couenaunt, & shynke vpon bys commaundementes to do them. The Lord hath prepared bys seate in heauen, & his kynge dome ruleth ouer all.
O praye the Lorde pe angels of his, pe p excell in strength: pe that fulfill his commaun-dement, & beken vnto the voyce of his wor-des. O praye the Lord all ye his hostes, pe seruantes of his, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of p Lorde all ye workes of his, in all places of his dominion: praye thou the Lorde, O my soule.

BENEDIC ANIMA.

* Praise p Lorde O my soule: O Lord my God, thou art become exceeding glorious, thou art clothed with maiesty and honour. Thou deckest thy selfe with lycht, as it were with a garment, and spedest out the heauens lyke a curtayne.

Which layeth the beames of his chambers in the waters, & maketh the cloudes his cha-ret, & walketh vpon the wynges of p wynde.

* He maketh his angels spietes, and his mynters a flaminge fyre. He layeth the foundacyon of the earth, that it neuer shoulde moue at any tyme. Thou coueredst it w the depe lyke as with a garment: the waters stande in the hylls. * At thy rebuke they fye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afraid.

They go vpon as bye as the hylls, and downe to the valleyes beneath: euen vnto the place, which thou hast appointed for them. * Thou hast set them their boundes, which they shall not passe: nether turne agayne to couer the earth. He sendeth the spynge into the ryuers, which rine amog the hylls. All beastes of p felde dyncke therof: and the wyld asses quench theyr thyrst. Besyde them shall the foules of p ayre haue theyr habitacyon, & syng amog the braiches. He watereth the hylls from aboue, the earth is fylled with the frute of thy workes. He byngeth forth grasse for the cattell, & grene herbe for the lecture of men: that he maye p byngge fode out of the earth: and wyne that maketh glad the berte of man, and oyle to make him a chearull countenance, and byed to strength his herse. The trees of the Lord also are full of sappe, eue the Ceders of Libanus which he hath planted. Wherin the byrdes make their nestes, and the fyre trees are a dwel-lyng for the porcke. The hyr hills are a refuge for the wilde goates, & to are the strong rocks for the conyes. He appoynteth the Moone for certayne seasons, & the Sunne knoweth bys goynge downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be night, wherein all the beastes of the forest do myke. The lps roaring after their praye to kee theyr meate at God. The linnie arpleth, and they get them awaye together, and lye the downe in their denes. * An goeth forth to his workes, & to byr labour vntill the euenyng. * O Lorde, how ma-nifolde are thy workes: in wylsome hast p made them all: the earth is full of thy ryches.

So is this greate & wyde lce all, wherin are thynges creepynge innumerable, both small and greate beastes. There go the shippes, and there is that the, whom thou hast made, to take bys pastyme therein. * These wapte all vnto the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou geust it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thynk had, they are fylled with good. Wile thou bydest thy face, they are troubled: whan thou takest awaye their lyght, they dye, and are turned agayne to their dust. When thou lettest thy lyght goe forth, they shall be mad, and thou shalt reuue the face of the earth.

The glorious mayesty of the Lord shall endure for euer, the Lorde shall reioyce in bys workes. The earth shall tremble at the loke of hym: yf he do but touch the py-les, they shall smoke. I wyl syng vnto the Lorde as long as I lyue, I wyl praye my God while I haue my beynge. And so shall my wordes please bi: my ioye shall be in the Lorde. As for synners, they shall be consumed out of the earth, and the vngod-ly shall come to an ende: * praye thou the Lorde, O my soule.

them from the adversaries hande, and deli-uered them from the hande of the enemy.
* As for those that troubled them, I waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left. + Then belued they hys wordes, and sange people vnto brin.

But wythin a whyle they forgot by riches, & wolde not abyde long counsell.

C But lust came vpon them in the wilderness, and they tempted God in the deserte. And he gaue them their desyre, and sent leaneleil withall in to their ioule.

E They angered Moses also in the tentes, as Aaron the sonne of the Lorde. * So the earth opened, and swallowed vp Dathan, & covered the aggregation of Abiram. And the fyre was kindled in their company, and the flame bent vp the vngodly. * They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped y^e molten ymage. * Thus they turned their glory into the similitude of a calfe, that eateth haye. And they forgot God their Saviour, which had done to greates thynges in Egypte. Wonderous woiches in the lande of Ham, and fearful thynges by the red see. So he sayd he wolde haue destroyed the, had not Moses his chosen stude before hym in that gaffe: to turne away his wrathful indignation, lest he shulde destroye them.

E * See they thought scoone of y^e pleasaunt lande, and gaue no credence vnto his word. But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

E Then lyft he vp his hand agaynst them, to ouerthrowe them in the wilderness. To cast out their sede amonge the nations, as to scatter them in the landes. * They toynded them selues vnto Baal Peor, ad cate the offeringes of the deerd. Thus they prouoked hym vnto anger with their awne inuencions and the plage was greate amonge them.

E * Then lode vp Phinches and prayed, & so the plage ceased. And that was counted vnto him for righteoulnesse, amonge all posterites for evermore. * They angered him also at the waters of strepe, so y^e he punished Moses for their sake. Because they prouoked his myre, so y^e he spake vnuadvisedly with his tpyppes. Neither destroyed they the heathen, * as the Lorde commaunded them. But were mygiled amonge the heathen, and leneed they woiches. In so much y^e they worshipped their ydoles, which turned to their awne decaye. * See they offered their sonnes and their daughters vnto deuils: * And shed innocent bloude, vntill the bloude of their sonnes & of their daughters, whō they offered vnto the ydoles of Canaan, as the lande was defiled with blood.

E Thus were they slayned with their awne woiches, and went a whoringe with their awne inuencions. Therefore was y^e wrath of y^e Lorde kynled agaynst hys people, in so much y^e he abhorred hys awne enheritaunce.

E And he gaue the ouer into the bande of y^e heathen, and they that hated them, were loydes quer them. Their enemyes oppressed them, and had them in subiection. Many a tyme did he deliuer them, but they rebelled agaynst him with their awne inuencions, & were brought downe in their wyckednesse. Neuertheless, when he sawe their aburges, he herde their complaine. He thought vpo his couenaunt, & * pyried the, according vnto y^e multitude of his mercyes. See he made all those y^e had ledde the awaye captiue, to pylle them. Welcuer vs (O Lorde oure God) and gather vs from amonge the heathen: that we maye geue thanks to thy holy name, & make oure boast of thy prayse.

E * Welled be the Lorde God of Israel for everlastyng and woide without ende, & let all people saye: Ame, Amen. Hysc p^r Lorde

C CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

E * Steue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for ever. Let them geue thanks whom the Lorde hath redeemed, and deliuered from the bande of the enemye.

E And gathered the out of the landes, fro y^e East, and from the west, from the North and fro the South. They wot a straye in the wilderness out of y^e waye, & founde no curie to dwel in. Hongrie & thirst y^e their soule fastned in them. So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, as he deliuered them from their distresse. He led them forth by the ryght waye, y^e they might go to the cytie where they dwelt. What me wolde they for prayse the Lorde, for his goodnes, ad declare the wonders y^e he doth for the chyldren of men. * For he fastyfed y^e mynne soule, and filled the hongrye soule with goodnesse.

E Such as lyt in darcknesse & in the shadow of death, beyng fast bound in mytery & ydoles.

E Because they rebelled agaynst the woiches of the Lorde, and lygdyly regarded the cocell of y^e most hyghell, he also brought downe their hart thowow benynesse: they fell downe, & there was noue to helpe the. So whā they cried vnto y^e Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered the out of their distresse. For he brought the out of darcknesse & out of y^e shadow of death, & brake their bades in sonder.

E O y^e me wolde therefore prayse y^e Lorde for hys goodnesse: & declare y^e wonders y^e he doth for the chyldren of men: For he hath broken the gates of brasse, and smytte the barres of yron in sonder. Solp him are plaged for their offence, & because of their wyckednesse.

E Their soule abhorred all maner of meat, and they were cut hard at brathes doze.

E So whā they cryed vnto y^e Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered them out of their distresse. * He lent his word, and healed the, and they were saued from their destruction.

Thozow God we shall do great actes: & it is he, that shall treade downe our enemyes.

DEVS LAVDEM MEAM.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of dauid. Obe not thy tongue (O God) of my prayse. For yth mouth of yth vngodlye, and the mouth of the discrefull is opened vnto me, & they haue spoken against me with false tongues. They charged me about also with wordes of hatred, & fought agaynst me without a cause. For the love I had vnto them, so they take now my contrary part, but I geue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus haue they rewarded me euell for good, as hatred for my good will. For thou an vngodlye man to be ruler ouer hym, and let Satan stande at his ryght hande.

When sentence is geuen vnto him, let him be condemned, as let his prayer be turned in to synne. Let his dayes be few, and let another take his office. Let his chyldre be fatherlesse, as his wyfe a widow. Let his children be vagaboundes, & begg their dyet: lett them seke it also out of desolate places.

Let the extortioner consume all the he hath, and let straungers spoyle his labour.

Let there be no man to petye hym, nee to haue compassion vpon his fatherlesse chyldren. Let his posterite be destroyed, and in the next generacion let his name be cleane put out. Let yth wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembrance in the syght of the Lord, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye. Let them alwaye be before the Lord, that he maye rote out the memoriall of them from of the earth. And that because his synne was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse man, that he myght slaye him, that was bereft at the hert.

His helpe was in cursyng, & it shall happen vnto him he loued not blessing, therefore shall it be farre from him. He clothed him self with cursyng lyke as with a raiment: & it shall come in to his bowels lyke water, as lyke oyle in to his bones. Let it be vnto him as the cloke that he hath vnto him, as the gyble that he is alwaye gydded wth all.

Worship the Lord

In the past few years, the U.S. has seen a dramatic increase in the number of people who are seeking help for their mental health problems. This is a positive trend, as mental health issues are often overlooked or stigmatized. However, it is important to understand the underlying causes of these issues and how they can be effectively treated.

but unto thy name geue y praye, for thy long mercy, & for thy trawthe sauour. * Wherefore shall y thanke saye: where is now their God? As for oure God, he is in heauen, he hath done whatsoeuer pleased him. * Their vobles are syluer and gold, even the worke of mens handes. They haue mouth, and speake not: eyes haue they, and se not. They haue eares, & heare not: noses haue they, and smell not. They haue handes and handle not: fete haue they, ad walke not, neether speake they thorow their throte. They that make the, are lyke vnto them, and so are all soch as put their trust in them. But * (thou O y) Israel trust thou in the Lord, he is thy succoure & defence.
Ye house of Aaron put poure trust in the Lord: he is their helper, and defender.
Ye that feare the Lord, put poure trust in the Lord, he is their helper, and defender.

The Lord hath bene mynfull of vs, ad he shall blesse vs: euen he shall blesse the house of Israel, he shall blesse y house of Aaron. he shall blesse them that feare the Lord, both small ad great. The Lord shall en-crease you more and more: pou, & youre children. Ye are the blessed of the Lord, which made heauen & earth. All the whole hea-uens are the Lordes, the earth hath he geue about, and the paynes of hell gat hold vpon me. I shall synde trouble and heynesse, and I shall call vpon the name of the Lord (O Lord) I beseech the deliuer my soule.

Gracious is the Lord, and epytous, poe oure God is mercifull. The Lord pre-seruethe the temple: I was in myspe, and he helped me. Turne agayne then vnto thy rest, O my soule, for the Lord hath reme-ded the. And why * thou hast deliuered my soule from death, mine eyes from teares, and my fete from falling. I will walke before the Lord, in the land of the lyuing.

I beleued, and therefore will I speake, but I was sore troubled. I sayd (my hart):
* All men are lyers. What reward shall I geue vnto the Lord, for all the benefytes y he hath done vnto me? I will reueue the cyppe of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the Lord. I will paye my bondes now in the ptesence of all his people, epyt deare in the syght of the Lord is the deatch of his

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

When thou thankest vnto the Lord, for he is gracious, because his mercy endureth for euer. Let Israel now confesse, * (that he is gracious, and y his mercy endureth for euer. Let the house of Aaron now confesse, y his mercy endureth for euer.
Pee let them now that feare the Lord cofesse, that his mercy endureth for euer.

I called vpon the Lord in trouble, and the Lord herd me at large. * The Lord is on my syde, I will not feare what man doeth vnto me. The Lord taketh my parte w them that help me: therefore shall I fe my delye vpon myne enemies. It is better to trust in the Lord, then to put eny confydence in man. It is better to trust in the Lord, then to put eny confydence in pynces.

All nacions compassed me rounde about, but in y name of y Lord will I destroy the.
They

They kept me in on euery syde, they kept me in. I saye on euery syde, but in the name of the Lorde, I wyl destroie them. They came aboute me lyke bees, and are extracte, enen as the fyre amonge the thornes, for in the name of the Lorde I wyl destroie them.

Thou hast thynke of me, that I myght fall, but the Lorde was my hye.

The Lorde is my strength, & my hope, and is become my saluacion. The voyce of sorrow and heauynesse in my dwellinges of the ryghteous: the ryght hande of the Lorde byngeth myghty thynges to passe. The ryght hande of the Lorde hath preeminence, the ryght hande of the Lorde byngeth myghty thynges to passe. I wyl not dye, but lyue, and declare the workes of the Lorde.

The Lorde hath chastened & corrected me, but he hath not geuen me ouer unto death. Open me the gates of righteousness, that I may go into them, & geue thanks vnto the Lorde. This is the gate of the Lorde, the ryghteous shall entre into it. I wyl thanke the, for thou hast helpe me, and arte become my saluacion. The same stone whiche the builders refused, is become the heade stone in the corner. This was the Lorde's doynge, and it is marvellous in ouerseyers.

This is the daye, whiche the Lorde hath made, we wyl reioyce and be glad in it.

Helpe me now O Lorde, O Lorde, sende vs now prosperitie. Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the Lorde, we haue wysshed you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the Lorde. God is the Lorde, whiche hath thered vs lyght: bynde vs sacrifice with cordes, yee euen vnto the hoznes of paule.

Thou arte my God, and I wyl thanke the: thou arte my God and I wyl prays the.

Grue thanks vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious and his merce endureth for euer.

BEATINMACVLATI.

Blessed * are those that be vnderstand in the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lorde. Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke hym with theyr whole herte. For they wch do no wickednes, walke in his wayes. Thou hast charged that we shall diligently kepe thy commaundementes. That my wayes were made so directe, that I myght kepe thy statutes.

So shall I not be confounded, while I haue respect vnto al thy commaundementes: I wyl thinke of voyce an vnspayed herte, when I shall haue leaened the iudgements of thy ryghteousnesse. I wyl kepe thy remembrance, O forsake me not vnto the.

Where wch all shall a ponge man cleanse his waye. Euen by eueryng hyndelfe after thy worde. With my whole herte haue I sought the, & let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes. Thy wayes haue I byd within my herte, that I shoulde not synne agaynst the. Blessed art thou O Lorde, O teach me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I bene tellinges of all the iudgements of thy mouth. I haue binde as great deyle in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryces. I wyl talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My deyle shall be in thy statutes, and I wyl not forget thy worde.

Do wel vnto thy seruante, that I maye lye and kepe thy worde. Open thou mine eyes, that I maye se the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. I am a stranger vnder earth, wher not thy commaundementes from me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desyre that it hath alway vnto thy iudgements. Thou hast rebuked the proud, and casted are they that boere from thy commaundementes. Turne to me O Lorde, and rebuke, for I haue kept thy testimonies.

Bynges also dyd sette a speake agaynst me, but thy seruante is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my deyle, and my counsellors.

My soule cleueth to the dust, O quench thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue knowledgyd my wayes, and thou berdest me. O teach me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melleth a waye for very heauynesse, comforte thou me accordyng vnto thy worde. Take from me the waye of lying, & cause thou me to make much of thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, and thy iudgements haue I layd before me.

I haue spoken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not.

I wyl runne the waye of thy commaundementes, where thou hast set my herte at lybertie. Teach me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnderstandyng, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yee I shall kepe thy word my whole herte.

Make me to go in the path of thy commaundementes, for therein is my hye. Encline my herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to concouitise. O waken away myne eyes, lest they beholde vanitie: and quench thou me in thy waye. O stablish thy worde in thy seruante that I maye feare the.

Take awaye euerie buke that I am afrayed of, for thy iudgements are good. Beholde, my deyle is in thy commaundementes, O quench me in thy ryghteousnesse. Let thy loyng mercy come also vnto me, O Lorde, & thou shalt saluacion accordyng vnto thy word.

So shall I make answer vnto my blasphemers.

I made haste, and prolonged not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundements.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotte thy law.

At mynynge wilt I crye, to geue thanks vnto the, because of thy epytuous iudgements. I am a companion of all them that feare the and kepe thy commaundements. * The earth, O Lorde, is full of thy mercy. Teach me thy statutes.

For I am become lyke a bottle in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaut, when wilt thou be auctored of them that persecute me? The proude haue bygedd pyetes for me, which are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundements are true, they persecute me falsly. O be thou my helpe.

They had almost made an ende of me bys earth, but I forsoke not thy commaundements.

Quicke me after thy louynge byndes, & so shall I kepe thy testimonies of thy mouth.

O Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen. * Thy truth hallo remayne for one generation to another: thou hast laped the foundation of the earth, and it abyeth.

Understandynge, therefore I hate all wycked wayes. * Thy worde is a lantern vnto my feete, and a light vnto my pathes. I hate sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to hepe thy righteous iudgements. I am troubled aboute meane: quicken me, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy worde. Let the fresch springes of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgements.

O * My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngod-ly haue layed a snare for me, but per swarued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and wher they are the verp lope of my hart. I haue applyed myne herte to folspill thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende. I hate them ymagin euell thyn-gys, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my desire and myne, and my trust is in thy worde. I waue from me pe wycked, I will hepe the commaundementes of my God.

Stabilise me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be visipoynted of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yee my desire shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagin, but disceane. Thou puttest a waue all the vngodly of y earth lyke drosses therefore I loue thy testimonies. My fleshe trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgements. I deale with y thynge that is lawfull & right, O geue me not ouer vnto myne opprellours. Myne thou thy seruaunt to deptye in that which is good, that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted a waye with loyng for thy healyth, and for y worde of thy righteousnesse.

Deale woth thy seruaunt accordynge vnto thy louynge mercy, and teach me thy statutes. I am thy seruaunt. O graunte me vnderstandynge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lorde to lope to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundemen-tes aboute gold & precious stone. Therefore holde I theyrde all thy commaundementes and all false wayes I utterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therefore doth my soule kepe them. When thy worde goeth forth, it geueth light and vnderstandynge euen vnto y simple. I opened my mouth and shewe in my brest, for my desire was in thy commaundementes.

Loke thou vpon me, & be mercifull vnto me, as thou wilt to do vnto those y loue thy name. Myne myne steps in thy worde, and so shall no wyckednesse haue dominion ouer me. O deliuer me fro the wrong-eous dealinges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the light of thy countenance vpon thy seruaunt, and teache me thy statutes. Myne eyes glasse out wycked waye, because men kepe not thy lawe. Righteous art thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement. The testimonies that thou hast commaunded are exceeding righteous and true. * My zeile hath euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotte thy wordes. Thy wordes are tried to the vttermost, and thy seruantes loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. The righteousnesse is an euerlasting righteou-nesse, and thy lawe is the truth. Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my deptye in thy commaundementes. The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euersingling, O graunte me vnderstandynge, & I shall lyue. I call w my whole hert, heare me, O Lorde, I will hepe thy statutes. Preeuen vnto the do I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies. Early in the morn-ynge do I crye vnto the, for in thy word is my trust. Myne eyes preuent the nyght watches, & I maye be occupied in thy worde. Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse: quicken me accordynge as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou myne at bande, O Lorde, for all thy commaundementes are true.

I concerninge thy testimonies, I haue knowe longe tyme, that thou hast greyned the for euer. O confydre myne aduersyte, and deliuer me, for I do not forget thy lawe I reuenge thou my cause, and deliuer me, quicken me accordynge vnto thy word.

Healthis farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Great is thy mercy, O Lorde, quicken me as fast wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue from thy testimonies. It greuteth me, when I se the strangeness: because they kepe not thy lawe. Confydre, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaundementes, O quicken me accordynge to thy louynge kyndnesse. Thy worde is true fro euersynge, all y iudgements of thy righteousnesse endure for euer more.

Priues haue persecuted me without cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes. * I am as glad of thy worde, as one that synneth greates syles. As for lycs, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue. Shew tyme a daye do I praye the, because of thy righteous iudgements.
Great is the peace that thy lawe wysh loue thy lawe, and they are not offered at it.
Lorde, I haue looked for thy sayynge health, and done after thy commaundementes.

My soule hath kept thy testimonies, and loued the: accordynge. I haue kepte thy comaundementes

When the Lord turned agayne the captiue of Sion, then were we lyke unto them that became. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with ioye. Then sayd they amonge the heathen: the Lord hath done greates thynges for the. Pre, the Lord hath done greates thynges for vs all ready, wherof we reioyse. Turne our captiue, O Lord, as the ryuer in the south.

They that were in tears, shall reape in ioye. He that now goeth in hys waye weeping and heareth forth good sode, shall doubtles come agayne with ioye, and byngne hys theauens with him.

NISI DOMINVS.

A songe of Salomon of the sayres.

Except the Lord buyde the house, their labourers be lost that buyde it. Except the Lord kepe the citee the watchman waketh but in vayne. * It is but lost labour that ye haue to eyle vp early, and to late take rest, and eate the bread of carefullnesse: for lo, the gnyeth hys beloued scape. Lo, chyldren and the frute of the wombe are an heritage and gyfte, that cometh of the Lord. Lyke as the arrowes in the hande of the gyaunt, euen so are the yonge chyldren. Happy is the man, that hath bys quaper full of them, they shall not be ashamed, when they speake with the chieftieynes in the gate.

The proverbes of Salomon. Fo.rrbiiij.

The proverbes of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

Use the precept of thy teachers. Thou mayest not forsake them: for the voluptuousness of a young man and the desires of his youth. Whosoever completh her to be despised of all men, and propheseth destruction unto her destruction.

The proverbes of Salomon, the sonne of dauid kyng of Israel: to learne wisdom, & to perceiue the instruction, and to perceiue the wordes of vnderstanding: & thereby to receaue prudence, ryghte-sonnes, iudgement and equite. That the very simple maye knowe wyse, and yet the ponge maye knowe knowledge and true vnderstanding. By hearing the wise man shall come by more wisdom: and he is enbowed with vnderstanding that opraue wit to perceiue a parable, & the interpretation thereof. The wordes of the wise, & the doctrine speaches of the same. * The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. But foolkes despise wisdom & instruction. * Thy sonne, heare thy fathers doctrine: & thou shalt not be in the way of thy mother: for that shall bringe grace vnto thy hebd, and shall be as a chayne about thy necke.

* Thy sonne, consente not vnto spynners, yf they entice the, & saye: come with vs, we will lape wayte for blonde, & in the evening for the innocent without a cause: we shall swallowe then vp lyke the hell, & deuoure them quicke and hole, as those y go downe into the pyt. So shall we fynde all maner of costelye ryches, & fill our houses wth spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs: & let vs haue all one purse. * Thy sonne, walke not thou with the: refrayne thy fote fro their waye. * For their fete runne to cruel: they are hasty to shed blood. But in vayne is y net laid forth before y bydes eyes: yee they the selues lape wayte one for anothers bloud: & one of the wold slepe another. These are the wayes of all such as be contentious, none wold rauish anothers lyfe. * Wisdom cryeth about, & putteth forth her voyce in the streetes. She calleth before the congregacyon in the open gates, & cryeth: her wordes shalow y crye, saying: O ye chyld, how longe wyll ye loue chyldishnes: how longe wyll ye scornys deliue in counting, & the vniuersite be enuyns vnto knowledge? O turne yow vnto my correction: so, I wyll clype me in mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes.

* I haue called, & ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: & no man regarded it: but all my counsel haue ye despised: & see my correction at nought. Therefore shall I also laugh in pouer destruction, & mocke you, when that thinge that ye feare cometh vpon you: yuen when the thinge that ye be asfraid of, falleth in suddenly lyke a storme, & your misery lyke a storme: yee, when trouble & burnynge cometh vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall like me carely, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowlege, & receiued not the feare of the Lord: but abhorred my counsel, and despised all my correction. Therefore shall they eate the frutes of theyr awne waye, & be filled with their awne inuencions: for the turninge a waye of the vniuersite shall slepe the, and the prosperitie of foolkes shall be their awne destruction. * But who so baketh vnto me, shall be well safely, and be sure from any feare of euill.

Whosoever is to be embraced and set by. And an aboutuous woman: is to be eschewed.

My sonne, yf thou wilt receaue in my wordes, & kepe my commaundmentes by the, that thou wilt encline thyne eare vnto wisdom, & applye thyne hear then to vnderstandinge. For yf thou cryest after wisdom, and callest for knowledge: yf thou sekest after her as after money, and byggest for her as for treasure, then shall thou vnderstande the feare of the Lord, & fynde the knowledge of God. * For it is the Lord y geueth wisdom, out of his mouth cometh knowledge and vnderstandinge. He byndeth y by the foz the ryghteous. He preserveth the welfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke pynce: he keepeth them in the ryght pathe, & preserveth the waye of such as serue hym with goodynesse. Then shall thou vnderstande ryghteousnesse, iudgement, and equite: yee, and euery good path. Yf wisdom entre into thyne heerte, and thy soule deliue in knowledge: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstandinge shall kepe the. That thou mayest be deliuered fro the euell waye, and from the man that speaketh fromwarde thinges. From such as leaue the hye strete, & walke in the wayes of darkness: which receiue in dopping euill: and deliue in wicked thinges: whose wayes are crooked, & they fromwarde in the py pathes. That thou mayest be deliuered also: fro the strange woman, and fro her that is not thynge a wone: which geueth sweete wordes, forsooth the husbande of her youth, & forgoeth the conuenant of the Lord. For her house is enclined vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell. All they y go vnto her come not againe, neither take they holde of y waye of lyfe. Therefore, walke y in the waye of such as be righteous, and kepe the pathes of the ryghteous, for the iust shall dwell in the laide: and they that be perfect shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be trespased out of the land: and y wycked shall be trespased out of it.

The proverbes

The commandmentes of God must be diligently regarded and observed.

MY sonne, * forget not thou my lawe, for if thou shouldest forget my commandmentes, * for they shall prolonge thy dayes & yeeres of thy lyfe, and bringe p. grace. Let mercy and faithfulness urree go to the: bynde them about thy necke, and wape the in the tables of thyne herte. So shalt thou fynde fauoure & good vnderstanding, in the sight of God and men. But thy trust in God with all thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne a wne wyse. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto hym: & he shall order thy goynges. * Be not wylfe in thyne a wne conceyte: but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the Lord thy substance: and with thy firstlinges of all thyne increasement. * (gou. vnto the poore) so shall thy barnes be fylled with plentifullnesse: and thy presses shall flowe ouer with sweet wyne. My sonne, bespye not the chastenynge of the Lorde, neither saynte wde thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom the Lorde loueth, hym he chasteneth, and yet beloneth in him, euen as a father in his a wne chylde. Well is him that findeth wysdome, and openeth vnderstandinge: for the getting of it is better then any inarchandise of spicer, and the profit of it is better then golde. * Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and all the thinges that thou canst desire are not to be compared vnto her. Vpon her ryght hande is longe lyfe, and vpon her left hande is riches and honour. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes and all her pathes are peaceable. She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye hold vpon her, and blessed is he that keepeth her fast.

With wysdome hath the Lorde layed the foundation of the earth: and thowowe vnderstandinge hath be stablished the heauens. Thowowe his wysdome the deepthes bryake vp, and the cloudes drowpe downe the dew. My sonne, let not these thinges departe from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe and my counsell, that thou mayest haue the pleasure of longe lyfe and vnderstandinge: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, & grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye: and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If thou sleepst, thou shalt not be awaked: but shalt take thy rest, and sleepe sweetly. Thou needest not to be afrayed of any soden feare, neither for the violent russyngyn in of the vngodly when it cometh. For the Lorde shall b. b. by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Althowowe no good thinge from them that haue nebe, so longe as thyne hand is able to do it. * Awepe not vnto thy neygbar: go thy waye, & come agayne, to mo-rowe wylt I geue the: where as thou hast nowe to geue hym. Intende no burre vnto thy neygbarow, for yenge he wylde well in rest by the. * Awepe not lightly with a nyne man without cause, wether as he hath done the no harme. * Followe not a wicked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the Lorde abhorreth the rowarde: but hym counsell is amonge p. righteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynge of the righteous. As for the scornefull dothe: not be laugh the out: for scorne: but he geneth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession: but the me is the promotion that folles shall haue.

Hear, O ye chylzen, the fatherly exhortation, and take good heade, that ye maye leaue wysdome. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne, forsake nott ye my lawe. For when I myselfe was my fathers deare sonne, and specially beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and sayde vnto me: * Let thyne herte receiue my wordes, kepe my commandmentes, and thou shalt lyue. Get the wysdome: and get the vnderstanding: forget nott p. wordes of my mouth, and shewke not from them. Forsake her not and she shall preserve the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The cheere poppote of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to opene thyse dome: and before all thy goodes to gett the vnderstandinge. * Make moche of her and she shall promote the: Pee, y. thou embrace her, she shall brynge the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracyous hebd, and garnyshe the with a crowne of glory. Receiue my sonne, and receiue my wordes and the yeares of thy lyfe shall be many. I haue thewee the, the waye of wysdome, and ledde the into the ryght pathes. So that yf thou goest therein, there shall no strayenes hynder the: and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctryne, and let her nott go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come noot in the pathes of the vngodly: and walke noot in the waye of the wicked. Abhorre it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they cannot sleepe, excepte they haue spyd done some myschefe: neither take they any rest, excepte they haue spyd done some harme. For they enee the brade of wychednesse, and brynke the wyne of robbery. The pathes of the righteous shyneth as the lyght, that is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfect daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darkness: they knowe nott where they fall. * My sonne, marche my wordes, and enclipe thyne eares vnto my saynges. Let the not depeute from thyne eyes: but kepe them euen in the myddes of thyne herte.

The rpyghtouſneſſe of the iuſt ſhall deſp-ureth, but the wycked ſhall be taken in their awne vngodlyneſſe. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the conſpyence of riches ſhall perſhe. The rpyghtous ſhall be deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly ſhall come in his ſteade. * Do youe þ mouth of þ diſſemblers is his neygbour deſtroyed, but the youe knowledge ſhall the iuſt be delyuered. * When it goeth well with the rpyghtous, the cytye is merry: and when þ godly perſhe, there is gladneſſe. When the iuſt are in weale, the cytye prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decapeth. A fool bringeth vpon a ſtadour of his neygbour, but a wyſe man wyll kepe it ſe-crete. * A diſſemblinge perſon wyll diſco-uer many thynges, but be that is of a ſa-yethall herte, wyll kepe counsell: * There no good counsell is, there the people decaye. C but where as many are that can geue coun-cell, there is weale, * he that is ſerpe for a ſtrauger, hurteth him ſelfe: and be that medleth not w iuerſelyng, is ſure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honeſty, as for the wycked, they maynteyne rpyches. * he that is mercyfull doth hym ſelfe a benefyte, but who to hurteth his neygbour, is a ſynner. The labour of the vngodly proſper-eth not, but he that ſoweth rpyghtouſneſſe, ſhall receiue a ſure reward. Lyke as rpyghtousneſſe bynggeth lyfe: even ſo doth euill vnto euill, bynggeth death. The Loyde abhorreth that that be of a ſapned hert, but he hath plea-ſure in them that are of an vnderſtey comerſacion. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage, but the ſede of the rpygh-tous ſhall be perſeuered. A ſayre woman without diſcrete maners, is lyke a rpyge of gold in a ſwynes ſnoute. The deſyre of the rpyghtous is acceptable, but the hope of the vngodly is indignacion. * Some may geueth out his goodes, and is the rpyche, but the nrgard (baunge ynough) wyll departe from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouerty.

* he that is ſberall in geuynge, ſhall haue piſſy, and he that watereth, ſhall be watered alſo him ſelfe. Who ſo hoordeth vpon his coine, ſhall be curſed amonge the people: but blyſſynge ſhall lyght vpon his dead that getteth foode. he that labourerth for honeſty, ſynbeth his deſyre: but who ſo ſeketh after myſcheſt, it ſhall happen vnto hym.

he that truſteth in his rpyches, ſhall haue a fall, but * the rpyghtous ſhall ſtepe as the grene leafe. Who ſo maketh diſquetyneſſe in his awne houle, he ſhall haue wynde for his heitage, and the fool ſhall be ſeruant to the wyle. The ſeute of the rpyghtous is a tēpe of lyfe: and he that endeuorerth him ſiſte to wyne mens ſoules is wyſe. * If þ rpygh-tous be reſpyned vpon earth, howe much more then the vngodly and the ſynner.

The .xij. Chapter.

Who ſo loueth wyſdome, wyll be edtē to be reſourmed: but he þ hateth to be reſourmed, is a fool. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Loyde, but the wycked ymaginer wyll be deſpymne.

the rote of the rpghteous shall not be moued. A but wylly woman is ge- a crowne vnto her husbande: but the that behaueth her selfe vndoneclly, is a corrupcion in hys bones. The thoughtes of the rpghteous are rpght, but the ymaginacion of the vngodly are discaut- full. The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they maye laye waite for bloud, but y mouth of the rpghteous wyll deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wretched & they stande not: but the house of y rpghteous shall stande steadfaste. A man shall be commended for hys wyldome, but a foole shall be depyssed. * A symple man which laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgyous and lacketh bread. A rpghteous ma regardeth the lyfe of hys cattell, but the vngodly haue cruel betes. * He that sylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he y foloweth pyllynes, is a very foole.

* Who to hath picture to cōfigure at the wyne, leaueh hys honoure in hys auncient bygynge. The desyre of y vngodly buyteth after myscheffe, but the rote of the rpghteous bygerth forth fructe. The wretched falleth into the snare thow y maye of hys awnc mouth, but the iust shall escape out of parrill. Every man shall enioye good accordynge to the frute of hys mouth, and after the workes of hys handes shall he be rewarded. Like what a foole talketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyll be connecced. A foole vttereth hys wyath in all the haste, but a discrete man couereth wysonge. A iust man wyll tell the trueth, and shewe the thyng that is rpght: but a false wyfnesse discauteth. A sleandrous person pycketh lyke a sword: but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome.

A trewe mouth is euer constant, but a dissemblinge tonge is soone chāged. They that pyngyn euell in theyr mynde, wyll discaue: but the collectors of peace, shall haue ioye folowynge them. There shall no mysfortune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with misfyr. * The Lorde abhorreth lyinge lypes, but they that labour for trueth please hym. He that hath vnderstandynge, & both hyde wyldome: but an vdiscrete heretelych out hys folyshnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the ydle shall be vnder tribute. * Hyspnesse discauteth the heret of man, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne. The rpghteous excellith hys neygbour, but the waye of the vngodly wyll discaue them selues.

The discrete full man shall not ruste, that he toke in buyynge, & but the riches of the idle man is of grent valwe. In the waye of rpghtousnesse there is lyfe, and in the same waye there is no death.

A wyle soune wyll herken to hys fathers warninge, but he that is scorpefull, will not heare whē he is reproofed. A good man shall enioye y frute of his mouth but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall be spoyled. He that keepeth hys mouth keepeth hys lyfe: but who so openeth hys lypes to euill, destruction byyn selfe. The slouarde wolde sayne haue: & cannot get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty.

A rpghteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shameth both other and hym selfe. A rpghtousnesse keepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynesse doth ouerthrowe the spynner. * Some men are rpght, though they haue nothinge, agayne some men are poore, hauing greate riches. With goodnes euer man deliuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyll not be repoured: The lyght of the rpghteous maketh ieyfull, but * the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thynges with a humblement, there is wyldome. Clapnet gotten goddes are soone spent: but they that be gathered to gether with the hande, shall increase. Longe taryenge for a thyng that is differred, greueth the herte: but whē the desyre cometh: it is a tree of lyfe. * Whoso despyreth anye thyng, shall be hurt for the same: but he y feareth the commaundement, shall haue the rewarde. * A discretfull soune shall haue no good: but a discrete seruante shall do full well, and he maye shall ioye.

* The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto y wyse, that it maye kepe hym from the snares of death: Good vnderstandynge geueth fauour, but hard is y waye of the despyers. A wyse man doth all thynges with discretion, but a foole wyll declare hys foly. An vngodly messenger folleth into myscheffe, but a farythfull ambassadour is wholsome. He y thynketh to scape, but he is reformed, cometh to poverty: & shame: but whoso regardeth correction, shall come to honour. When a desyre is brought to passe, it belpeth y soule: but fooler counteth a byominacion to departe from euell. He that goeth in the company of wyse men, shall be wyse: but who is a company of fooler, shall be hurte. * Whiche foloweth vpon spynners, but the rpghteous shall haue a good rewarde. He that is veritious, leaueh an enheritaunce vnto hys chyldren: & hys riches of the lymer is layed vpon the iust. There is plenteousnesse offode in the felde of the poore, but y felde not well ordred is without frute. * He y spareth the rodde, hateth hys soune: but whoso lo- ueth hym, chastiseth hym by tymes.

* The rpghteous catech, and is satisfieth, but y bely of y vngodly hath neuer ynough,

The proverbes.

Wise women upholden theyr house, but a folysh wyfe plucketh it downe. He that walketh in the ryght path of the Lorde feareth him: but he that forgetteth him selfe a waye fro his wayes, dyspysseth hym.

In the mouth of the folysh is the rod of pryde, but the lippes of the wyse wyll pascen them. Where no ore are, there perysheth emptye: but where the ore labourer there is moche frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyll not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye. A sojournfull body seeketh wyldome, and fyndeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by, vnto hym that wyll vnderstande.

Se that thou medle not with a foole, in whiche thou perceyvest to be no knowledge. The wyldome of hym that hath vnderstanding is, to take hede vnto his waye but the folyshnesse of the wyse wyse dyckeneeth. Foles make but a spoore of fyne, but there is enuouable loue amonge the ryghteous.

The herte seeketh hys owne lyues vnto the ende: neither shall stranger be partaker of his tope. The house of the vngodly shall be o-uerthrowne, but the tabernacle of the ryghteous shall flourish. There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death. The herte is sojournfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrth is heynnes. A backsliding herte shall be filled wth his owne wayes, but a good man shall lyue of his frutes. An ignorant body beleueeth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstanding, loketh well to his going. A dyscreetfull foule shall haue no good, but a dyscreetfull man shall be full. A wyse man shall prosper. A folysh man feareth, and departeeth fro euill, but a furious foole goeth on presumpuously. An vnpatient man braleth folyshly: but he that is well aduysed, is hated of the foole. The ignorant haue folyshnes in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euill shall bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall waite at the doores of the ryghteous. The poore is hated euen of hys owne neyghbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Whoso dyspysseth his neyghbour both a misse: but blest is he that hath pytie of the poore. He that putteth hys trust in the Lorde, loueth to be mercifull. Without doute they erre that ymagyne wychednes, but they that mule vpon good thynges, vnto the Lorde shall happen mercy and faythfulnesse. In euery labour there is some profyte. But only lipp labourer, bringeth forth penurye. Ryches are as a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignorance of foolis is very folyshnesse. A faythfull wytnesse dyspysseth foules, but a dyscreetfull wytnesse bringeth forth lyes. The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, and dyschydren are vnder a sure defence. The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the sharnes of death. The increase and prosperite of the comens is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confusyon of the prynces. He that is patient, hath muche vnderstanding: but he that is soone displeased, prouoketh folyshnesse. A merie herte is the lyfe of the body, but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. He that doth a poore man wrong, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pytie of the poore, doth honour vnto God. The vngodly is cast awaye for hys iniquyte, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in death. Wyldome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstanding and it shall be knowne amonge them that are vnderneb. Ryghtconnesse setteth by the people, but the steretye of the heben is synfull. A dyscreet seruante is a pleasure vnto the kyng, but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

The vngodly is cast awaye for hys iniquyte, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in death.

Wyldome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstanding and it shall be knowne amonge them that are vnderneb. Ryghtconnesse setteth by the people, but the steretye of the heben is synfull. A dyscreet seruante is a pleasure vnto the kyng, but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

The .xv. Chapter.

Softes answere putteth do: A wyse displeasure, but forwardes wordes prouoke vnto anger.

The tonge of such as be wyse, vseth knowledge a right, as for a folysh mouth it blabbereth out nothing, but folyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loken euery place, beholding both the good & badde.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A foole dyspysseth hys fathers correccion, but he that taketh hede whan he is repponed shall haue the more vnderstanding.

Where the ryghtconnesse is plentyfull, there is hery greates power: but the ymaginacion of the vngodly shall be croked out. The house of the ryghteous is full of ryches, but the increase of the vngodly are nye destruction. A wyse mouth pouereth oute knowledge but the herte of the folysh both not so.

The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym. The wyse of the vngodly is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde: but who so foloweth ryghtconnesse, hym be loueth.

He that forsaketh the ryght strete, shall be soze punysshed: and who so hateth correccion, shall dye. The bell wher her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, howe moche more then the heres of men. A sojournfull body loueth not one that rebuketh hym: neither will he come vnto the wyse. A merie herte maketh a chearfull countenance, but an heuy herte compelleth a man to spech. The herte of hym that hath vnderstanding, doth seke after knowledge, but the mouth of foolis is fedd with folyshnesse. All the dayes of the poore are mysurable, but a quyet herte is her is as a continual feast. * Better is a litle with the feare of the Lorde, then greate treasure with lowe. * Better is a measse of pouage with lowe, the a fore with euell will. * A nangey man steech by scyfe, but he that is patient, spileth dysorde. The waye of a flourisher, is as it were hedged with thornes, but the strete of ppyghteous is well clenped. * A wyle sonne maketh a glad father, but an vn discrete body shameth his mother. A fooler cryeth in foolyshe thinges, but a wyle man loketh well to his awne gynges. Vnauyded thoughtes shall come to naught, but where as me are p canne geue counsell, there is stedfastnesse. A loyfull thyng is it, to a man wyl his counsell is folowed: and very pleisant is a wayde spoken in due season. The waye of lpe leadech vnto heauen, that a man shal be ware of hell beneth. The Lorde wyl breake downe the house of p proude, but he shall make fast the borders of p widowe. The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wycked, but pure wordes of innocetes are pleisant vnto hym. The conctious man reth vpp his awne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shall lpe. * (The yowle mercy and ferech are thame power, and thowre p feare of the Lorde doth cury one ryght euell.) The herre of ppyghteous shideth his answere asof. But p wycked mms moueth speth out myshere. The Lorde is fere fro p vngodly, but he heareth p prayer of ppyghteous. Lyke as the clearmede of the eyes cryeth the herre, so doth a good name fede the bones. The enre that detheneth to the reformacion of lpe, shall dwell amonge the wyle. He that refuseth to be reformed, despleth his awne soule: but he that submyteth hym selfe to correccion, is wyle. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght science of wyl doome, and lowynes goeth before honoure.

Man maye well purpose a thyng in his herte, but the answer of the tonge cometh of the Lorde. * A man thyneketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lorde that iudgeth the myndes. * Commptech the wayes vnto the Lorde and loke what thou dryfist, if thou prothe. The Lorde doth all thynges for his awne sake, yee and when he kepeth the vngodly for the daye of weath. The Lorde abhorreth all such as be of a proude herte, his herte is againt ther hande and they shall not escape as innocetes. * The degree of a good lpe is to do ryght thynges for that is more acceptes vnto god, then to lpe by factes. With louinge mercy & faythfulnesse, synnes be forgiven, & who so feareth p Lorde shal be safe. Wyl a man wayes pleat the Lorde, he maketh his very enemyes to be his frenedes. Better is it to haue a lpe thyng with ryghteousnes, then greate riches wylowly gotten. * A man deuileth a waye in his herte, but it is p Lorde that ordyeth his gynges. When the prophete is in the lppes of the kyng, his mouth shall not go wronge in submyt. A fewe measure a fewe balaurce are the Lodes indgment, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a greate abominacion when kynges are wycked, for a kynges seate shal be holden vp with ryghteousnesse. Ryghteous lppes are pleisant vnto kynges: and he that speaketh the trouth shal be beloued. The kynges displeasure is a messenger of death, but a wyle man will pacifye him: The cherefull countenance of the kyng is lpe, and his louynge fauoure is as the euenynge dewe. * To haue wyl dome in possession is better then to haue golde: and to get vnderstandynge, is rather to be cholen then to haue floure. The path of ppyghteous is to eschue euell: a who lo loketh well to his wayes, kepeth his awne soule.

Discrepte outnes goeth before destruction, and after a proude somake ther foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spowles with the proude. He that hanbleth a matter wylly, opeyneth good: & blef. * He that putteth his trust in the Lorde. Alho to hath a wyle vnderstandynge, shal be called to counsell: and he p can speake sayr, shall haue the more lernynge. Vnderstandynge is a well of lpe vnto him that hath it: as for the chalenge of foolcs, it is but foolyshe. A wyle hart ordyeth his mouth wylly, and ameth the doctryne in his lppes. Fawr wordes are an hony cōbe, a refrethyng of the mynde, & health of p bones. * There is a waye that me thyneke to be ryght, but the ende ther of leadech vnto death. A troublous soule dysquyeth her selfe, for her awne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly personne steech vpon euell, and in dyslppes he is as an whote burninge fyre. A frowarde body cauleth stryfe, and he that is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuyson amonge prynces. A wycked man begyleth his ryghte neighbour, and leadech him in to the waye that is not good.

The vngodly shal be gadered vpp his eyes v ymagineth myshere, & wher he moueth his lppes, he wyl do some harme. Age is a crowne of wylhypp, pte he folde in the waie of ryghteousnesse. A patient man is better then one strōge: and he that can rule him selfe, is more worth then he that wynerth a cypre. The lordes are cast in to the lappe, but the ordynge ther of standeth all in p Lorde.

Ch. xxii. Chapter.

Sette

maketh manly: but the clke geueth a rough answer. And that loueth his frendes will be compynable with them: and some frende sticketh faster to a man then his brother.

C The. xix. Chapter.

Better is the poze that lyueth godly, then þe blaspemye that is but a fole. There no discrecion is, there þe soule is inclined to the thyng that is not good, and is wyse on fote, and oftenberþ. Folyshenes maketh a man to go out of hys waye, & then is hys berþe vnpatient against the Lord.

Þe chylde make many frendes: but the poze is forsaken of hys neygþbour. A false witness shall not remayne vnpunysþed: and he þe speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon great men: and euery man fauoureth hym that geueth rewarde. As for the poore, he is hated amonge all his brethren: yee, hys awne frendes wol choawe fro him: and yf be a fke them the cause, they dyspayne to answer hym. He that is wyse, lo- ueth hys awne soule: and kepeth vnder stan- dyng, that he maye prosper. A false witness shall not remayne vnpunysþed: and he that speaketh lyes shall perye. Pleasure becom- meth not a fole, much noze vnwisely is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of pynces.

A wyse man can put of displeasure: and it is hys honour to lete some fautes passe. The kynges displeasure is lyke the ro- ryng of a lyon, but þe hys frendys lyke the dewe vpon the grasle. An vnbycete sonne is the heuyness of his father: & a bza- lyng wyfe is lyke the top of an house, where chozowte is euen dyspyngge. Housle and rpehell maye a man haue by the herfyage of hys elders: but a bycete woma is the gyft of the Lord. Slouthfulnes byngeth slepe: and a soule accustomed with crafte shall suf- fer longer. Whoso kepeth the comanndme, kepeth his awne soule: but he that regardeth not hys poore, shall dye. He that hath pitye vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lord: and loke what he layeth out, it shall be payed hym agayne. Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym. A mik of great wrath beareth a pynne: and though thou once deliuer him, thou mult agayne do almost for hym. A gene eare vnto good counsell, and be content to be refoz- med, that thou mayest be wyse in thy latter dayes. There are many deuycers in a mans berþe: neuertheles, the counsell of the Lord shall stande by hym. It is a mans worship to do good: better is it to be a poze ma then a dissembler. The frace of the Lord bringeth a man to lyfe: and he shall rest the hole night in plenteuousnes, without visytacion of anye plague. A southful man shuterþ his hysdes into his byson, as into the pot: and will not take payne to put it to hys mouth. A frow nysseth a scornfull persone, the ignozaunt shall take better heed: and þe þou reponest one that hath vnderstondyng, he wyll be the wyse. He that byteth his father or Queth out hys mother, is a shamefull and an vn- worthy sonne. Wy sonne, heare nomore the doctrine that leadeth the vnto errors from the wordes of vnderstondyng. A false witness laugheth iudgement to kozne: and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednesse. Punyementes are ordeyned for the scorn- full: and cresspes for foolcs lackes.

C The. xx. Chapter.

Wne maketh a ma to be scornfull: and stronge dyspche causeth a ma to be vnquyte: who so delipeth therein, shall neuer be wyse. The kyng ought to be feared as the roaryng of a lion: who lo prouoketh him vnto anger offen- deth agens his awne loue. It is a mans ho- nour to kepe him selfe fro strife: but they that haue pleasure in bzaulyng are foolcs euery one. A slouthfull body wyll not go to plowe for colbe of the wynter: therfor shall he go a beggynge in somner, & haue nothyng. Wyse counsell in the berþe of man is lyke a water in the depe of the earth: and a man that hath vnderstondyng byngeth he fowth. Many there be that wolbe be called good doers: but wher shall one fynde a true saythfull man.

Whoso leadeþ a godly and an innocēt life: is righteous and happy shall hys chyldre be whom he leaueth behynde him. A kyng that stetteth in the chayne of iudgment, and loketh well about hym, dyspeth a waye all euell. Who can saye, my berþe is cleane, I am in- nocent from synne: The vse two manner of weyghtes, or two manner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto the Lord. A childe is knowne by his educacion, whe- ther his workes be pure & ryght. The care to heare, the eye to se: the Lord hath made the both. Welpe not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto poortye: but open thine eyes, & thou mayst haue bled enough. It is naught it is naught (sayeth he that byeth any chyn- ge): but when he cometh to his awne boue, then he boasteth of hys peny worth. A man that hath a mouth of vnderstondyng hath many precpous stones and colly Jewels.

Take hys garment that is licitpe for a stranger: and take a pledge of hym for the unknowen mas sake. Euery man lypheth the heed that is gotten with discreat: but at the last þys mouth shall be fylled with grauell. Thowowe counsell, the thynges that men deuys go forwarde: and w discretion ought warres to be taken in hande. The crafte þe- seatfull be waryth secret colcell: and to him that customeþ flaterynge lypnes, ioyne not thy selfe. Whoso curseth dyspacher & mo- der: his lypst shall be put out in the myddes of darkness. * The heritage that cometh to hastily at the first, shall not be payed at the ende. * Shape not thou: A wylle copense well: but put thy trust in the Lorde, and he shall defende the. * The Lorde abhorreth two maner of wyrders, and a fals balace is an euill thing. * The Lorde ordreth curremyng goings: howe maye a ma then vnderstande hys awne waye? It is a shere for a ma to denounce that which is holy: and after the vowe to turne to rhyme awne vse, the thinge thou hast vowed. * A wyle king destroyeth the vngodly, and byngeth the whele ouer them. The lantern of the Lorde is the bryght of ma: and goth thorowe all the inward partes of the body. * Mercye and faythfulness preserue the kinge, and with loynynge kyndnes hys seate is holden by. The strength of yonge men is theyr wordwyse, and a grep herb is an honour vnto the aged. Woundes byye awaye euell, & so do steppe the inward partes of the body.

The kyng is here in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither so cure he wyl. Every man thynketh hys awne waye to be ryght: but the Lorde iudgeth the herres. * To do ryghteousnesse and iudgement is moie acceptable to þe Lorde then sacrifice. A yelousieus loke, a proude stomache: and the plotting of the vngodly is synne. The deuyres of one that is diligent byng pleynfoules: but he that is vnadvised cometh vnto pouertry. Whoso hoodweth wyrdchelle with the dyscreetfulnesse of hys tongue, he is vayne and a foole, and lyke vnto the that seke theyr awne deeth. The robberys of the vngodly shalbe theyr awne destruction: for they wyl not do the thinge that is ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but the wayes of hym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the houle toppre, then with a bjaulyng woman in a wyde houle. The soule of the vngodly wyrdeth euill: and hath no ptepe vpon hys neyghbour. * When the scoinefull is punyshed, the ignozaunt take the better heed: and when he seeth the wyle men prospre, he wyl receaue the moie vnderstandynge. The ryghteous man wyll conspydereth the house of the wicked: and for theyr wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso toppeth hys eares at the ceping of the poore: he shall cpe hym selfe, and not be heard. A meyrwarde pacspeth displeasure, and a glee in the bolome; splyeth furiosynesse. The iuste delpeth in donnge the thyng that is ryght: but ouer the wayers of wyrdchellnes bageth stru-cys. The ma that wandreth out of the waye of wyldome, shall remayne in the cgre-gare of the dred. * He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shalbe a poore man. Whoso de-lyreth in wyne and delicates, shall not be ryche. The vngodly shalbe quen for the ryghter was: and the wyrded for the iuste.

* It is better to dwell in a wilderness then with a chydynge & an angre woman. In a wyle mannes houle, there is greute treasure and oyle: but a foolysh boy spendeth by all. Whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercy, synneth bathe tpe, ryghteousnesse, and honoure. A wyle man wyrdeth the cteps of the myghty: and as so, the strength that they trust in, he byngeth it downe. * Whoso kepeth hys mouth and hys tonge: the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scornfull man, which in wyath barre woche malicyoulye. The voluptuousnesse of the stoutfull is hys awne deeth: for his handes wyl not labour. The couetys and desyret all the daye longe: but the ryghteous is allwaye ceping, and kepeth not byng deche. The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominacion: howe manche moze when they offre the thinge that is gorten wyl wyrdchelle.

* A false wyne shal perpeche: but he that is a true man boldly speareth that he hath heard. In vngodly man goeth forth raly: but the iuste reformeth hys awne waye.

* There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandynge, there is no counsell agaynst the Lorde. * The hoire is prepared agaynst the daye of battayll: but the Lorde geueth the victoerye.

¶ The .xxij. Chapter.

Good name is moie worth then greater ryche, and a lowe-uine knowre is better then siluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together: the Lorde is the maker of them all. A wyle man seeth the plage, and dyeth hym selfe: but the folysh go on styll and are punyshed. The ende of lowlynes and the feare of God is ryches, honoure, prosperite, and healt. Thoznes and inares are in the waye of the frowarde: but he that doeth hepe hys soule, wyll sle from foche. Teache a chylde in hys yowth what waye he shalbe go: for he shall not leaue it, when he is olde. The ryche rylch þe poore: the hoire is seruant to the lender. He that forweth wyrdchellnes shall reape sorowe: and the rodde of hys crucielye shall perpeche. * He that hath a louyng eye shalbe blessed: for he geueth of his bread vnto the poore. * Whoso giveth his soule for to buye a honoure: but he taketh awaye the soule of such as reuene them. Call out the scoinefull man, and so shall strepe go out as hym: yee, variatice & sleaunder shall cease. Whoso delpeth to be of a cleane herte and of gracpous lyppes, the kyng

C The xxviii. Chapter.

The vngodly fleyeth whā no man chasteth hym, but the ryghteous standeth by as a lyon. * Because of synne, p lānde doth oft chas-ge her plice: but thow men of understandyng and wysdome a realme endureth longe. One poore man oppres-singe another by violence, is lyke a continual rayne that destroyeth the frute.

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodly: but they as kepe p lawe, abhorre the. * Wylked men dyscerne not the thyn-ge that is ryght, but they that seke after p lawe, discusse all thynges. * A poore man leadyng a goble lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in foward wayes.

Who so keepeth the lawe, is a chyld of understandyng: but he that is a company of vytyous men, shameth his father. He that by vylurye and vniuste gaynes gathe-rith ryches: he shall lāye them in store for a man that will ppye the poze. * He that turneth a waye pbye care from hearing the lawe, hym praye shal be adhomynable.

Who so lebeth the ryghteous into an euell waye, shall fall into bys adone pytt, but the iust shall haue the good i possesse. The ryche mā thynketh him self to be wys, but the poore p hath understandyng, can perceaue him well ynough. * When ryghteous men are in prosperite, then doth honoure flozzy but when p vngodly come vp, p state of mē chaungeth. He that byderth his synnes, shall not prosper: but * who so knowledgeth the and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy. Well is him that standeth alwaye in awe: as for him that hardeneth his herte, he shall fall i to myldeste. Lyke as a roarynge lyon and an hygre beare, eue so is an vngodly pynce ouer the poore people. Where the prince is without vnderstandyng, there is greate oppresyon and wronge: but p he be such one as hateth couerousnesse, he shall longe taryne. * He that by violence sheweth any mans bloude, shall be a renegate vnto to bys graue, and no man shall be able to soutcoure hym. * Wlho so leadeth a goble or an innocent lyfe, shall be saued: but he that goeth foward wayes, shall once haue a fal.

He that spyleth his land, shall haue ple-teousnesse of bread: but he p foloweth pbynesse, shall haue pouerte ynough. A man p dealeth sapthfully, shall be spyled with dyl-synges: * he that maketh to much bysle for to be ryche, shall not be vngyle. To haue respect of perionnes in iudgement is not good: And why? A mā will do wronge, yee, euen for a peece of bread. He p will be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and confydeteth not, p pouerte shall come vpon hym.

He that folowynge my precepts reuoketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the last, then be that flattereth hym. * Wlho so rob-berth his father and mother, and sauyeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a destroyer.

He that is of a proude stomacke, & without fear, sheweth by synne: but he that putteth hys trust in the Loide, shall be well fedd.

He that trusteth in bys adone pette, is a foole: but he p dealerth wysely, shall be safe.

He that groweth vnto the poore, shall not lache: but he that turneth a waye pbye red loch as be in necessity, shall lustre greate pouerte hym selfe. * Wlhen the vngod-ly are come vp, men are sayne to byde them selues: but when they perp, the ryghteous increafe.

C The xxx. Chapter.

That is p fneched, & wyll not be reformed, shall sodenly be destroyed without any help. * Wlhen the ryghteous haue the ouerhande, the people are i prosperite: but when the vngodly beareth rule, there the people mourne. Wlho so loneth wydome maketh his father a glad mā: * but he that hepeth company with harlottes, sheweth a waye that he hath. Wlhen true iudgement the kyng setteth vp the lande, but p he be a man p oppelleth the people with gathe-rynges, he turneth it by bye downe. Wlho so flattereth hym neyghbour, lappeth a nette for his fete. * The synne of p wicked is his adone snare, but the ryghteous doth trye & reioyse. The ryghteous casteth p cause of p poore: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandyng. Wylked people byge a crye in decaye, but wyse mē see it wth agayne. If a wyse man go to laue wth a foole (wether he deale wth him friendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloude thyllike haile the ryghteous: but p iust & seke his soule. A foole powreth out bys spytte altogether but a wyse mā keepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

If a plice be yete i lyes, all his strengthes are vngodly. The poore and the lender met

Geue stronge drinke vnto such as are condemned to death, and wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye drinke it, and forgett they: myscey & aduertytie.

Be thou an aduocate, for the dowe and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all such as be sorowful in this transitorye worlde. Ope thy mouth, defende the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

Who so spyneth an honest faythfull woman, he is much more worth then perles. Tcheere of her husband maye safelye trust in her, so that he shall fall in no powerte.

She will do hym good and not euill, all the dayes of her lyfe. She occupyeth woll and flaxe, & labourerth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchauntes wyffe, that byngeth her vntaples from a farre.

She is vp in the nyght season, to prouide meate for her housholde, and fode for her maydyns. She consydyereth lande, & byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vynerarde. She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, & couereth her armes. And yf she perceaue that her housholde doth good, her candle goeth not out by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to the spyndell: and her hande taketh holde of p distaffe. She openeth her hande to the poore, & she stretcheth forth her handes to soche as haue neede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurte her house, for all her housholde folkes are clothed with fainelett. She maketh her selfe saye ornameyntes, her clothyng is whyte sylke & purple.

Her husband is much let by in the gates, when he spytter amonge the rulers of the land. She maketh cloth of sylke and sellet it, & deliuereth gyddes vnto the marchaunt. Strength and honoure is her clothyng, & in the latter daye she shall reioyse. She openeth her mouth with wysdome, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

She loketh well to the wayes of her housholde: & eateth not her bryd with pplynes. Her children shall crye, and call her blessed: her housband shall make moch of her.

Many daughters there be that gat her riches together, but thou goest aboute them all. As for fauoure, it is diserafull, and bentic is a wayne thyng: but a woman that feareth p Lozhe, she is worthy to be praysed. Geue her of p frute of her handes and let her aduise wo:kes prayse her in the gates.

The booke of the Preacher, otherwyle called ecclesiastes.

C The fyft Chapter.

C That is in this woorde is vanitie.

I These are the wordes of the Preacher, sonne of David, kynge of Ierusalem. * All is but moſte vayne vanite (ſapeth ſe Preacher) & al is moſte vayne (I ſay) & but plaine vaneite. For what els hath a mā, of all ſe labour þe taketh vnder ſe Sunne? One generacion paſſeth awaye, another cometh, but ſe earth abyddeth ſpall. The Sunne aſpeth, þe ſunne goeth downe, & returneth to hys place, þe he maye there ſite vngaine. The wiſe goeth to ward þe South, & turneth vnto the north, ſearcheth his copalle, whyleſt a-boute, & goeth forth, & his circuite returneth agayne to him ſelfe. * All ſe ſoundes rume into the ſee, & yet þe ſee ſe ſelfe is not fylled: for loke vnto what place þe waters rume, thence they come to flowe agayne. All thinges are ſo hard to be knowne, þe no mā can expreſſe the. * The eye is not ſatiſfied w ſpght, the care is not fylled w hearinge. * The thing þe hath bene, cometh to paſſe agayne: & þe thing þe hath bene done, ſhall be done agayne, there is no newe thing vnder þe ſunne. Is there eny thing wherof it maye be ſayde: lo, this is newe: for it was longe agoon þe thyngs þe haue bene before vs. The thing þe is paſt, is out of remembrance: Euen ſo the thyngs þe are for to come, ſhall no moze be thought vpon amonge them þe come after. I my ſelfe ſe Preacher, was kynge of Iſrael at Ierulaſe, & vye applye my mynde to ſeke out & ſearch for þe knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauē. Soch trouble and labour hath God geue vnto ſe chyliden of men, to exceſſe them ſelues therin.

* Thus I haue conſidered all the thinges þe come to paſſe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vaneite, & vexaciō of minde. The croked cannot be made ſtraight, noz þe thinge þe is vnperfecte, cannot be accepted w thynges þe are perfecte. I comen to w mine auncer te, ſapeth: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotte moze wyldeome, the all they þe haue bene before me in Ierulaſe. Per my herte had grente expeſſe of wiſdome & knowledg, for there vnto I applyed my mynde: þe I myght knowe what were wiſdome & vnderſtāding, what were errour & foliſhnes: & I perceined, þe this alſo was but a vexaciō of minde: for where moche wiſdome is, there is alſo ſo grete trouble & diſquietnes: & þe moze knowledge a man hath, þe moze is hys care.

I he ſayd I thus in my herte: Now go I to, I wil take mine eaſe & haue good dayes. But lo, þe is vaneite: alſo in ſo moche þe I ſayd vnto ſe mā gyue to laughter: þe arte madde, & to myſth: what doſt thou? So I thought I my herte, to gyue my deſt vnto wyne and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wyldeome, and to comprehend foliſhnes vntill the tyme þe I amoge all þe thinges whych are vnder the Sunne I myght ſe what were beſt for men to do, ſo longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made glorious ſapre wozeches. I buylded me houſes, and plantid vnyuerſarbes. I made me orchardes and garbes of pleaſure, and plantid trees in them of all maner frutes. * I made poles of water, to water þe greene and feutle trees withall. I bought ſeruauntes and maydens, and had a grete houſholde. As for catell and ſhepe, I had moze ſubſtaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierulaſe. I gathered ſyluer & golde together, euē a treaſure of kyngeſ and landes.

I prouyded me ſpyngers & women, which coulde playe of inſtruments, to make men myſth and paſtime. I gat me plaiteres & ſongers of muſicke. And I was greater and in moze wozeches, the all my predeceſſours in Ierulaſe. For wiſdome remained with me: & loke what ſocure myne eyes deſyred, I let the haue it: and wherein ſoener my herte deſyred, or had eny pleaſure, I with helde it not fro it. Thus my herte reioyced in all that I vye, and this was my poſſion of all my trouble. But when I conſydered all the wozeches that my handes had wrought, and all þe labour that I had tahe therein, lo, all was but vaneite and vexacion of mynde, and nothing of eny value vnder þe Sunne. The turned I me to conſider wyldeome, erreure, and foliſhneſſe: for what is be among men that myght be compared to me the hynge in ſoch wozeches? and I ſawe: that wyldeome excelleth fooliſhneſſe, as farre as light doth darckneſſe. For a wyle man hath his eyes in his head, but the fool goeth in the darckneſſe: I perceined alſo, þe they both had one ende: I thought I i my mynde, If it hap pen vnto the fool as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny moze for wiſdome? So I confeſſed within my herte, that this alſo was but vaneite. For the wyle are euē as lytle in remembrance as the foliſh, for þe dayes ſhall come wþe all ſhall be forgotten, per þe wiſe man dieth as well as þe fool. Thus beganne I to be weep of my lyfe, in ſo moche that I coulde awayne with nothing that is done vnder the Sunne, for al was but vaneite & vexacion of minde: Per I was weep wherep of all my labour, wherch I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man: that cometh after me: And who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyle mā or a foole? And yett shall he be loz of all my labours, which I with such wylsome haue taken vnder the Sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to retrace my mynde from all such traunce, as I toke vnder the Sunne: for so much as a man shulde weery hym selfe with wylsome, with vnderstanding and oportunitie, yett be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer sweett for the. This is also a vayne thyng & a great misery. For what getteth a mā of all the labour and traunce of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heynesse, sorrow and desquyernes all the dayes of his lyfe? In so much that his hert canot rest in the nyght, this is also a vayne thyng? * Is it not better then for a mā to eate & drynke, & his soule to be ierry in his labour: Pre I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God: For who will eat or go more lusty to his wothe then I? And why? God giueth to the man that is good before him, wylsome, vnderstanding, & gladnesse. But vnto the synner be geueth weerynesse. * (and superfluous) that he maye gather and heape together the thyngs, that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him, whom it pleasech God. This is now a vayne thyng, yee a very disquietnesse and weccation of mynde.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

All thyngs come in their tyme, and passe a waye in their tyme.

Therp thyng hath a tyme, yee all þ is vnder the heauen, hath his couenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plecte vp the thyng, that is planted.

A tyme to slaye, and a tyme to make whole. A tyme to byrade downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh:

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to retrace from embracing.

A tyme to weyne, and a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spede. A tyme to cut in peeces, and a tyme to sowe together.

* A tyme to kepe silence, & a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme to waere, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man els (þ doth any thyng) but weerynesse & labour? For as touchinge the traunce and carefulnesse wherch God hath geuen vnto men, I se þ he hath geuen it them, to be exerceised in it. All thyng hath

* Eccl. i. 2. & Eccl. i. 2.

he ordered maruelous goodly, to euery thyng his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of me, that they shuld not comprehend the ground of hys woekes, which he doth from the beginning to the end. So I perceiued, þ in these thyngs there is nothing better for a man, then to be merry and to do well so longe as he luyeth. For all that a mā eateth & drynkech, yee what soeuer a mā enioyet of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I considered also þ whatsoeuer God doth, it cometh for euery and that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doth it to the intent, that me shuld feare hym. * The thyng that hath bene, is nowe: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thyngs that was past. Forsooner, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the seade of iudgement, and iniquyte in trade of ryghteousnesse. Then thoughte I in my mynde: God shal separate the ryghteous from the vngodly, and thyn that he the tyme and iudgement of all countrys and woekes. I comened with myne owne hert also, concerninge the chyldren of men: how God hath chosyn them, & yett letteth them apaire: as though they were beasts: for it happeneth vnto men as it both vnto beasts, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yee they haue both one maner of byeth: so þ (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vnto vanytie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth þ tyme of the beak that goeth vpbownde, and the byeth of the beak that goeth downe into þ earth? Wherefore I perceiue, that there is nothing better for a man, than to be ioyfull in hys labour, for that is hys payre. But who wyl byngne him to se the thyng that shal come after hym?

The meynes of the inuicent. The superfluous labour of men. The chyld that is poore, and weyre, &c.

I turned me, & considered all þ violent wyng that is done vnder the sunne, & beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed, & there was as no man to conforzte the, or þ wolde helpe: & befende the from the violence of their oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then such as be aluue: yee, him that is yett vnbome to be better at case then they both, because he seeth not the miserable woekes that are done vnder the sunne.

* Job. i. 2. & Eccl. i. 2.

Agayne, I sawe that all traunce, & diligence of labour, þ euery man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst his neybour. This

This is also a vaine thinge, and a veracion of mynde. The foolc foldeth his handes together, and enteth vp hym abone kethe. One hãde full (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour & trauaple of minde. Whereouer, I turned me, & beholde yet another vaupte vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, hauping nether childe ner brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaple, his eyes can not be satisfied with riches. ^(see doct. denot remember hym selfe, and care.) For whom do I take such trauaple? For whole pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne & miserable thinge: Therefore, two are better then one. for they maye well enioye the pposyt of theyr labour.

For if one of them fall, his chãpanon helpeth him vp agayne: But two is him that is alone, for if he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how cã a body be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resistãce: A thre fold cable is not lightly broken. A poore childe beying wyse, is better then an olde kynge. & dotheth, and cãnnot be ware in tyme to come.

* Some one cometh out of prison, and is made a kynge: and another which is boine in the kynngdome, cometh vnto pouerte. And I perceaued, that all men pynge vnder the sonne, go with þe seconde childe, that shall sonde vp in the steade of the other.

As for the people þe haue bene before him, and þe come after hym, they are innumerable: And they þe come after him shall not reioyse of him. This is also a vayne thinge & a veracion of mynde. When þe cometh in to þe house of God, kepe thy fate & drawe npe þe God which is at hãde may heare: & þe thou gyue not the offeringes of foolcs, for they knowe nowght, but to do euill.

¶ A monition to beware of rash communication: he ought not to interuall at the oppression of the poore. The courteous is not satisfied with his riches.

BE not halpe with thy mouth, and let not thine her speake eny thing breathly before God. For God is in heauen, and þe vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be few. For where moch carefullnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are, there men maye heare foolcs. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folsh wordes, he hath no pleasure in the: If thou promyse eny thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promyse, and not paye. * Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, nether saye thou before the angell, þe it is

thy ignorance. For then God wilbe angrye at thy voyce, & despoyle all the wordes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also diuerse vauptes: but loke that thou fence God. * If thou seest the poore to be oppressed and wrongously dealt withall, so that equite & the ryght of the lawe is wasted in the lãde: maruell not thou at such a thinge, for one greaue man kepeth touch with another, & þe myghtie men are in auctorite ouer the poe. The increase of þe earth withholdeth all thinge, yea the kynge himselfe is manyned by husbãdrie. he that loueth money, will neuer be satisfied w money: & who lo delicteth I riches, shall haue no profit therof. This is also a vayne thinge. Where as moche riches is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure moze hath he that possideth thy, sayunge that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe mā slepeth sweetly, whether it be lytle or moch that he eateth: but the aboundance of the ryche will not suffre him to slepe. Yet is there a sore plague, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kepeth to the harte of him that hath the in possesion. For oft tymes they percyth with his greaue miscre & trouble: & þe haue a chylde, it getteth not hyngne. * A þe as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carryeth nothing awaye with hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plague, that he shall go awaye euē as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he byd rate in þe darcke, with greaue carefullnesse, syncknesse and sorow.

* Therefore me thincke it a better & a sãper thinge, a man to eate and dypncke, and to be refreshed of all hym labour, þe he taketh vnder the Sunne all þe dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is hym portyon.

For vnto whosoer God geueth riches goodnes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for hym portyon, and to be refreshed of hym labour: this is þe gyfte of God. For he chũckerth not moch howe lãge he shall lyue, for so moch as God fylyeth his herte with gladnesse.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ The mystrye of the ryche and courteous. The bytternesse of a sole and a wight man.

THERE is yet a plage vnder the sunne, & it is a generall thing among men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodnes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothinge of all that hym bette cã desyre: and yet God geueth him not leaue to enioye þe same, but another man syncketh hym them. This is a vayne thinge & a miserable 25 plage. If a mā begett an hundred children, & lyue in many yeares, so þ his dayes bee many in number, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him I saie, þ an vn-timely þyeth is better then he. For he commeth to naught, & lyueth his tyme in darkknes, & his name is forgotten. Whereouer, he 30 leeth not þ soule, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more rest the other. For though he be lyued two thousand yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour þ a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer fylled after his min-de. For what hath þ wylle more the þ fooler?

 What helpeth it the poore, þ he knoweth to walke w foolen before the luyg? The clea-re syght of the eyes is better, the þ the soule shulde walke after desires of þ lylke. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thinge & a dysquie-tulle of mynde. The thige þ hath bene is named all ready, & knowen þ it is euen mā him myghtier the he. Many thyges ther be þ in-

¶ The vii. Chapter.

¶ That wyse paceth ouer strength and wylle ought not to fele aill.

* 13.10.17.1.1.
 1.2.1.1.1.

A* Good name is moze worth then a precious ointment, and the daye of death is better thet the daye of byrth.
 It is better to go to an house of mourninge, then into a bachelinge house. For there is the ende of all men, & he þ is liuiug, taketh it to hert: grauntie is better then to laugh: for when the countenance is heup, the herte is reformed. The hert of the wylle is in the mourning house, but the hert of the folpish 40 is in the house of mygh. * It is better to geue care to the chastyng of a wylle man then to heare the songe of foolen. For the laughing of foolen is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng.

* 13.10.17.1.1.

The wylle man hateth wongre delynge: & abhorreth the harte þ coueteth rewarde.
 Better it is to colpyde, the ende of a thinge then the begynnynge. The pacet of sperte is better thet the herte mynde. Be not harte-ly angrie in thy mynde, for wath resteth in 45 the dolome of foolen. Shape not þ. What is the cause, þ the dayes of the olde tyme were better, thet the þ be now: for þ were no wylle questis. Wylldome to inheritaunce is good yet better is it w them þ without care may beholde the soune. For wylldome defendeth as well as monye, & the excellēt knowldege & wylldome geueth lyfe vnto him þ hath it in possession. Confide the wylke of God how þ no man can make the thinge straight which he maketh crooked. Alse wel the tyme of prosperite, & remeth the tyme of inprof-50 tune: for God maketh the one by the other, so þ a man ca fynde nothing els. All thyges haue I considered in the tyme of my vanite: þ the lust mā persweth for his righteoulnes sake, & the vngodly lyueth in hys wyckednesse. Therefore * be þ neither to rpyghteoug ner ouer wylle, þ thou perithe not: be neither to vnyghteoug also ner to folpish, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, commeth forth with them all.

Wylldome geueth moze corage vnto the wylle, thet ten myghie mē of the cyte: * for there is not one lust wylde earth, þ both good, and synner not: Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spokt, lest thou heare thy seruant curse þ: for thine awne hert knoweth that þ thy selfe also hast oft tymes spokn euell by other mē. All these thyges haue I 55 proued i wylldome: for I thought to be wylle * but the best farther fro me then the was before, yet & so depe that I mighte not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, & to seke a searche oute science, wylldome & vnderstāding: to knowe the foolyshnesse of the vngodly, & the error of doting foolen. And I founde, þ a woman is 60 byteter the death: for she hath call abode, her herte as a net that men fyue with, and her handes are cherynes. Alho so pleasech God, shall escape from her: but the synner will be taken with her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) thys haue I diligently searched oute & proued. One thinge must be considered with another, that a man may come by knowledge: whych as yet I seke, & fynde it not. And a thousand shape scape vnto him: what doest þu? * Altho to keepeth the commandment: shall fele no harme: but a Wolfe mans bette discretneth þ þu: & iudge:nt: For euery thing will haue of iustitie & iudgement: and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnes and losowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyl tell him?

Nether is there eny man þu hath power ouer the spete, to kepe it still þu spete, ner to haue eny power in the tyme of deathe: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, nether maye vngodlynes deliuer them that medle with all.

m. Phil. 4

All these thynges haue I considered, and applyd my mynde vnto euery woche that is vnder the sonne: howe one mā hath losowthe: vnto another to his awne harme. For
* I haue seene often þu vngodly brought to the graues: and yet they haue remained in to the cite ageyne, and came from the place of holy men, which in the cite were grauen out of memory as were those also that lyued well. * This is also a vayne thyng.
Because now that euell woche is not hastely punished, the bert of man getteth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell person offende an hundred tymes, & God disce gruinge him lōge lyfe: yet am I sur, þu it shall go well w them that feare God, because they haue hi before their eyes. Agayne, as for þu vngodly, it shall not be well w him, nether shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vampe vpon earth: There be wyl men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the woche of the vngod-ly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the woche of the pyghteous. * This haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commende glad-nesse, because a mā hath no better thing vnder the Sonne, then to eate and dryncke, & to be merry: for þu shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the sunne. And so I applyd my mynde to learne wyldome, & to knowe the trauayle that is i the worlde (and þu of such a fassyon, þu I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether vayne ner myght) I vnderstode of all the woche of God, but it is not possible for a mā, to attayne vnto the woche þu see dome vnder the Sonne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yee though a Wolfe man wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ I will teacheth not, but þu geueth to knowe of the awne wyld how, wherfore he be wyllyng of loue of hys. I will ought to leue myself with his wyld. I praye of wyldome

Of all these thynges purposed, I in my mynde to seke out. The pyghteous and wyke, yee and the pyghteous also, are in þu hāde of God: and * there is no man þu knoweth ether loue or hate, but all thynges are before the.
It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with þu pyghteous as with þu vngod-ly: * With the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth as with hym that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with þu vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the perjured, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is afeyed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sonne, this is a misery þu it happeneth vnto all a lyke.
This is the cause also that the bertes of mē are full of wyckednesse, & madd foolishnesse is in their bertes as longe as they lyue, be-till they dye.

And why? As lōge as a mā lyueth, he hath a hope: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better the deed līd: for they þu be lyug, knowe þu they shall dye: but they þu be deed: knowe nothing, nether desire they eny more. For these mēmorial is forgotte, so that they be nether loued, hated nor enuyed: nether haue they eny more parte in the world, I say that is done vnder þu Sonne. So thou thy wyse then, eate thy wyde wyth hope, and dryncke thy wyne with a glad hart, for thy woche please God. Let thy garments be all waye wyhte, & * let thy head lack none opynite.
* Alle thy self to liue topfully with thy wyse whom thou lonest, all the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, þu God geueth tye vnder the Sonne, all the dayes of thy vantage: for that is thy porcion in this lyfe, of al thy laboure and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sonne. Al that sooner thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that þu goest vnto, there is nether woche, counsell, knowledge nor wylddome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sonne, & I sawe, that in running, it helpeth not to be wyld in batayle, it helpeth not to be strōge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyse, to riches, it helpeth not to be suffell: to be had i fauoure, it helpeth not to be comyn: but that all lyeth in tyme & for-gynne. For * a man knoweth not hys tyme, but lyke as the fyshes are takē with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are men takē in the perous tyme, when it cometh suddenly vpon them.

Thys wyldome haue I seie also vnder the Sonne, & me thought, it is a grete thyng.
There was a lytle cite, & a fewe mē wylly-te: so there came a grete kynge and beseged it, and made grete bulwarke agayn it.

the sunne hath thynd vpon me. My mother & chylde had euell wyl at me, they made me p keeper of the wyne penderes: but myne owne wyneparde haue I not kept. Telle me of him whos my soule loueth: where thou feedest the shepe, where thou makest the rest at p noone daye: for why shall I be lyke him, that goeth wrayng aboute p flockes of thy chyldepones?
If thou knowe not thy selfe: O thou sayest amonge weine: then go thy waye forth after p foote stepes of the shepe, and fede thy goates besyde the shephepderes tentes. Vnto * the hoost of Pharaos charrettes haue I compared the, O my loue. Thy chekes and thy neck is ben wyfull as p currys, and hanged with spanges and goodly Jewels: a neck bade of golde wyll we make the with syluer burdes.

When the kynge lyteth at the table, he shall smell my spardus: a bondell of hyppre is my loue vnto me: he wyll lye betwixt my braziers. A cluster of Camphore in the vy-nerades of Engaddi is my loue vnto me.
* O howe saye art thou (my loue) O howe we saye art thou: thou hast doured eyes.
O howe saye art thou (my beloued) howe well fauored art p: Oure bed is decre with floures, the spynges of oure houle are of Cedre tree, and oure crosse toyners of Cypresse.

The ii. Chapter.

I am the lyke of the selde, and rose of the valleyes: as the rose amonge the daughters. Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wodd, so is my beloued amonge the trees. My delecte is to lye vnder his shad-set forth many parables. Hys diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scrip-

I haue the hope of my beloued, lo, there cometh he downe vpon the mountaynes, & lea-pyng ouer the lytle hilles. My beloued, is lyke a Rose: a ponge hart. Beholde, he standeth betwixt our wall, he obeth in as vnto window, and peepeth vnto us great. My beloued is comforted and lapde vnto me.

Come stande vpon my loue, my beneficent, to thine ayme. For I vnto is now past the caryne is awake and gone. The flowers are come vpon the felde, the yme of the byr-des syngynge is come, and the voyce of the turtle doue is heard in oure lade. The fygge tree bringeth forth her fygges, and the vyne beare blossoms, I haue a good smel. I stande vnto the & come my loue, my beneficent, I come

* Cant. lii. 1.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the flowers and byndes of the felde, that ye wake not vpon my loue nor touche her, till he be content her selfe. Who is this, that cometh vpon one of the wydderhelle like vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of Cyprus, frankincense, and all maner spices of the tharcorer? Beholde, aboute Salomon he hath the three Ranges, he haue me of the most myghtie in Irael. They holde swordes cure, one, and are expectant warre, every man also hath by his side a sword, he thryd, becom of feare in the myght. A kynge Salomon had made him selfe a palace betwixt the wood of Libanus, the wylles are of fowles, the collyng of golde, the feate of angell, the grounde is pleasantly smelt with fowles of the daughters of Jerusalem. Beholde (O ye daughters of Salomon) and beholde kynge Salomon in the crowne: what saye his mother crown vnto him in the daye of his marriage, and in the daye of the bachelles of his beir.

C. The. iii. Chapter.

saye are thou? I haue by my eyes by the that which I saye by my eye. * Cant. lii. 1.

Come vpon most blessed, thy beir is like the of the same bignesse, which went vpon the washing place: where every one beareth two tynes, and not one in trefull amoge them. Thy lippes are lyke a rose coloured cy-bonde, thy wylles are louch, thy chekes are lyke a pect of a womman with thy benes. Thy neck is lyke the tower of dauid build with colly stones lyinge out on the sides wher vpon there hang a thousand cyphers, yet all the weapons of the grantees. * Thy two beirles are lyke two tynes of pounge roes, which fede amonge roses. * That I myghte go the mountayne of Cyprus, & to hill of frankincense: till I haue beake a shadowed he past awaye. Thou art all fayre, O my loue, & no spott is there in the.
Come to me fro Libanus (O my spouse) (come to me fro Libanus) loke from the toppe of Amana, from the toppe of Sanit & Hermo, fro the lpros denues and from mountaynes of I leoparles. Thou hast with loue bewitched my beir, O my spiser, my spouse, I haue bewitched my beir, with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy neck. O howe fayre are thy beirles, my spiser, my spouse. Thy beirles are more pleasaunt then wyne, and smell of thyne oymenkes passeth all thyces.
Thy lippes, O my spouse, thyng as if honey cbe, yet my lche and hony is vnto thy tong, and the smell of thy garments is lyke a smell of Libanus. A garden well locked is my spiser, my spouse, a garden well locked, and a sealed well. The feutes are planted in the, are lyke a very Paradyse of ymaginantes with sweete frutes: as Camphire, Cardus, and Saffron, Calamus, & Saffron with all sweete smelling trees: Cyprus, Aloes and all the best thyces: a well of gardes, a well of lpinge waters, which refresheth the Liba-nus. My thou north wynde, come thou south wynde, and blowe vpon my garden, & the smell thereof may be caried on ether: I haue pee my beloued maye come into my garden, and eat

a rate of p sweete frutes that growe therein.

The. v. Chapter.

In come into my garden, & my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my spice with my spice. I haue eaten hony with my hony cddr, I haue drinke my myrr with my myrrhe. Eate, & ye fre-de, & mynche and be mery. & ye bebloued.
And I am allepe, and my hert is wakin I haue voyce of my bebloued, wht he knoe with. Open to me, & my sister, my loue, my boue, my derlyng: for my heade is full of dewe, & the lockes of my heare are full of the myrrid ddyppes. I haue put of my cose, howd I do it on agayne: I haue washed my fete, howd shall I style the agayne?

My loue put in his hand at the hole, and my herte was moued within me. I rode vp to ope vnto my bebloued, & my habes dypped with myrrid, & the myrrid ranne downe my fyngers vnto p locke. I opened vnto my bebloued, but he was departed and gone his waye. How when he spake, my hert was gone: I sought hym, but I coulde not fynde hym: I cyped vnto hym, neuer thelesse, he gaue me no answer. So p watchmen p wente about the cytie, founde me, smote me, & wounded me: yee, they p herte p wal-les, toke awaye my herte: heafe fro me.

I charge you therefore, & ye daughters of Ierusalem, of ye fynde my bebloued, that ye tell hym, howd that I am lych for loue.

What manner of man is thy lout aboue other louers? & spayest amonge women?
O: what can thy loue do, moze then other louers, that thou chargest vs so treaptyl?

As for my loue, he is whyte and rebde coloured, a goodly person amoge ten thousande: his heade is as the most fyne golde, the lockes of hys heare are bulshyd, and black as a rawn. His eyes are as p eyes of doves by the water brokes, as though they were washed with myrrid, & are lett ly w he pries in golde. Hys chokes are lyke a garde hedd, where in the p potecaries plate all manner of swete thynges: hys lypes are lyke roses that droppe swete smellyng myrrid. Hys handes are lyke gold pnynges haunge enclused p myrrour. Stone of Char-tis. His body is as the pure pury, & deate ouer with shaplynes: his legges are as the pylers of Iherusalem, set vpon sohettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as p dewty of the Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouth are swete, yee, he is altogether louely. Soche one is my loue. & ye daughters of Ierusalem, soch one is my loue.

The. vi. Chapter.

Whether is thy loue gde then (& thou spayest amonge women) whether is is thy loue departed, & we will seke hit with the. My loue is gone downe into hys garden, vnto the swete smellyng bed-des, that he may refreth hym self the garden, and gather roses. My loue is myne & I am his, which fedeth amoge the roses.

Thou art beautifull, o my loue, as is the place of Chirza, thou art fayre as Ierusalem, fearfull as an armye of men, to they banners. Turne awaye thyne eyes fro me, for they haue set me on fyre. & thy beatrepe lockes are lyke a flocke of goates thome vpon the mount of Silen. Thy restape lyke a flocke of thome shepe, which go out of p washyng place: where every one beareth cupys, & not one vnfrutefull among them. Thy chokes are lyke a peece of a p-granate, with in thy volupers. There are

12. Auenes, 12. wyues, and damelles without nbyr. One is my boue, one is my derlyng. She is the onely bebloued of her mother, & deare vnto her p bare bre. With p daughters sawe her, they sayde, she was blessed. Yee the Auenes and wyues praysed her. What is the this, p loketh forth as the mozyngge: fayre as the moone, clea-re as the sunne, and fearfull as an armye of men w their banners. I wrote downe ito p nutt garde, to se what geue by p byches, & to loke yt the vyneyarde flourishyd, & yt p pomgranates were shot forth. I knewe not p my soule had made me p charpote of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne, turne agayne. & thou perfectste one turne agayne, turne agayne, & the will lohe vpon the. What wilt ye se in the Sula-myr? & she is lyke men of warre singyng in a compagne.

The seuenth Chapter.

How pleasunt are thy breadyn-ges with the thoes, thou princes daughter! Thy thyghes are like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a connyng woiche makker.

Thy nanell is lyke a coude goblet, which is neuer without dymke. Thy wolde is lyke a hepe of wheat that is set aboute w roses

Thy two byestes are lyke two towys rabbim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Li-banus, which loketh toward Damascus.

me as a seale vpon thine herte, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, & gelousy as the hel. Her coales are of fyre, & a very flame of the Lorde: so y many waters are not able to quench loue, neither mape the streames broune it. Pee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shuld counter it nothing, Dur tes like towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght. Salomon hath a vyneparde at Baal hamon, & this vyneparde deliuered he vnto the he-pers: y eueri one for the frute therof. Guil-be geue hym a thousande peces of spluer: My vyneparde is in my sight: thou O Salomon must haue a thousande, and the he-pers two hundred with the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me hea-

The booke of the prophete Clay

The fyfte Chapter.

The clay prophete that the angel of God shall doe: the upon Jerusalem because of thyng synners.

The vision of Clay þe sonne of Amos which he sawe upon Juda and Jerusalem: in the dayes of Azia and Joas, A daye of Jezebelah wynges of Juda. Heare, O heauen, & hearken O earth: for the Lorde hath spoken: I have noised and promoted children, but they haue done wickedly agaynst me. The one hath knowne his owner & þe alle his masters cribb: but I eael hath receuened no knowedge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synfull nation, a people of great iniquitie: a seed of vngracious people corruptinge ther wayes. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherby shalbe pe be plagued any more: for ye are euill sallige a waye. The whole head is spek, & þe hert is deuy. ferd the sole of the fote vnto þe head, there is no whole parte in all your body: but all are woundes, botches, sores, & fregges. Whych ca nether be helped, bounde vp, mollified, ner eased w any opment. Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are bent vp, your enemyes deuoure poure lade, & ye must be sayne to lade. & loke vpo te: & it is desolate, as they were subuerted þe deere alienate ferd þe Lorde. Moreover, the daughter of syon ys left alone lyke a cottage in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garde of cucumbers, lyke a walled cytie. And excepte þe Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe alpye: we shuld haue bene as Sodom, and lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare þe worde of the Lorde ye Lorde of Sodom: & herke vnto þe lade of our God, þe people of Gomorra. Why offe ye so many sacrifices vnto me saith Lorde? I am full of þe brentoffrynges of wethers, ad of þe faternele of fedbestes. I haue no pleasure in þe bloud of bullockes, lams and goates. When ye come to appeare before me, who requireth this of you to treade within my porches? Therefore offe me no oblatids, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abominable thyng vnto me. I shalpe not a waye with you: ne we moones, your Sabbathes & gatherige together at þe collypne dayes. I hate your newe mone dayes & collypne feastes, eue from my very hert. I can not a waye w such vanitie & holding in of the people. They lye vpon me as a burthen, and I am wepy of beryng the. Whan ye holde our pour vades, I will turne myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wil I heare no thyng at all, leryng your wandes as eueful of bloude. Whan you therfore, and make you cleane, put adaye your euell entres out of my syght, cease from doyng of euell. Lerne to do ryght, applye pour selues to equite, helpuer þe oppressed, helpe þe faterles to his ryght, let the widowes complaint come before you. Come I praye pe (sayeth þe Lorde) let vs reade oure matter together. Though poure selues be as reed as scalcet, thei shalbe as whete as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whet as wolfe. If ye be loupynge & obedynt, pe shal enioye þe best thyng þe getoweth i þe lade. But ye pe be obstinate & rebellious, ye shalbe uoured w þe swerde: for thus þe Lorde hath promysed to his atyme mouth. How shalpeuenech it then þe þe ryghteous cytie (which was full of equite) is become vnspaythfull as an whore: ryghtheuousnes dwelt i it, but now murderers. Thy spylur is turned to dyolle, & thy wyne myrre with water. Thy fpiers are twiked & companyes of theues. Thy loue gyftes altogether, and gave for rewarde. As for þe faterles, they helpe bi not to his ryght, nether wyll they lett the widowes caules come before thei. Therefore, sayeth þe Lorde God of hostes, þe myghty gouernour of Israel, Quere vpon pe, I will calme me of myne enemyes, & I will aunge me of myne aduerfaries, I shal lade my had vpon þe, & burne out thy dyolle ferd þe pynell & puerell, & put out all thy spynne, & let thy iudges agayne as they were founyng & thy Senatours as they were ferd þe bygyngynge. Then shalbe þe called þe ryghteous cytie, þe saythfull cytie. Shalbe redeemed w equite, & they shal tume agayne vnto her ryghtheuousnes. For þe faterles & vngodly, and such as ere be come vnspaythfull vnto the Lorde, must altogether be wterly destroyed. For they shal be ashamed of the goddes þe you langed for. And ye shal be put to shame for þe Idols groungardes þe haue chosen: pe shalbe as a tree whose lade are fallen awaye, & as a garden þe hath no moynesse. And as for the glory of your graued Images, it shalbe turned to dyre brabe, and he þe made them to a speake. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The second Chapter.

Of the coming and denty of Chyl, and of the Calyng of the Iherusalem.

This is the worde þe was opened vnto Clay þe sonne of Amos, vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It wilbe also: in the last dayes þe þe byll where þe house of þe Lorde is builded, shal be þe chete amide wylls, and exalted aboue all lyric wylls. And all nacyns shal pteare vnto hym, and the ffst i multiplyng multitude of people that go speaking thus one to another: Up, * let us go to h house of the Lord, & to the house of the God of Jacob: that he make for us his way, and h we may walke in his pathes. For the Lord shall come out of Sion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall reforme the multitude of people: They shall heare the voice of the Lord also to mattocks, and they shall speake to make fythes. And one people shall not lyfe by weapon against another, neither shall they learne to fight from this forth. Come ye (house of Jacob) let us walke in the light of h Lord. But thou hast forsaken thy people h house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde h east cōterps h Sycerpes: who they haue as h Philistines had and h in strange chyldren they thinke them selues to haue enough. They land is full of silver and gold, neither is there any ende of they treasure: They land is also full of horses, & no de is there of they charres. They land is also full of wayne goddes, and before h woche of they awne handes haue they bowed the selues, yee, eue before the thinge that they awne fingers haue made. There knelyth the man, there fallcth the man downe before the, but h (o Lord) wilt not leaue them unpunished.

And therefore gett in to some rock, and hyde h in the groundes for feare of the Lord, and for the gloe of his magesty: Which cōterth downe the high lookes of presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe h pride of man, and the Lord only shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of h Lord of hostes shall go ouer al pride and presumption, upon all them that exalte them selues, and shall byngne the all downe: vpp all h hygh and skoute Cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the oaks of Saban, vpon all hygh hyles, and vpon all skoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all hyppes of Charis, and vpon euery thing that is glorious and pleasant to loke vpon. And it shall byngne downe the pride of man, and laye mans presumption full lowe, and the Lord shall only haue the victory in that daye. But the hols shall utterly be rote out. When shall crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lord, and for the gloe of h magesty: what tyme as he shall arse vpe to condemne h earth.

Then shall man cast awaye h goddesses of silver, and h goddesses of gold (which he neuertheles had made to honoure them) vnto h holes & h Sacks: And they shall crepe in to the caues and rocks, & into the clyftes of hard bones, for feare of God, and for the gloe of h magesty, when he pfectly to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose heere is in hys nostrils. For what is he of reputation?

The thyrde Chapter.

Fo to, the Lord God of hostes both take awaye from Jerusalem and Juda, all possessions & power, all uenat and bynche, the captayne and the soubayr, the iudge and prophete, the wyle and the aged man, the prince of Ephe peare olde, and the honorable: the Senators, and men of vnderstaunge: the master of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue the chyldren to be theyr princes, & babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall be pilled and pilled, and one shall eue be doinge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the wyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee, one shall take a lrebe of hys awne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs fro the fall & perrell. Then shall he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Whereouer, there is neither mente ner clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem is ouerthrowne & Juda must fall to h ground, because that both theyr woche & counceils are agaynst the Lord, to psonaue the presence of hys magesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewapeth them, yee, they declare theyre awne synnes, the selues, as the Sodomites, & by the not. Woe be vnto theyr soules for they haue retourned euill vnto the selues. Woe be the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of theyr studies. But woe be to h vngodly and vnrightheous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr woche. Chyldren are extortioners of my people, and women haue rule of them.

¶ My people, those that call the blessed because the, and depaue the waye of h foreteppes. The Lord is risen vpe to comen of the matter, and staderth vpe: I saye to geue iudgement of the people. The Lord shall come forth to reason with the Senators and prynces of hys people. It is ye that haue burnt vpp my hneyarde, the extortion done to the poore in h your houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, & marre h faces of h poore? sayeth the Lord God of hostes. Whereouer, they saye h Lord: Soing h daughters of Sion are be come so proude, and come in w dressed ouer neckes and with wayne wanton eyes: sayinge they come I trespynge to my selfe with theyr feete. Therefore shall the Lord thame the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discouer theyr they? Name. In that daye shall þ Lord take awaye the gorgeousnes of they? apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partelettes, and collarres, braceletes and booues, þ goodly flowered, wyde and wyndered rayment, brooches, and headbandes, rynges and gaucandes, holp daye clothes and vales, hercheffes and pynnes, glasses and cypelles, bonettes and raches.

And in steade of good smell, there shall synch amonge the. And for they? gyddles there shall be lowe bades. And for well feet there shall be baldenelle. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for they? bewyld witherdnesse, and sonne burnyng. Poure houlvandes and myghty men shall percyp with the wynde in batayle.

At that tyme shall the? gates mourne and complayne, and they shall spyt as desolate folk upon the earth.

The fourth Chapter.

For want of men, many women desire to have one man.

When shall seven wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all our meate and clothyng together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues, & that thys shamefull repose maye be taken: fro vs. After that tyme shall the byaunche of the Lord be bewyffull and myghty, and the frute of the earth shall be fayre and plentiful for those Israelites that shall pig therof. Then shall the remnant in Sion & the remnant at Ierusalem be called holy: Namely all such as are wytted among the bypnyge at Ierusalem: what tyme as the Lord shall washe awaye the fylthyness of the daughters of Sion, and poure þ bloude out from Ierusalem with the wynde of hys iudgmente and with fyre. Woicourt, vpon all the dwellynge of the hyll of Sion and vpon they? whole congregation, shall the Lord proude a cloude and shadowe by daye, & the bypnyge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all they? glory shall be preferred. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of herte in the daye tyme a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether & rayne.

The v. Chapter.

Of chylde and byp nygarde, with an exhercacion of courtoisie and byncker.

Now will I sing my beloued frede a songe of my freides, because of hys bynnygarde. My beloued frende hath a bynnygarde in a very fruitful plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, thys he walked rounde aboute, and placed it with goodly grapes. In the myddell of it he bylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwards when he looked that it shulde bypnyge he grapes, it brought forth thornes. Now therefore (O ye Cyprians of Ierusalem and whole Juda: Judge I praye you betwixt me, and my bynnygarde. What more could haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Therefore then hath it geue thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it.

Well, now I shall tell you how I will do with my bynnygarde: I will take þ hedge from it, that it maye percyp, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be trode vnder fote. I will laye it waste, that it shall nerther be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and briers. I will also forbyd the clowdes that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the bynnygarde of the Lord of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda bys fayre planting. Of thes he looked for equite, but se there is wyng: for rpyghtousnesse, lo, It is but myscry.

Also vnto the that soyne one house to another, & byng one lande so nygh vnto another, that þ poore can get no more ground, & þ ye maye dwell vpon the earth alone. These thynges are i the ears of the Lord of hostes: shall not manny greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in the? And ten akers of byng shall geue but a Quarte, and xxx. bulbes of seche shall geue but an y. & epha.

Also be vnto them, that ryle vp early to folowe bynckmcs, and to them that continue so, vntyll nyght. & ryl they be sett on fyre with wyne. In those coppanys are hares and lutes, tabrettes & pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the woiche of the Lord, and colyde not the operacion of his hādes. Therefore cometh my folk also in to captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. They? glory is famished with hunger, and they? pyde is marred for thys: &c. Therefore gaper þ bell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that they? pyde, boastyng and welth, with such as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the hygh lode of the pource shall be layde downe. But the Lord of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is prapled in rpyghtousnes: Then shall the shepe eate in orde, and the eph mcs landes that were layde waste, shall straungers deuoure. Also be vnto the, that dyue wyckednes vnto them with coardes of vanite and synne, as it were with a cart rope.

Which vse to speake on thys maner: let hym make halfe now, & go forth with hys woiche, that we maye se it. Lett the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, and dyuene nre, that we maye knowe it.

Also be vnto them þ call euell good, and good euell, which make darcknesse lyght, & lypde darcknesse, that make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Also be vnto them that are wyse in theyr wome lyght, and thynke the felices to haue vnderstandyng. Also be vnto them, that are strong to suppe out wyne and expecte men to set by dyonkenesse.

These greue feintee with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the rpydious.

Therefore, lyke as fyre lycketh by the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr sote shalbe as corruption: and theyr blossome shall vanysh awaye lyke dust: for they haue cast awaye the lawe of the Lord of Hostes, & blasphemed the word of the holy maker of Israel.

If Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst hym people, and he waketh his hande at them: per, he hath smyten. so that the bylles byd treble. And theyr hartes byd lye in the open scates, lyke myxe. And i all thys, the wrath of God hath not ceased, but hym hande is stretched out styl. And he shall geue a token vnto a strange people: and call vnto the in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastily with speed. There shall not be one saynt nor feble amonge the, no not a slothful nor slepye persone. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor loose theyr lacher of his shooe. Hys arrowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke floure, & his cartwheles lyke a storme wynde. His crepe is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantch by the praye, & no mā shall recouer if o get it from the. In that daye they shalbe lo feare vpon them, as the see. And yf we looke vnto the lade, beholde, it shalbe all darcknesse & sorowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shalbe darcke.

¶ The .vi. Chapter.

¶ The same the glory of the Roide, and was sent to prophete the destruction of Babel.

In the same yere that kinge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord sptynge vpon an hygh and glorious seate, & his rayne fylled the temple. And aboute he stode the Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe wynges. With twayne eche covered his face, w twayne hym selfe, and with twayne byd he flye. They cryed also eche one to ather on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hostes. The whole world is full of his glory. Per, & gentes and doxerches moved at his crye, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, Who is me for I am lost in almost as I am a man of vncleane lippes, & dwell amonge people phath vncleane lippes also: for myne eyes haue seene the kynge and Lorde of Hostes.

Then flecte one of the Seraphims vnto me, hauryng a hote cole in his hande, which he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, & thyne vncyrcoulines is taken awaye, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I herd the voyce of y Lord saye on this maner: all hom shall I send, and who wyll be oure mellaunger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnly se, and not perceaue. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, ad shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with theyr eares, and vnderstande not with theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered: vntill the cytyes be utterly walled without inhabytours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbrydled. For the Lorde shall take y men farre awaye, so that the lade shal lye waste a longe season, yet in y shall succede .c. kynges, and the lande shal retorne and be lappede walle. And as the terebint tre and oke in wynter cast the leaues, and yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shall the holy lead continue in theyr substance.

In happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Iotham, which was the sonne of Aziah kynge of Iuda: & Razin the kynge of Syria, and Israhah y sonne of Romelphah, kynge of Irael: went by toward Ierusalem to beslege it, but Razin was not able to winne ye. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde thede therof, y Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked yee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go merte Ahaz: (thou and thy sonne Shear Iasub) at the head of the omer pole, in the fore path by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe & be still, but feare not, neither be saynt harted, for these two taples: y is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiosnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria & Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly cospayed agaynst the saynt: We wyll goo by agayn y Iuda, bere them, and byryne them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus

For thus sayeth the Lorde God thereto. It shall not be good forth, neither come to pass: for I the head chief of Scharia is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after thye & thre score years, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And these cryes of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Of ye beleue not: it cometh of thys: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Joye ource, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayinge, requize a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be toward the deyth beneth, or towardes þe pygth above. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requize none, neither wyl I temple þe Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of þe house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you þe be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore þe Lorde shall geue you a token: Behold, a vyrgyn shall conceiue and beare a sonne, and þe bys mother shall cal his name Emanuel. Butter ad hony shall be eate, þe he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chole the good. For ouer the chyld come to knowledge, to refuse the euell and chole the good. The lande (that thou so Abhorrest) shall be desolate of both her kynages. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came since the tyme that Ephraim departed fro Iuda) thow the kynge of the Assirians. For at þe same tyme shall the Lord whyle for the fynes that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in þe Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the desolate vales, in the holes of stones, vpon all thowpe and bylde places.

At the same tyme shall the Lord geue the heare of the headd and the fete and þe beerd cleane of, with the ralsoure that he shall hve beynde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a howe, and two shepe. Then, because of the aboundance of mylke, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remaineth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vineyardes (though there be a thousande vines in one, & were solde for a thousande splerlynges) shall be turned to briers & thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande w arowes & bowes, so shall all the lande be come briers and thornes. And as for al bylles that are betw downe, they shall not come vpon the same feare of briers & thornes. But þe catell shall be dyuen together, and the shepe shall fede there.

Moreover, the lord sayd vnto me: Take þe greates leaf, & write in it, as men do w a penne, make halfe spee to robbe, & halfe to þe spoyle. And I called vnto me saythfull wytnesses to recoorde. I wote the pyll, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wote I vnto the Propheetisse, þe had conceiued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue him this name: a speier robber: an halfe spoiler. For whp, or ouer þe chyld shall haue knowledge to crye father, & mother: shall the ryches of Damascus & the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by þe spoyle, before the kyng of the Assirians.

The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as thys people refuse the still renynge water of Syon, and put theye deyle in Razin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the Lorde shall bypne myghtie & greates floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power: which shall clyme vp vpo all his floudes, and renne ouer all theye bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowing & increasig in power, tyll he gett hy by þe neck. He shall fyll also the widenesse of the lande with bys byde wynges, & Emanuel. Breake downe (o peple of Assur) and ye shall be, broke downe: hearken to all ye of farr countrees. Quister you, and you shall be broken downe, prepare you to battell and you shall be toyn in peces: take your counsell together, yet must your countell come to naught: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prope: for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the bynde of his hande: & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shulde not walke in the wyse of this people.

He sayde moreover: rounde with none of the, whosoeuer saye: ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, neither be a feyrd of them, but sanctifie the Lord of hostes, lett hym be poure feare and drede. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and stone to stonble at: the rock to fall vpon: a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem.

And many shall stonble, fall, and be broke vpon hym: yet, they shall be snared & taken. Now laye the wytnesses together a scale the lawe w myracles. Thus wil I wayte vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I will loke for him. But to, as for me, and the children which the lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And if they saye vnto you: a the counsell in the sothefayers, witches, chymers and coniuersers, then make them thys answer.

The people that walke in darcke-* Isa. xliij. nesses haue sene a greete lyght. As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath þe lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people, & not increase theyr loye. * Theyr reioyce before the, euen as men make weep in barrell, and as men that haue gotten þe victory, whē they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the pocke of þe peoples riches: the skaff of hys shoulder and the rod of hys oppressoure, as in the dayes of Abadian.

And trulie eny batayll þe warrepoure accomplisheth, is done wth confused nople & despylinge ther garments wth bloude: But this batayll shall be wth burnynge & consu-minge of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is borne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon hys shoulde doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called wth hys owne name: wonderfull. The geue of consell, þe myghty God, þe eueralmyng father, the prync of peace, he shall make no ende to increase þe kyngdome & peace, & shall set vpon the seate of Dauid & in his kyngdome, to set vpon the same, & to stablish it wth equyte and ryghteousnesse, from hēce forth for euermore. * They shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes byrnyng to passe.

The Lorde sent a woide into Iacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, þan saye with pythe and hys comaches, on this maner. The tyle woike is falle downe, but we will builde it wth squared stones. The Holberp tym-be is broke, but we shall sett it vpon agayne wth Cedre. Secuertheles, þe Lord shall prepare Rayn the enemye agaynst them, and to orde theyr aduersaryes, that the Soter and shall lye holde vpon them before, and the shillstynes behynde; and so deuoure Israel wth open mouth.

After all thys is not the wrath of þe Lode ceased, but yet hys hande stretched oute still. For the people turneth not vnto hym that shall steele them, neyther do they like the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath þe Lode roted oute of Israel both brad and tap-le, bramme and twygge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Sema-toure and honorable man, and by the tayle the prophet that preached lyes. For all they which enuourne the people that they be in a ryght case, soch be disceauers. Such as men thynke also to be perfecte among thes, are but cast adowne.

Therefore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr yonge men, neyther fauoure theyr fatherlesse & widdowes. For they are all together pproctres and wretched, and all theyr mouthes speake fals. After all thys is not þe Lordes wrath ceased, but yet hys hande is stretched oute still. For vngodlynesse burneth, as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood or a rebe bush, to ascende the smoke of theyr peple.

For cause of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, is the lande full of darcknesse, and the people be consumed, as it were wth fy-re, no mā doth spare his brother, but he rob-beth on þe ryght hand: & doth synne, he eateth on the left hande, and he shall not be enyough. Euery man shall eate the flesh of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim. Manasses, and they both shall eate Iuda. After all thys is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is hys hande stretched oute still.

Pro he be also unto Aſſur, which is a ſtat of my wrath, in whole bande is the rod of my puniſhment. I ſhall ſende hym amonge thoſe yppocriſtic people, amonge the people that haue deſecrated my diſſauours ſhall I ſend hym: that he may veteely robbe the ſpoule the, and reade them downe lyke the myze in þe ſtrete. Nowbeit, his meaning is not to neether thynke his bett of thys laſtypon. But he ymagineth onely, how he may roſe out and deſtrope moche people, for he ſapeth are not my þynges all þynges? Is not Calno as eaſye to wyne, as Charchania? Is it harder to conquire Charchania then Aſſur? Or is it lyghter to overcome Damafcus then Samaria? As who ſay: I were able to wyne the Kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Jeruſalem & Samaria. ſhal I not do unto Jeruſalem & their ymagis, as I byd unto Samaria and their idoles?

Wherfore þe Lord ſapeth: Alſone as I haue perſeuered my whole worke vpon the byll of Syon and Jeruſalem, then wyl I ſpeth the noble and ſcoure hart of the kynge of Aſſyria. With hys proude looked. For he ſtanderth thus in his auncy conceite: This do I chooſe þe power of myne atone hãde, and chooſe my wyſdome. For I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the lãdes of the people: I robbe their treasures: and I lyke one of the woꝛthynges? I bypue them fro their hys ſcates. My hande hath founde out the ſtrength of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and the re, are gathered together: ſo do I gather all countreies. And there is no man, þe dare be ſo bolde, as to touch a feather, that darre open his mouth, or once whiſper.

Shall the are boalt it ſelfe, agaynſt him that he weth therewith? or doth þe ſawe make eny hanggyn agaynſt him that ruleth it? That were euil lyke, as yf the rod byd exalte it ſelfe agaynſt him that beareth it: or as though the ſtaff ſhulde magnifye it ſelfe, as who ſaye: it were no wood. Therefore ſhal þe Lord of hoſtes ſend hi amonge his ſarlinges leanes, & burne vp his gloꝛy, as it were to a fyze. But the lyght of Iſrael ſhal be that fyze, and his ſanctuary ſhal be the flamm and it ſhall kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and byers in one dape. yea all the gloꝛy of his woddes, and felde ſhal be conſumed with body & ſoule: And they ſhal be as an hoſt of men, whoſe ſtanderth beate ſapeth. The trees alſo of hys felde which remaine, ſhal be of ſuch a nõbe, that a child maye tell them.

After that dape ſhal the remnaute of Iſrael, & ſuch as are eſcaped out of the houſe of Jacob, ſe he nomore confort at þon that ſmore the, but with ſaythfulneſſe & treith that they truſt into the Lord, the holy one of Iſrael. The remnaute, euen the poſterite of Jacob, ſhall conuerſe unto God the myghty one. For though the people of Iſrael be as þe ſande of the ſee, yet ſhal þe remnaute of them conuerſe in hym. Perſecte is the iudgement of him that dweth in ryghteouſneſſe, and therefore the Lord of hoſtes ſhall perfectly fulfyll the thynges, þe hath determined in þe myddel of þe whole worlde. Therefore thus ſapeth the Lord God of hoſtes: Thou my people, þe dwelleſt in Syon, be not aſeared, for þe kynge of the Aſſyrians: he ſhal ſmyte the with a rodd, & ſhal waꝝge his ſtaff at the, as the Egyptians byd ſome tyme: But ſoone after, ſhal my wrath and myne indignacy be fulfilled i the deſtruction of them.

Wherfore, the Lord of hoſtes ſhall prepare a ſcourge for hi, lyke as was þe laughter of Aſſyria vpon the rock of wꝛeb. And he ſhall lyft vp his rodd ouer the ſee, as he byd ſome tyme ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall hys burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and his yoke from thy neck, yea, the ſame yoke ſhall be corrupte for very ſarneſſe. he ſhall come to Aſſyria, and go thorow toward Wꝛegon: at Wꝛegon ſhall he laye vp his harnelle, and go ouer the ſoode. Syden ſhall be their reſtyng place, Ramah ſhal be a ſeaport, Syden ſhal be a waye. The voyce of þe noyes of thy hoſtes (O daughter Gallim) ſhal be heard unto Lays & to Iunathoth, which alſo ſhal be in trouble. Wadimena ſhall tremble for reare, but þe citetins of Sabin are manly, yet that he remaine at Rob þe dape. After that, ſhal he lyft vp hys hãde agaynſt the mount of þe daughter Syden, the byll of Jeruſalem. But ſe, the Lord God of hoſtes ſhall take awaye the proude from thence, with ſcare. he ſhall hewe downe the proude, & ſei the bye mynbed. The buſhes alſo of þe wood ſhal be rote out with proude, and Lybanus ſhall haue a myghty fall.

And with holpnes shall he reforme the simple of the world.

He shall smyte the world with the rodd of his mouth, & the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Righteousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes, & trueth & faythfulnesse, the gyde of his rapnesse. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goare. Bullocks, Lions & cattell shall kepe company together, so shall chyldre shall rule them. The harte & the Beere shall fede together, & their ponge ones shall lye together.
The Leopard shall cate strawe lyke the oxe, as the harte. The chyldre whyle he sucketh, shall haue a desire to the serpents nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euill to another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the byll of my holynes. For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, euill as the see floweth ouer with water.

And in y daye shall the gentyles enquire after y rote of Iesse which shall be set vp for a roken vnto the people, & his dwellinge shall be glorious. At y same tyme shall y lord take in hande agayne, to conuere the remnant of his people which shall be left alyue from the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moors, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians and fro the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set vp a roken amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the diuersed of Israel, yee & the out castes of Iuda from the foure coners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemies of Iuda shall be cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare no euill will to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of y Philistines toward the west, and spyle the together that dwell toward the East. The Drummers and the Woabiers shall leet their bandes fall, & the Am-monites shall be obediēt vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleue the tunages of the Egyptians, & with a myghtie wynde shall he lyft vp his hande ouer Balus, and shall smyte his leuen dreames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waie for his people, y remaineth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed out of y land of Egypt.

The xii. Chapter.

The songe of the Church for the obtaininge of the victorye and ouer cominge of the world.

Say then y Quate saye: O Lord, I will thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Behold, God is my saluacion in whom I will trust, and not be asrayde, for the Lord God is my strength, & my songe, he also is become my saluacion. Therefore with hope shall ye drawe water out of the wellles of the Saluation, & then shall ye saye: geue thanke-singes vnto the lord, call vpon his name, declare his counsell amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O singe praises vnto the Lord, for he hath done greates things, as it is knowen in all the world. Crye out, and syng thou y dwellest in Syon, for great is the holy one of Israel in the myddes of the.

The xiii. Chapter.

The prophete of the destruction of Babylon, the capitale, and the cominge agayne of the people.

Babylon is the heuy burthen of Salomon, which saye the Sonne of Amos vndr. L. yft vp the banner vpon the hye hyl, call vnto the, holde y power, hande that the wyndes maye go in at the doze. I haue sent for my deby-tres & my grauntes (saye the Lord) which shall execute wrath, I will call for forch, and trumphe in my gloze.

There is a people of a multitude in the mountaynes, like as of a great people, a tuffynge, as though the hyngdomes of ynacions came together. (And the Lord of Hostes, multieth his armye to batayle.) They come out of a farr countree, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord hym selfe do the ministers of his wrath, to destroye y whole lande. Whouere ye, for y dape of the Lord is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghyte. Therefore shall all han-des be lerten downe, & all mens hertes shall melt a waie, they shall lade in feare, care-fulnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, & they shall haue payne, as a woman y tra-uapleth with chyldre. One shall be abated of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flammes of fyre.

Beholde, the dape of the Lord shall come; terrible, full of indignaciō, furour & wrath to make the lande waste, & to rote out the synners thereof. For the starres & planetes of heauen shall not geue their lyght, the sunne shall be darkened in the epyngne, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I will punyssh the wyckednesse of the world, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye Romackes of the prou-de shall I take a waie, and shall lape downe the boabyng of tyrantes. I will make a man deareer the fyne golde, and a mā to be more worth then a golde wedde of Sybir.
Therefore, I will make the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the dape of his fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted & chased doe, and she aspre

these þ no man taketh vp. Every mā shall turne to hyss a byne people, and the eche one into his awne lande. Altho so is founde alone. Shall the shot thozow: And who so gather together, shall be destroyed with the sword.

* Their chyldren shall sayne before their eyes, their houses spoiled, and their wyues caried. For lo, I shall bypunge vp the eche des agaynst them, which shall not regarde silver, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shall they destroye the yong chylden, & haue no pytie vpon women with chyldre, & their faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glory of kyngdomes and bewtye of the Calders honour) shall be destroyed euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre. It shall not endure for euer, neither shall there be any moze dwelling there, fro generacion to generacion.

* The Arabias shall pytch no tentes there, neither shall the shepherdes make their foldes there any moze: but fearfull wild beastes shall lye there, & þ houses shall be full of grente Wyles. Striches shall dwel there, & Ayres shall busse there wild cattles shall crie in the palaces, and Whaggas shall be in þ plen saut houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at þis, & her dayes shall not be prolonged.

¶ The remouing of the people from captiuitie. The prophete of the people of Iacob, and aduersion of thep enemies. The ruine of Babylon.

Blessed be the Lord wylke mercifull vnto Jacob, and wil yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their awne lande. Strangers shall cleaue vnto them, & get them to the house of Jacob. The people shall take them, & cary them home to their awne lade. And make the to inherite þ house of Israel in þ lande of þ Lord þ they may be seruantes & hand maydes of the Lord. They shall take those prisoners whose captiues they had bene a foze: & rule those þ had oppelied them. When the Lord now shall bryge the to rest, fro the trauaile, feare, & harde bondage þ thou wast laden w all the thale thou vlt thys mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: how happeneth it þ the oppressour leauech of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broke þ ceptre of þ vngodly & the rodd of the lordly. Althich whē he is woth smyteth þ people w continual strokes, & tyrannous helpe reigne the ouer þ þerthen whom he persecuted without compassion. And therefore the whole world is now at rest & quietnes and men synge for ioie.

* Be, eu þ þ ffre trees & Cedres of Libanus reioice at thy fall saye: Gode þ thou art lpyd downe, there come no mo vp to be the downe vs. Well also beneth trebleth to mete þ at thy cōpyng, & for thy sake hath rayed his deade, & all in yghet me & princes of

þ earth. All kynges of þ earth shall be fro their seates, þ they may all answere & speake vnto þ. Art þ become weake also as we? art thou become lpyd vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pyde is layde downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Whomes be layde vnder the, & whomes are thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauē (O Lucifer) thou faire moynynge childe: how hast thou gotten a fall enen to the grounde, and art become weaker the þ people? For thou saydest in thine herre: I will clyme vp into heauen, & exalte my throne aboue beyde þ starres of God, I will lye also vpon the holy mount towarde the North, I will clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylde lye the hyghst of al. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to þ depe of hell. They that fe the, shall narrowly loke vpo the, and thynke in their selues, sayenge: Is thys the mā, þ brought all lades in feare, and made the kyngdomes a prayde? Is this he that made the world a maner wastle, and layde the cyrpes to the ground, which let not his prisoners go out?

The kynges of the naciōs lye euery one in his awne house with woiohypp, and þ art call out of thy grauclype a filthy abominable bzūch: lye as dead mens rapynē þ are shot thozow with the sword, & go downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead corse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them. Eue because that thou hast walkt thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generacyō of the wycked shall be without honour, for euer. Let there a waye be sought to destroye their chyldren, that be in their fathers wyckednes, þ they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the world full of encmies.

I will stande vp agaynst the: sayeth the lord of hostes: & root out þ name & remaue sonne, & sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayeth þ Lord) & will geue it to þ Detres, & will make the water podels of it. And I will swepe the out w the besome of destruction. Sayeth þ Lord of hostes. The Lord of hostes hath sworne an othe, sayenge: It shall come to passe as I haue determyned, and shall fulfilled as I haue deuyd. So that I sith that I destroye in my lande, & vpo my mountaynes will I treade þ vnder foot. Althich thozow his yock shall come from them, and his burthen shall be taken fro their shouder. Thys deuice hath God taken thozow the whole world, and thys is þs hande stretched out ouer all people. For þ the Lord of hostes determe a thynge, who is able to opsaunle it: And þs fe strength forth his pade, who maye holde it in agayne.

Aſ is the heuy burthen vpon Moab: Moab is deſtroyed & overthrown in þe nyght ſeaſon: For alſo in Moab was deſtroyed & perſhed in the nyght. They wente up to the ydols houle, euen to Dibſa to the hye places, to wepe for Achob, and Moab vpon mourne for Moabba:
All theye beades, were balbe & all theye beades ſhaun. In theye ſtreets are theye gyrded aboute with ſack cloth. In all þe topes of their houſes & ſtreets ſhalbe nothynge but mournynge & wepyng. Helebon & Eleale ſhall crye, þe theye voyce ſhalbe heard vnto Jahaz. The woſtyres alſo of Moab ſhall bleaſe out and crye for very ſorrowe of their Cyndes: Who ſhall my herte be for Moabs ſake. The ſhal ſaye vnto þe cyte of zoar, which is lyke a ſpye pong bullocke of the yere olde, for they ſhall all go vnto Luth, wepyng. Eue to hy þe waye to ward Mozonaim they ſhall make lamentacion for the better deſtruction. For þe waters of Elime ſhalbe dried vp, by reaſon wherof þe graſſe is withered, þe herbes deſtroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the reliſue þe hath done, they are ſore. As for theye ſubſtaunce, þe enemyes haue caried the to the broke of þe wyllers. For þe erie wet ouer þe whole lande of Moab: vnto Elgaim & vnto Beer Elime was there nothing but mournynge, becauſe the waters of Dibſa were full of bloude: for the Lord ſhall ſende more bloude vpon Moab, & lyons vpon the remnant of the lande, & on them that are eſcaped from Moab.

Ende þe Lord of the world aſſe, fro the rocke þe lyeth towarde þe deſerte, vnto þe hil of the daughter Moab. For as for the daughters of Moab, they ſhalbe as aſtroblyng wyde, þe is put out of her ſelfe: for they ſhal carpe them vnto Ammon: gather your colles, come together in iudgment, couer vs wþ your ſhabowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chaſed, and be wyaze not them that are fled: let my perſecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge agaynſt the deſtroper: for the abuerſary is brought to naught, þe robber is vndone, the tyſant is waſhted out of the land. And in mercy ſhall the ſeate be prepared, and he ſhal ſet vpon it in the trueth, the tabernacle of Dauid budgyng and ſchayng iudgment, & making paſſ vnto ryghteouſnes. We haue heard of the pyrde of Moab, he is very proude, preſumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacion, & vayne are his ſpyles. Therefore ſhal Moab make lamentacion becauſe of the Moabites (that ſhalbe ſpyne) yee they ſhal wayle all together. Becauſe of the foundation of the cite that is made of brich, ſhal ye complayne: euen þe ſame people that are left onely behinde.

Fore þe bynes of Heſbon are cut dotunc: As for the byne of Sibima, the Lo-des of the heithen haue broken downe þe principall braches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wet on wadering vnto þe welderneſſe. Þe goobly braynches were thowwen downe, as they wet ouer the ſee. Therefore will I mourne for Jazer, & for the by-ne of Sibima. I will poure my teares vpon the, O heſon and Eleale, for the erie of thyne encirpes is fallen vpon thy ſommer frutes, and vpon thynne harueſt. The ſpyrte and chere is taken awaye out of the plentifull felde, and in the vyneyardes there ſhal be no ioye ner gladneſſe.

The treader ſhall treade out no wyne in the preſſes, þe ſong of theye mery chere haue I layde downe. Wherefore, my bowels ſhall comble lyke an harpe for Moabs ſake, and myne inwarde partes for the cytes ſake þe is made of brich. And it ſhal come to paſſe, that wha it is ſene that Moab ſhalbe made wep of his hyl chapels, he ſhall come to his teple to praye, but he ſhal not be able. So then, thys is the ſapen þe Lord hath ſpoken concernynge Moab ſens that tyme. But now the Lord hath ſpoken ſayeng. In the yeres which ſhal be as the yeres of an hyed ſeruaunt: ſhall the gloze of Moab be turned into conſuſion, thow out al his multitude, which is very great. And that wyche remaneth, ſhalbe very ſmall and feble.

¶ The .xvii. Chapter. ¶ A prophete agaynſt Damafcus.

Aſ is the heuye burthen vpon Damafcus: Beholde, Damafſus is taken awaye, to be nomore a cite, but ſhalbe an heape of hye ben ſtones. The dwelle cytes of Aroer ſhalbe foldes for catel which ſhal lye there, and there ſhalbe none to ſtaye them awaye. Ezechial alſo ſhall nomore be

And in ſ daye it ſhall come to paſſe ſ Jacob ſhall be made very poore, & ſ ſatneſſe of hys ſheepe ſhall worke leane. And he ſhall be as one ſ gathered vp coine in harueſt, euſt lyke him whole arme reapeth ſ earres of coine. he ſhall be alſo lyke hym ſ gathered earres of coine in the valley of ſephaim. ſome gathering in dede ſhall there be left in it, euſt as in the ſhakyng of an olyue tree there remayne two or thre berpes in the toppes of the vyppermoſt bowe, & four or fyue in ſ hynde frutefull boughes therof, ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſrael.

¶ Therefore ſhall thou ſee pleaſant places, & ſhall graſſe the bryche of another mans vync. In the daye ſhall thou make thy place to growe, & early in the morning ſhall thou make thy ſede to ſhoote. The harueſt ſhall be gone in the daye of encheitance, & there ſhall be ſowthe without hope of coſtoye. ¶ Alſo ſhall be to the multitude of moche people, which ſhall make a ſounde lyke the noyſe of ſ ſes: And the violence of ſ nations, which ſhall rage lyke the ruſhyng in of many waters: Euſt lyke many waters ſhall the people rage. God ſhall reduce hym, and he ſhall ſpe farre of. he ſhall be chaced awayne lyke as dyce ſtraue vpon the mountaynes befoze the wynde, and lyke a thyng that turneth befoze the ſtoorme.

At euen beholde, there is trouble: & or euere it be moynyn, lo, he is gone. This is ſ pozepon of them that appelle vs, and the laſt of them that robbe vs.

Set pou hence (ye ſpyce meſſaungers) to a naciſ that is ſcattered a hynde & robbed of that they haue: a fearful people from their beginning vnto this: a naciſ troden downe by lytle and lytle, whole labours they ſloubes haue ſpoiled.

All ye inhabitants of the worlde and inhabitants of ſ earth, loke vpon this ſcettered token in the mountaynes, and baren tohan he bliſbeth wth the trompe. For ſo ſ Lorde ſayde vnto me, as for me, & I will take my reſt, & loke vpon the matter in my habitacio, lyke a ſaype beate after ſaype, & lyke a cloude of dew in ſ heat of barned.

For afoze the harueſt, wha the bryche is growne, there ſhall come ripe frute out of the ſlowe, & he ſhall cut downe the ſterace wth ſcythes, & the bryanches ſhall he take awayne wth hokes. Thus ſhall they be left together vnto the ſowles of ſ mochtayned, and to the beaſtes of the erth: for in ſomme the byrdes ſhall remayne vpon it, and euery beſt of ſ lande ſhall be vpon it in ſ ſynner. In ſ tyme ſhall there a preſer be brought vnto the Lorde of hoſtes: euſt a people that is ſcattered abrode, and robbed of that they had, that ſame people which hath bene ſcared full from theyr beginning vnto this: a nacyon troden downe by lytle and lytle whiche lande they ſloubes haue ſpoiled: To the place of the name of ſ Lord of hoſtes, euen to the mount Synon.

¶ he heye brethren of Egypte: Beholde, & the Lorde ſpeth vnto a ſwyſte clowde, and ſhall come in to Egypte, & the byrdes of Egypte ſhall tremble at the preſence of hym, & the hert of Egypte ſhall quake in the myddes of her. And I will ſe the Egyptians one agaynſt another, ſo that one brother ſhall fight agaynſt another, & one neyghboire agaynſt another, cite agaynſt cite, & realme agaynſt realme. The mynde alſo of Egypte ſhall be cleane without counell wthout it ſelfe, & the deuyce that they take, will I deſtrope, ſo that they ſhall ſceke counell at vbyds & at ſoycerers, at workers wth ſpyces & at ſorceryers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruſous cruell Lorde, & a myghtie kyng ſhall haue dominion ouer them, ſayeth the Lord God of hoſtes. The waters of the ſee ſhall ſayle, & the ryuer ſhall decreaſe and be dreyed vp. The waters ſhall be dyaueu out: the ryuers of Egypte ſhall be emptyed & dreyed vp, the rebes and bagges ſhall be cut downe.

The graſſe in the ryuer & by the ryuers bank, & all that groweth by the ryuer ſhall wither awayne, and be brought to naught. The prophete Doakes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make pontes and steeles for ship shall come to naught.

But ye foolish pyrrers of zoon, ye Wolfe colicelours of Pharao, whose wit is turned to foolpiness, howe sape ye vnto Pharao: I am come of Wolfe men of auncient kynges? What er at they: where are (I saye) thy wyse men? Let the tell yf they ca what y lord of hoodles hath deuyled vpon Egypte.

The pyrrers of zoon are become foolcs, the pyrrers of Aop are diseaued, they haue diseaued Egypte, cut they that were taken for the cheste kyured therof. In the myddes of it hath the lord powred the spere: as wysehoodnes, ad they haue diseaued Egypte in euery woike therof, euen as a dyonacen in a blackerth in his voinpne. Either shall the heade of eaple, the chauncy or rede be able to do anpe woike i Egypte. In y daie shall Egypte be lyke vnto women: It shall be afraied and fode in feare at the mocon of the hand of the Lord of hoodles, which he shaketh ouer it. And Egypte shall be afraied of y land of Iuda: so fewery one which maketh mcon of it, shall be afraied therat, because of the counnell of the Lord of hoodles which he deuyseth for it.

In that daie shall fyue citis in the land of Egypte speake the language of Canaa, & were by the Lord of hoodles: for the cyrpe of desolacio shall be called one of them. In y daie shall the altare of the Lord be in y myddes of the land of Egypte, & thys tytle besyde it: VNTO THE LORD. And it shall be a token and witness vnto the Lord of hoodles in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto y Lord because of such as trouble them, & he shall send the a Sauoure & a great man to delpuey them.

And the Lord shall knowe in Egypte, and the Egypciens shall knowe y Lord in that daie, and do sacrifice and oblatio: pre they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The lord also shall smyte Egypte sore, & deale them agayne, & they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be intreated of them, & shall deale them. In that daie shall there be a conue wyse out of Egypte vnto Assyria, and Assyria shall come in to Egypte, & Egypte in to Assyria, so that the Egypciens and the Assyrians shall serue the Lord together. In y daie shall y nacio of Israel be the thyrd with Egypte & Assyria, and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the lande, which lade the Lord of hoodles hath blessed, sayeng: blessed is my people of Egypte, & Iur also is the woike of myne handes, and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

¶ Agayn Egypte and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Cherech came vnto Aod (whan Aod dragon y kyng of Assyria had sent him) and had foughte agaynst Aod and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hanc of Eay the sonne of Amos, sayeng: Go and take of the sacke clothe from thy lynes, & put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he ydo, walkinge naked and bare foote. And the Lord sayde: lyke as my seruauit Eay hath walked naked, and bare foote for a signe and wonder thre yeres vpon Egypte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take a wyse out of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, chylidren and olde men, naked and bare fore wyth their lynes vncouered, to the greateshame of Egypte.

They shall be brought in feare also, & as named one of another: Ethiopia of Egypte, and Egypte of Ethiopia, consideringe what gloze they were in a fore. And they y dwell in y same ple, shall saye in that daie: Scholbe. thus are we regarded. Whither shall we fye for helpe, that we maye be delpyered fro the kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

In the burthe of the wastel see: Euen is the thorny wyther y passer the row at the moone daie, to come from the wyldernesse, from that horrible lande. A greuous visio was thewed vnto me: Let one dyscreetfull offender come agaynst another, & one destroyer agaynst another. Thy clam, sape lege thou of the diad: all thy gronpunge haue I laped downe. Therefore are my lynes spyled with sorow, heynnes, hath taken holde vpon me, as the pages of a woman that is trauepling. It made me stoupe when I herde it, & it vexed me when I sawe it. My hart pated, fearfullnes came vpon me. The myght of my volunteeftnes hath he turned agaynst me into feare.

Whyle they garnished the table, y watch man loked: And while I was eatyng and dypnyng (it was sayde:) wy pe captaynes, take you to your wynde. For thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me: Go and let a watch man, to tell what he seyth. And he sawe a charret, which two horsmen sat vpon, with the cariage of an Ase, and the cariage of a camell. So he loked & toke very bylyt he de. And ypon cried, Lord, I lode waiping all the whole daie, & am appoyled to kepe my watch euery nyght. And behold, here cometh a charret of men, with two horsmen. And he answered & sayde: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, & all the ymages of y gods hath he smytte downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must chere, and thou and thou beldst to my corne doore. This that I herbe of the Lorde of hoodles & God of Israel haue I thewed vnto you.

E The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchmā, what halt thou sayd by nyght? Watchman, what halt thou sayd by nyght? The watchman sayde: E The moynynge cometh, & so doth the nyght. If ye will aske anye question, then aske it, retourne and come agayne.

The inhabitours of the lāde of Thema brought forth water to him that was thyrstie, they pyned him with their byrd that was fled awaye. For because of wordes are they be come fugitive, euen for the dayen swerde, and for the bent bowe, & because of the greuousnes of warre. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: There is yet a ycare accompyng to the peaces of an hynded seruant, & all the glory of Cedar shall faile. And the nombre of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be mynished by the myghthe chylde of Cedar, for so the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

E The xxii. Chapter.
A prophete agayn Iherusalem.

I The burthen of Iherusalem: What halt thou to do here, that thou clymest vnto the houle toppes? Thou that art full of occupying, thou sedicious & proude clype: thy slayne men are nether put to death wyth swerde, ner deed in batell. All thy captaynes are fugitive together, the archers haue taken their prisoners: All they that are founde in the, are in captiuitie together, because they fled farre of. Therefore sayd I: let me alone. E I will make lamentacion. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destruction of the daughter of my people. For this is a daye of trouble, of ruyne, & of destruction & the Lorde will bring to passe in the valley of vision, breakyng downe the citie, & crryng vnto mountaynes.

E Clam bare the quicke w a charact of fote men and of hoisinen, and the crrye of wyth the wynde ope. Thy chiefe valley also was full of charactes, and the hoisinen set their faces directly towarde the gate. And in y daye dyd the enemye take awaye & y betwixe of Iuda, and the wyddest thou loke towarde the remoure of the house of the rock. Per haue sene also y broken places of y citie of Dauid, howe that they are many, & ye gathered together the waters of the lower pole. As for the houses of Iherusalem: E ye haue nombyzed them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make y wall strong. A yit also haue ye made betwene the two walles, for the waters of the olde pole, and haue not regarded the maker thereof, nether had respect vnto him that toke it in pade.

And in that daye dyd the Lorde God of hoodles call men vnto weeping and mourning, to boldnes & grydyp aboute wyth sack cloth. E And I shold, they haue loye and gladnesse, sayng open & kylling the enemye crryng & dyngnyng wyne: E Let vs eate and drynke: for to morowe we shall dye. And it came to the eares of the Lorde of hoodles: This iniquite shall not be poured fro you till ye dye, sayeth y Lord God of hoodles. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hoodles: Go, get the into pounder treasurer, euen vnto Sebna, which is y ruler of y house. What halt thou to do here? and wyom halt thou here, that thou shuldest bere betwe the out a sepulchre, as it were one that beweth hym vnto a sepulchre an hye, or y grauntan habitation for him self in a hard rock.

Wholde, & thou man, the Lorde shall carye the awaye into captiuitie, & shall surely couer the with cofusion. The Lorde shall turne the ouer lyke a ball with his handes (and shall sende the) into a farre contrie: There shalt thou dye, & there (in steade of the charactes of thy pope) shall y houle of thy Lord haue confusion. I will dryne the fro thy place, & out of thy dwelling shall be overthrowed. And in that daye shall I call my seruante Eliabim the forme of helia. And with thy garmentes will I clothe him, and wyth thy gyrdle will I strengthe hym: thy powder also will I committe into his hāde & he shall be a father of such as dwell in Iherusalem, and in the house of Iuda.

And the keye of the house of Dauid will I laye vpon his shoulder, so y he shall open and no man shall shut. He shall shut, and no man shall open. And I will fasten hym as a nagle in a sure place, and he shall be the glorious frate of Iys fathers house. E I couer, all generations and posterities shall hang vpo him, all the glory of their fathers houle, all vessels both great and small, and all instrumentes of meature and mustek. In that daye (sayeth the Lorde of hoodles) shall the nagle that is fastened i the sure place departe, be broken and fall, and the burthen y was vpo it, shall be plucke awaye, for so the Lorde hath spoken.

A propheticall tribulation come vpon the world becauſe of ſynne.

Behold the lord maketh the earth wayt and emptye: he turneth it vpon y^e downe, & ſcattereth abode y^e inhabitants thereof: And y^e yeſt ſhall be as the people, & the maker as the ſeruant, y^e maſtreſſe lyke y^e mayd, y^e ſeller lyke the buyer: he that leueth vpon viſyre, lyke hym that dooweth vpon blure: the creditoure as the better. The world ſhall be cleane waſted & vterly ſpoiled for ſo the lord hath ſpoken. The earth is loyſed & conſumed awaye, the world is ſeble & periſheth, the proude people of y^e earth are come to naught. The earth alſo is become unpoſſible vnder the inhabitants thereof, which haue traſgreſſed the lawes, changed the ordinance, broken the eueralſting couenauent.

Therefore hath y^e curſe conſumed y^e earth, and they that dwell therein, are fallen into trefpace. Wherſore, the inhabitants of the earth are periſhed: with drouth, ad ſetene me are left beſpide. The wyne ſaileth: the wyne hath no myght, all they y^e haue bene merry of hart, are come to mourning. The myrth of tabrettes is layed downe, y^e noyſe of ſuch as haue made merry, is ceaſed, y^e ſoye at y^e perpe is at an ende. They ſhall wyne nomoze wyne w myrth, ſtrong drynke ſhall be better to them than drynke it. The citeye of banite is broken downe, euery houſe is ſhut vp, y^e no man maye come in. In y^e ſtreets is there a crye becauſe of wyne, all cheere is waſhed awaye, y^e myrth of the world is gone. In the citeye is left deſolaciō and the gate is ſmytten with deſtruction.

For in the myddes of the world, euen amonge the people, it ſhall come to paſſe, as at the ſhakyng of Olyues, and as the grapes are wch y^e wyne harueſt is done. They ſhall lyſt by theſe, voyce: and make a merry noyſe, and in magnifyng of the lord ſhall they crye out of the well. Wherſore, praye ye the lord in the valleys, euen the name of the lord God of Iſrael in the Iles of the ſea from y^e vttermoſt parte of y^e earth haue we heard prayles and myrth becauſe of the ryghteous. And I ſayd: I knowe a thyng in ſecrete. I knowe a thyng i ſecrete, w ſo me, the traſgreſſours haue offeſſed, the traſgreſſours haue gremouſly offeſſed. Senſuſnelle, the ppet and the ſnare are vpon the, w thou that dwelleſt i the earth. It will come to paſſe, that whoſo elapeth the fearful noyſe, ſhall fall in to the ppet. And he that cometh vpon out of the ppet, ſhall be taken wyth the ſnare. For the wyndowes from an hye are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is vterly broken downe, the earth hath a ſore ruyne, the earth quaketh exceedingly. The earth ſhall reſe to ſea lyke a dyched, and ſhall be remoued lyke a tent.

like a tent: (of one met) of the iniquitie thereof shalbe heavy vpon it. It shall fall, & not rise vp againe. And in that daye shall the Lord visite the host above vs on hye: & the kinges of the world shal come vnder the earth. And they shal be gathered together, as they shal be in prison: as they shal be shut vp inward, & after many daies shall they be visited. * The more shall be a banded, and the sunne ashamed, when the Lorde of hostes shall raygne in mount Sion and in Jerusalem with wo:shipp, and in the sight of such as shall be of his council.

¶ The xxv. Chapter.

¶ A thanksgiving to God for his wo:shipp.

¶ Thou arte the Lorde my God, I will magnifye thee. I will geue thanks vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wode-full things to passe, according to thyne olde counsell truly & faithfully. * Thou hast mad of a citye an heap of stones, and brought it stronge to wne into decaye. The habitation of strangers hast thou made to be no citye, neither shall it be builded any more. Therefore shall thy mightie people geue glory vnto thee: the citye of thy visitation shal be builded againe. * For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, and a succour for the needy in his trouble. A refuge aga ynst euell weather, a shadowe against heat. For the blast of ragging men is lyke a storme that casteth downe a wall.

¶ Lyke as thou bringest deathe downe out of a hye place, so shalt thou suppress the noyse of multitudes. * The heate is in thy shadowe of thy cloud: thy mightie shall be brought lowe. And in this moontayne shall thy Lorde of hostes make vnto all people a feast of pleasur, & delicate things, eue of most pleasur: unt & deperitie dishes. And in this moontayne shall thy Lorde bestrode the covering, & all people are wrapped in, and the hanging is spread vpon all nacpdes. * As for deathe, he hath destroyed it for euer. * And thy Lorde God shall wape awaye teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take awaye out of all the earth. For so the Lorde hath sayde.

¶ And in that daye it shall be sayde: Lo, this is our God, we haue waped for hym, & he shall saue vs. * Thy name is the Lord, in whome we haue hoped, we will relye in thy mercy & reioyce in the satisfaction that cometh of hym. For in this moontayne shall the hande of the Lorde create and Mon shall be thy shadowe vnder him, euen as then we is thy shadowe vnder thy shadowe. And he shall stretch out his hande in the myddes of them: as he shal sommereth, catcheth out his handes to sommer, and with the strength of his handes shall he bring downe their pyre.
The strength also and fence of thy walles shall be overthrowe & cast downe, & brought them to thy grounde, euen vnto dust.

¶ The xxvi. Chapter.

¶ In f daye shall thy songe be longe in the lande of Iuda. * We haue a stronge citye. * Saluacion shall God appoynte in steade of walles and bulwarks. * We will be gates of the rigteous people which kepe the truth map entre in. * Their minde is set vpon the, because thou preservest them: in peace, euen in peace: because they put their trust in the. But we pour trust all waye in the Lorde: for in the Lorde God there is strength for euermore.
* For he hath brought downe hye mynded citizens. * As for thy proude citye, he hath brought it lowe: euen vnto the grounde shall he cast it downe, & bring it vnto dust. The forte euen the forte of the poore: and the steps of such as be in neede shall treade it downe.

¶ The path of equyte wilt thou graunt vnto the iuste, & thou moost righteous, * thou shalt order thy path of him that is righteous.
Per, & in the waye of thy iudgements, O Lorde, haue we put our trust in the. * Thy name also: & the remembrance of the is thy thing that oure soules longeth for. * Thy soule hath longed for the all the night, and w mynne (which is within me) will I seeke the earlie in the morning. For when thy iudgements are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world shall learne righteousness. Shall the vngod-ly man be fauoured, which hath not learned righteousnes, but doth wickedly in the earth where nothinge ought to be done, but that which is righteous; he shall not see the glorye of the Lorde. Lorde, when thy hande is lyfte vnto stroke, they le it not: but they shall see it, and be confounded with the zeale of the people, and the pece that cometh by thine enemies, shall denounce them.

¶ Lorde, vnto vs thou shalt proude peace:
* for thou also hast wrought all our wo:shipp in vs. O Lorde our God, other lordes besede the hath subdued vs: but we will relye in only of the of thy name. * The deed will not lyne, & they shal be out of syre, will not rye agayne: therefore hast thou visited & cored them out, and destroyed all the memory of them. * Thou hast increased the people: O Lorde thou hast increased the people, & thou art prayled: thou hast sent the farrre of vnto all the coastes of the earth. * Lorde in trouble haue they visited the: they powred out their prayer, when thy chaunging was vnto them.
* Lyke as a woman shal be that hath wrone toward her traueiler, is thy & cryeth in her paynes, eue to haue we bene in thy sight, O Lorde. * We haue bene wchilde a suffer payne, & as though we had brought forth winde. For there is no saluacion in the earth, neither do y inhabitants of the world bring the felices. * Thy deed me shall paye, euen w thy body shall they rise agayne. A waile and syng ye that dwell in dust. For thy deed shall cast out them that be vnder her. Come my people, * enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doores about þ: * hyde thy selfe a lytle for a whyle, vntyll the indignatiõ be

The xxviii. Chapter.

A prophecie of the coming of christ, and destruction of iherusalem.

In that daye, the Lorde w his soze, great and myghty swearde shall visite * Leuiathan þ fugitiue serpent, cuf Leuiathan that croked serpent, and he shall slaye the dragon þ is in the see. In that daye, se þe syng of the congregatiõ which is the vineyard, þ bringeth forth þ best wyne. And þ the Lorde do kepe it. In bus seasons shall I water it, & lest the enemye do it any harme, I will both myght and daye puerue it. There is no displeasure in me, els when the vineyard bringeth fime forth beere s thowen? I wold go thowout by water, & buene it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, and it shall be at one wme, euen at one shall it be with me.

23 The dayes are cõsump, that Jacob shall take rote. Israel shall be grene a flozpe, and the woulde shall be filled with frute. With þe synner him as soze, as he did the other that synne him: W is he slain w so soze a slaughter as they that sle w him. In measure dorth he synne him, w hyle he sebeth vnto him soch things, wherby he cometh to hys mynde agayne. For in the daye that the east wynde bloweth soze, it taketh a waue the frutes.

Thus therefore shall the iniquitie of Jacob be reconceyded, and here is all the frute of the takinge a waue of his synne, yf he make all the stones of y antras of ydolies, as challe stones that are breken in iunder, that theye groues and pinages cpe not by agayne.

Els, shall the stronge cite be desolate, & the habitation forsaken & left lyke a wildernes. There shall the calfe fede, & ther shall he lye, & cate vp the grasse therof. When þ braides of it are drie, they are broken of, & the women come, and set the on lyer.

24 For it is a people of no vnderstanding, & therefore he that made them, shall not fauoure the,
and he y created the, shall geue them no grace. And in that daye shall the Lorde make a thick clowd in the middes of the ciuer En-phrates vnto the riuer of Egypte, and y children of Israel shall be gathered together one to another. In þ daye shall þ great tedye be blowne, so þ they which were lost in the lade of A Siria: & they that were banished into þ lande of Egypte, shall come and wold y þe

Lorde in the holy mount at Ierusalem:

The xxviii. Chapter.

A prophecie of the coming of christ, and destruction of iherusalem.

Whe vnto the crowne of wyde, euf * to the broken people of Ephraim * sin. 24 whose greut wyde is as a floure that saderth a wyne) * vpon the head of the valleye of such as be in wele, and are ouerladen with wyne. As holde, * ther commeth a vehemet and fore daye fro the Lorde lyke an vnmeasurable daye and perellous tyme, euen lyke the force of myghte and horrible waters, þ holsepe beareth downe all thinges. The crowne of the pryde of the broken Ephraimites shall be broken vnder foke: * so that the floure of hys faynes and bewep, which is in the head of the valleye of fatnes, shall fade awaye, as both an vntimely eppes egg afoze her selfe. Which whā a man speth, he loseth vpon it: and whyle it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In þ daye shall the Lorde of hostes be the croune of glozy, & diademe of be wyne vnto the residue of his people. He will be also a spi-rite of pcepte knowledg to him þ heere in iudgement, & strength vnto them that tuene a wyne the battell to the gate of the enemies.
But they are out of the wyne by reason of wyne: pce, farr out of þ waue are they tho-rowe strong dyneke. * The pcell also of the prophecie are gone astraue by the meanes of strong dyneke, they are broken w wyne, they go amisse thowowe strong dyneke: they faple in pphceyng & stoble in iudgment. For tables are so full of vomyte and fysthies, y no place is cleane. Who then shall such one reth knowledg? And whom shall he make to vnderstode the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignorant as yong chyldren, that are taken fro the mylke and are weened.

For they that be such must haue * after one lesson, another lesson: * after one cõmūdement, another cõmūdement, after one rule another rule, a fter one instruction another instruction, there a lytle and there a lytle. For he that speaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rudenes of speech, and a straunge language. If any man saue vnto them: lo, this is the rest wherwith ye maye cale hym that is weerce, they is the refel-thinge, they will not heken. * Therefore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpo le-son, cõmūdement vpon cõmūdement, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instruction, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasyon of stambling that they maye go on, and fall backward, be byn-sed, tangled and snared.

Wherefore, hence the worde of the Lorde w ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people which is at Ierusalem. Because ye haue sayd:

we haue made a cōuenant with death, & with hell are we at agreement. And though there go forth a sore plague, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made fauours out of rage, and vnder banishes are we hid. Therefore thus sayth y^e Lorde God: Beholde, I laye in Sion for a foundation a stone, eue a reed stone, a pfect^r corner stone, a sure foundation: whoso belereth, let hym not be to ha-tyre. Iudgment also will I laye to the rule, and righteousness to the balace: so y^e ha-pple shall take a waue your bayne confide-ce as a bloome, and the prey place of your refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

And thus the cōuenant that ye made wth death, shall be disannulled: and your agreement that ye made with hell, shall not stand. Yee, when the sore plague goeth forth, ye shall be trodden downe vnder it. ffrd the tyme that it goeth forth, it shall take you a waue. For early in the mornynge euerie daye: yee, both

The prophete

woeche saye of hym that made it, he made not me: And both an earthen vessel saye of him that saythoued it, he had no understanding: If it not hard at hande, that Ly-hanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shalbe take as the wodds/And in that daye shall deafe men heare the woordes of the booke, and the eyes of y blind shall se euen out of the cloud and out of dar-kenes. The meke spereed also shalbe mercy in the Lorde, and the poore amongst them that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holy one of Israel. For he that dyd violence, is brought to naught, and the scozefull man is confounded: and they roted out that were hastie so soone to vniuersitites, Makynge a man to synne in the worde, and that toke hym in a snare which repoured them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the eyghteous to naught. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, eue thus sayeth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shall not now be cofoldeid, ner his face pale.
But when he seeth his chyldren the woerke of my handes in the middes of him, they shall saue his name, and praye the holy Lord of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an errenpoule spere, shall come to vnderstandynge: and they that haue bene scozefull, shall learne doctrine.

The xxx. Chapter.

Chap. and the counsell of God, a counsell in the counsell of men. The wyse also shal teache the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Iherusalem went into egypte.

Isa. for those disobedient chyldren (sayth the Lorde) * that they will take counsell without me. Isa. y they will take a secret aduice, and not out of my spere, and therefore adde they spine vnto spine. Euen they that walke to go downe into egypte, and haue asked no question at my mouth: but seke strenght in the myght of pharaos, and trust in the shadowe of egypt. Therfore shall the strenght of pharaos be your confusion, and the truste of the shadowe of egypte your shame. For his captaynes were of ioan, and his ambas-sadores came vnto hanes. They were all ahamed of the people that could do them no good, and that might not helpe the, ner the wo-rcman any praye, but were theppes confusion and rebuke.

The deap burden of the beastes of the south in a lande of trouble: and augurthe, from whence shall come the ponge and olde lion, the vpper and fyre serpent that flyeth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare they riches, and vpon camels their treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For voie and nothyng worth shall the helpe of the egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Iherusalem. They shall haue strenght enough, of they will settle their myndes in quietnes. And therfore, go thy waye, and wyte thys before the in a table, & note it in a booke, that it maye finally remayne and be kept still for euer. For it is an obstinate people, * and dissembling chyldren, chylde that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

For they saye vnto the seers: Se not, and to the y be cleare of iudgement: loke not out eyght thynges for vs: but speake saye woerdes vnto vs: So shall out erroures, gett you out of this waye, departe out of this path, & turne the holy one of Israel sed vs. Wherfo-re thus sayth the holy one of Israel: Be cause your heretics rise agaynst this woerde, & because ye trust in wrongeous dealing & per-uerse iudgment, & put your confidence therein.
Therfore shall ye haue thys my chylde for yd destruction and fall. Ipke as an hye wall that faileth, because of some eyre of black, whose breaching commeth suddenly. And the buere therof is lyke an earthen vessel, which breaketh without helpe: so that in y burltynge of it, there is not founde one shewer to fetch fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pye.

For thus sayth the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel: In repentance & in * rest shall ye be safe in quietnes and sure co-spice shall be your strenght. But ye haue had no lph thereto. For ye haue sayd: So, but we will escape thozome hostes. Therfore shall ye fyre: & we will gett vs vp vnto swifte ben-des. And therfore shall your persecutours be swifter. And shall lye at the rebuke of one, & at the rebuke of v. shall ye all lye, eyll ye be left as a thpy mast vpon the topp of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hyll.
Therfore doth y Lorde cause you to wayte, y he maye haue mercy vnto you: to thynke that he maye haue the pmercyence, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Ale sed are all they that hope in hym.

Pf the people remayne in syon and at Iherusalem, thou shalt not be in daunger: but at the voyce of the complayne shall be haue mercy vnto the. And when he heareth it he shall geue the answere. And though the Lorde geue pou the bread of trouble, and the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be nomo-re so scant, but thyne eyes shall see thy rap-ne. Per, and thyne care shall & heare y col-lynge of hym shal doth speake behynde the. Thys is y waye, walke ye in it. Tur-ne not aside nether to the eyght hande ner to the left. Pe shall destrope also the conueryge of your spure ymages, and the decking of your golden pboles. Euen as filthyness shall ye put them a waye. And thou shalt lye vnto it. Gett the hence. Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy seede, that thou shalt loose the ground withall, and byed of the increace of the

of the earth, which shalbe fat and very plentiful. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fed in large pasture. Be open lykewise and the yonge alies, that eate the grounde, shall eate cleane psonder, which is poured with the wynde and the sunne.

Finally, vpon every hye mountaine and hyll shall ther be riuers and streames of waters, * in the dape of the grente slaughter, when the towres fall. * Moreover, the lyght of the moone shalbe as the light of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shalbe seuen folde, and haue as much hye as in leue dapes belyde: when the Lorde byndeth vp the soze of hye people, and healeth the trooke of their wold. Beholde, the same of the Lord cometh fro farre, and his presence is to dote, that no mā is able to byde. His lypyes are full of indignation, and hys tonge is as a consuming feer. Hys breth is as a belement floure of water, that reacheth vp to the necke. That he maye syte awaye the shepthen in the spue of vanitee. And his breth is as a bypde of error in the chawes of the people.

G And ye shall syng, lyke as in the nyghte, when the holy solespnyge beginneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of heet, lyke as when one cometh with a pyre vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the moost nightye one of Israel. And the Lorde shall cause his gloruous voyce to be heard, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenance and with the flame of consuming feer, with noysome lyghtenynge, with a thower, and with hable done. For thowse the voyce of the Lorde shall * Asur be destroyed, which smote other men with the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whither soeuer he goth, y rodde shall cleue vnto him, which the Lorde shall laye vpon him with tabrettes and barpes: and with grente warre shall he fyght agaynst his host. * For the feer of payne is opened from the beginning: yee, euen for bypnyge is it prepared. Thys hath y Lorde set in the depe, and made it wyde: the burning wher of is feer and muche wodge. The breth of the Lorde, which is a ryuer of bypnyge, both kyndle it.

¶ He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

taketh the victoie agaynst the householde of the trowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Howe the Egyprians are men, and not God, and their hoyses slich and not sperte. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth oute hys hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shulde haue bene helpe, and they shall all together be destroyed. * For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Like as the * Lyon of * Lyons whelpe conereth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed, though the multitude of theyr bedes crye out vpon hym, neither abashed for all the beape of the. So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mount Syon, and defende hys hyll. Lyke as byddes store aboute their nestes, * so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, * so he defende and deliuer Jerusalem. Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne, from that synedolte, wherein you downed your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out hys ydolles of syluer and hys ydolles of golde, which ye haue made with youre awne handes vnto poure synne. * Asur also shall sayne with the swearde, not with a mans swearde, neither shall the swearde of any man beuoure hym: And he shall fle from the slaughter: and his seruantes shalbe discomfited in their peres. Ye shall go for feare to hys strongholdes, and hys pynces shall fle from hys badges. Thys hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and his feer in Jerusalem.

¶ He constituta of good rules and a riewe.

Behold, a king shall gouerne after the rule of synghe wemesse, and the princes shall rule, accordyng to the baluance of equyte. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a riuer of water in a thicke place, and the shadowe of a grente roche in a drye lande. The eyes of the synghe shall not be dym, and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The heet of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowledg, and the vnparfytte tong shall speake playnely and distinctly. Theri shall the folyshe ngyarde be no moze called gelle, ner the churche liberall. But the ngyarde shall be nigrady minded, and his heet wylt woe: he euell and playe the pporite, and ymagyn abhominations agaynst God, to make the hungry leane, and to withholde drynke from the thurst. These are the perous weapons of the church, these be his shamefull comets: that he maye begyle the poore with discentfull wordes: yee, euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. * But the lyberall person ymagineth donce thynges, * cometh by for liberaltye vnto ymoatop.

The prophesye

C Alpe (ye pperche and ybell women) heken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cities, marke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shall ye be brought I feare, & ye careles cities. For haue ye not out, & the grape gatherer puge shall not come. & ye ryche pbelicities ye that feare no payrell. * As aqubed, you that lyue in aboundaunce: tremble, you that lyue careles: cast of your rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke cloth aboute you. For as the infants wepe when their mothers teetes are dryed: so shall you weape for your fayre felices and fruitfull vyneyardes. & y people felde shall be puge thornes and thistles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of voluptuonnesse and in euery cite that reioyseth.

D The palaces also shall be broke, & the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towres and bulwarkes shall become denues for euermore, y plenitude of milles shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that y sperte be powred vpon vs from above.

Then shall the wyldernes be a frutesfull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reheded for a wodde. Then shall equyue dwell in y desert, and rightousnes in a frutesfull land.

* Isoma. b. a

* And the rewarde of rightousnes shall be peace, and be frute rest & quietnes for euer.

* Is. xxiij. c

* And my people shall dwell in the pynnes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of conforse. And when the baple falleth it shall fall in the wodde, and the cite shall be set lowe in the valleye. & howe happy shall ye be, when ye shall safelye see your sech besyde all waters, and bypue thence the ste of pour open and affes.

The xxxij. Chapter.

It sheweth the vengeance agaynst the Acherans. A descrep: croun of them that shall see the Roide.

W O to the that be destroyed, thou brenkest the leage, where as none hath broken it with the: for when thou shalt leane be destroying, & thou thy self shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceasest from breakeing the leage, then shall they breake it to the. O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs: we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to such a early: and * our helth, in y tyme of trouble. At that confusioyge, the people fledd, and at thyn exaltynge, the theythen were scattered. And the peoples shall be gathered (which shall be powers) as are the gathering of Buzubus. And the multitude going to it, shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro.

The Lorde is exalted, for it is he y dwelleth an hye: he hath fylled zion with iudgement and rightousnes. And a sure stablyshing of thy tymes shall be strength, health, wisdom & knowledg: and the very feare of the Lorde shall be pterature of it. Beholde, y messengers shall crye without: & the ambulatours of peace shall weape bytterly: The stretes are wast, their wallerth no ma therein: God hath broken the appoyntment, the cyties are cast awaye, & me are nothing regarded y desolat erchis in heuynes. & Banus is named: & herse downe. Shars is lyke a wpledernes: & Balas & Chamel are despoiled of their frutes. And therfore sayth the Lord: I will vponowe: now will I be auanced: now will I be exalted as a nightye God. * Ye shall chereue stubble, & beare strewe, & poure sperte shall be the spere. y it maye consume you, & y people shall be burnt like yme, & as thornes buene y are heuen of, a cast in the spere.

* Isai. lxv.

Now heke to ye y are farre of, how I haue done, & confesse my power, ye y be at hande. The sinners at zion are as a prey, a soden fearfulness is come vpon y ppoctites. What is he amoge vs, say they, y shall dwell by y consuming fier: which of vs maye abyde that eueralting heat: y he y ledeth a godly lyfe, say I, & speake the thruthe: he y abbozeth gaines wone by violence & dyscrepe: he pperch his hande y he touch no rewarde: which stopperth his cares, y he heare no counsell agaynt y innocet blood: which holdeth downe his eyes, y he be none enuill. Yet is, y shall dwell on yre: whose fangeage shall be a bulwarch of rockes, to bym shall be geuen meate, & yhs waters shall not faile. y the cyies shall be y king in his glorie: y the king of y farre costres shall there be slaine: y the studied for feare thynge thus. * What shall then become of y scribe y of pperceuer of our in oney: what of him y feared our fairest honesses: y here shall y not see a people a strange tong to haue so dyskuled a language, y it may not be vnderstand: neither so strange a speech but it shall be percutted. y here shall zion be seue the heed cite of oure solempne feastes.

* Isai. lxvi. a.

There shall thynge espe be Ierusalem that glorious habitayd: y y iudernale y neuer shall remoue: whole napes shall neuer be taken out world without ende: whole coarces euery chone shall neuer corrupte: for the glorious magnificie of y Lorde shall there be present among vs: as a place, where knyge y wode epners & streames are, & thozow the which shall nether galey rowe, ne grente thynge sayle: * For the Lorde is our iudge, the Lorde is our lawe geuer. The Lorde is our king, and he him selfe shall be our saluoure. y there are y coarces to layde abroade, y they cannot be better. And therfore they haue not fyed their masse, nor byedde abroade their saple. y then there is dealed great people: yee, lame men come after the pray. y there pperch no ma that sayth: I am spech, but all euell is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The xxxij. Chapter.

It sheweth the vengeance of the Acherans, in which the byngdome and pterature of that people was destroyed to the church and congregation of Christ.

Come

Come ye heftthen and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thoueeth all þis therein: fround chaffe and all that groweth there vpon: for the Loide is angry wth all people, and his dispensure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, & deli-uered them to the slaughter. So þe their flayne shalbe cast out, and their bodies spynck: that euen the very hyles shalbe wet wth the blood of the. All the staries of heauen shall waite, and the best shall folde together lyke a roll, and all the staries therof shall fall, lyke as þe leaves fall from the vynes and fyggetrees.
For my sweard shalbe barbed in heant, and shall immediatly come downe in iudgment vpon Iouma, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Loide's sweard shalbe full of bloude, & be rusty wth the fatnes and bloude of lambes and goates, wth the fatnesse of the kidneys of wetthers. For the Loide shall kill a great offering in Bozra, & a great slaughter in the lande of Iouma. & there shall the unicornes fall wth them, and the bulles wth the gyauntcs: and their lande shalbe thorowely soaked wth bloude, & their grounde corrupt wth fatnes. And to the alio, Zion, shall come the daye of þe vengeance of God, and the prayer when thynne a wile iudgmentes shalbe recompensed. And his floudes shalbe turned to perry, and his earth to brimstone: & there wth shall the land be kindled, so that it shall not be quenched daye ney nyght: but smoke encrease, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall go thowowe it for euer. But pelicans, cozles, great oules and rauens shall haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shall spere out the lyne of decolation vpon it, & wepe it wth the stones of emptines. When kynges are called vpon there shalbe none, & all prices shalbe a waye.
Choyces shall growe in their palaces, netels and shuffes in their strongholdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a court for serpentes.
There shall straunge viſures and monſtru-ous bests mete one another, and the wylde kepe company together. & there shall the la-mia lye, & haue her lodging. & there shall the ouls make her nest, buyde, be there at home and bring forth his yonge ones. & there shall the hytes come together, & chone to his lyke.

And the thowow the scripture of the Loide and rendeth. There shall none of these thynges be sette out, there shall not one, nee loche lyke, saye. For what his mouth commaundeth that same doeth his spere gather together, o^r fullyllith. He hath said þis for the,
and to those beastes hath his handes deuiped the line: therefore those shall possesse the entreprauce from generatyon to generatyon, and dwell therein for euer.

C The xxxvj. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kyngdom of Chyia.

Betwixt the deserte and wilderness shall reioyce, the waste grounde shalbe glad and flopp as the lilly. & she shall floure like a p^{er}iauntine, and be topfull, and euer be geuyng of thanks more and more. For the gloze of Libanus, the bewytte of Chamel and Saron shalbe gene-her. These shall knowe the honour of the Loide, and the magnety of oure God. & And therefore strenghten the weak handes, and con-forte the feeble knees.

Save vnto them that are of a fearefull heart. Be of good chere, and feare not. & Be-holde, poure God cometh to take veng^{er}ance: and you shall see the rewarde that God geueth: God cometh his awne selfe, & will deliuer you. & Then shall the eyes of þe blind be lychtened, and the eares of the deaffe opened. & Then shall the lame man leape as an hart, & the vnde man as tonge shall geue

C The xxxvj. Chapter.

Of Jerusalem as it shall be by Schenherib, in the tyme of heuge Chyria.

In the xiiij. yere of king hezekias came Schenherib kyng of the Assyrans downe, to laye seage vnto all the stronge cities of Iuda, to conquer the. And the kyng of Assyrians sent Rablahed fro Lachis toward Jerusalem, agaynst king hezekias, wth an exceeding hoste, which set him by the conbye of the once-pole in the waye þe goeth thowow the fullers lode. And so there came forth vnto him Cha-kim Belshim sonne the president & Sobna scribe, and Joah Saphas sonne þe secretary.
And Rablahed sayde vnto them: Tell hezekias, that the great kyng of Assyrans sayth thus vnto him: What presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: I sayde, Su-erely thou shalt be in thy labour, when counsell & strenght are necessary to baryn:

ozelles wher to trustest þu, that þu callest the selfe of frome: * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a brook that of redde: I meane Egypte which be þe leaneþ vpon, it goeth into his bade & quatered byia thowome. ¶ Then to is pharaon the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf þu woldest saye to me: we truste in þe Lord our God. A goodly God in deede: whose bye places and outgare hezekias toke downe, and commaunded Iuda and Ierusalem to worshyp ouerly before the altare. Howe therfore deliuer hostages that thou rebellest nomore agaynst my Lord the kynge of Assirians. And I will geue the two thousande hostes: yf thou be able to set men vpon them: how darest thou resist the power of þe smallest pryncce, yf my Lord hath how darest thou trust in the charactres and hoste men of Egypte: Howouer, thinkest thou yf I am come downe hyther to destroye this lãd about þe Lordes wyll: The Lord sayde vnto me: go downe into þe lãde, that þu maist destroye it. ¶ Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Ioah vnto Rablaketh: Speake to vs thy seruantes (we praye the in the Syriã language: for we vnderstande it wel. And speake not to vs in the Iewes tong, lest þe folke heare which lyeth vpon the wall. ¶ Then answered Rablaketh: ¶ Thincke ye, þe the kyng sent me to speake this vnto yf Lord and yf hath be not sent me to them also, that I ye vpon the wall: that they maye be cõpelled to eate their awne donge, & drynke their awne steale to your.

¶ And Rablaketh stode rif, and cryed with a loud voyce in the Iewes tong, and saide: Howe take hede, howe the great king of the Assyrians geureth you warning. ¶ Thus sayth the king: Let not hezekias disceau you: for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Howouer let not hezekias confozte you in the Lord, when he sayth: The Lord without doubt shall defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cite into the handes of the kyng of the Assyrians, becaue hym not. But thus sayth the kyng of Assyria: opteyne my fauoure, enclpue to me: so maie euery man enclpue hys vncynardes and fygges trees, and drynke the water of his cyterne: vnto the tyme that I come my self, and brynge you into a lãde that is lyke your awne: where is wheate and wyne, which is both fowen with seede, and planted with vncynardes. of the cytle Sepharaim, Ena & Ana: Now when Hzekia had receaved the letter of the messengers, and read it, he went up into þ house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lorde. And Hzekia prayed before þ Lorde on this maner. O Lorde of hostes, þ God of Israel, which dwellest vpon * Che-rubin. Thou art the God, that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast * created heauen and earth: & en-clynge thyne ear Lorde & conspide, open thy-ne eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponde all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath sent his embassage to blasfeme the lpyng God It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and la-des, and cast theyr goddes in the fyre. Not withstandynge those were no goddes, but þ workes of mens handes, of wood or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Wel puerre then, O Lorde ouer God, from the vabes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely art the Lorde. Then Clave the sonne of Amoz sent vnto Hzekia, sayinge: Thus sayeth þ Lorde God of Israel. Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib þ kyng of Assyria, this is the answer, that þ Lorde hath geuen concenyng hym. Despised art þ, and mocked: O daughter of Spho-le hath thoue his head at the, O daughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, * whom hast thou defied and blasfemed: Agaynst whom hast thou lifted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lookes: euen agaynst þ holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruantes hast blasfemed the Lorde, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe. I will couer the hye moun-taynes, and rydes of Libanus with my hoismen. And there will I cut downe the hye Cedre trees and the fayrest fyre trees. I will vnto the bryght of it, and inro the chereft of hye tymbe wooddes. If there be no water, I will graue and drinke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dype the vp with the fere of myne host. Per, hast thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, & brought to passe of olde tyme: That same will I do nowe also:
walle, & destroye, and bynne stronge cyties vnto heapes of stones. For theyr inhabita-ours shall be lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. & theyr shall be lyke þ graffe & grene herbes in the felde, lyke the hey vpon house toppes, that with dreth afore it be grauene vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth and thy comynge home, yee, & thy madnesse a-gaynst me. Therefore thy fury onnes agaynst me, and thy wyde is come before me. I will put mynge in thy nose, and in thy pyde vnto in the chawne of the, and turne the about, eue the same waye thou comest. I will geue the also this token: (O Hzekia) thus yere that thou rate such as groweth of ye selfe & the le-sche yere. þ which springe agayne of the same, and in the thye yere, ye shall sowe & reape, yee, ye shall plante vineyardes, and en-tope the fentes therof.

And soche of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaut shall take eue benefyt, and bynne forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Ieru-salem, and the remnaut from the mounte Syon.

And thus shall the gelousy of the Lorde of S hostes byn to passe. Therefore thus I sayeth the Lorde, concenyng the kyng of the Assyrians. He shall not come into this cyte, and that shote no arrowe into it, there shal no shilde hurt it, neither shall they call bitches about it. The same waye þ he came, he shall retou-rne, and not come at this cyte, sayeth þ Lorde.
And I will kepe and saue þ cyte (sayeth he) for myne awne, and for my seruante Da-uidas sake.

* Thus the angel went forth, and slewe of the Assyrians host, and buried fourscore and fyue thousande. And whē men arose vp early in the mornynge, & beholde, they were slayne, and all laped full of dead bodies. So Sennacherib the kyng of the Assyrians brake vp, & dwelt at Nineue. Afterward it chaun-led, as he prayed in the temple of Aschab his God, that Aschab and Sennacherib had awne slaines slewe him with the sword, and fled into the lande of Armenia. And Aschab don his sonne raygned in his steade.

The Propheye

Sunne and byinge it ten degrees backward.
 * So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward, the which he was descended afore.

A thanchegeywyng, which hezekia kynge of Iuda wrote, when he had bene sycke, and was recovered.

I thought I shulde haue gone to the gates of hell when myne age was thortenred, and haue wanted the respynde of my peares.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer vntill the Lorde (the Lord I saye) in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man among the dwellers of the woylde. Myne age is folden by together, & taken awaye from me, lyke a shepherdes cottage: I haue bene of my lyfe by my synnes, lyke as a weener cutteth of hys webbe.

He will with yppynge of hys necke make an ende of me: yee, he will make an ende of me in one daye.
 * I thought I wolde haue lyncd vnto the moztowe, but he broked my bones lyke a lyon, and in one daye thou wilt make an ende of me.

Then charged I lyke a swalowe, and lyke a crane, and mourned as a dove.

I lyfte vp myne eyes into the heygth: O Lorde (sayde I) my synnes kepeh me downe: cast thou me.

What shall I saye? The Lorde hath made a promise to me. Yee, and he him selfe hath performed it. I shall therefore as longe as I lyue remembre thys bitternes of my lyfe. O Lorde men maye lyue beyond the yeres, and I will declare to all men: that euē in those yeres I haue a soylfull lyfe, and that it was thou that causest me to scape and agayne thou hast geuen lyfe to me. Beholde bytter as gall was my penyfuynesse, so forse longed I for helth. And it was thy pleasure to deliuer my lyfe, from the swete yppre, for thou it is (O Lorde) that hast cast all my synnes bebynde thy backe. * For hell is apertly not thy, death doth not magnifye the.

They that go downe into the graue prayse not thy treuth: but the yuyng, yee, the lyuing a knowlege of thy lyke as I do this daye.

The fithre telleth hys chyldren of thy faythfulnesse. * To heale me it is the Lorde woche, and we will synge in songs in thy house, all the dayes of oure lyfe. And Eshay sayde: take a playster of fyrgges, and laye it vpon the soze, so shall it be whole.

Then sayde hezekia: O what a great miracle is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde?

The xxxij. Chapter.

Hezekia is rejoyced of escape, because he hath hys treasure vnto the chambryoure of Babylon.

* The same tyme Herodach Saladam, Saladamus sonne kynge of Babylon, sent letters ad pyfyners to hezekia. For he vnderstode howe he had bene sycke, & was recovered agayne. * And hezekia was glad therof, & thewed the commodities of hys treasure, of syluer, of gold, of spices & robes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cubboirdes & treasure houses. There was not one thing in hezekias house, and to thow out all his kyngdome, but he let the se.

Then came Eshay the prophete to bynge hezekia, and lapyd vnto him. What haue the men sayde, and from wher came they vnto the hezekia answered: they came oute of a farre countre vnto me, out of Babylō: Eshay sayde: what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? hezekia answered: All that is in myne house haue they seene: and theris nothinge in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Eshay vnto hezekia: stande yf wolde of the Lord of hostes: * Wholde, the tyme will come, that euery thyng which is in thyne house, and all that the pyngentiores haue layde vpin in store vnto this daye, shall be caried to Babylō, and nothing left behynde. This sayeth the Lord. Yee, and parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, ad whom I shall get, shall be caried hence, and become geibed chamberlaines in the kyng of Babylons court. Then layde hezekia to Eshay: Now God prosper hys awne counsell, which thou hast tolde me. He sayde moze ouer: So yf there be peace & faithfulness in my tyme.

The xl. Chapter.

Odmofte my people: O ye prophetes: comforte my people, sayeth your God, comforte Ierusalem at the best, & tell her: yf her transpale isat an ende that her offense is pardoned, that she hath recovered of the Lordes hande sufficient cozercis for all her synnes. * A voyce cryeth in wilderness. Prepare the waye for yf Lorde in the wilderness, make streygth yf path for oure God in yf desert. Let all halles be exalted, & euery moztayne a hill be laped lowe, what is exalted, let it be made streygth: let the rough be made playne felles. * For yf glory of the Lorde shall appere, and all feths shall at once se it, for wher the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And yf prophet answered: what shall I crye? * that all feths is gentile, & that all the goblins the rot, is as yf floure of yf felde. gnifyng hym amonge the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a gadye, and take a stomack to hi lyke as a fresh mā of warre.
He shall ronne & crye, & overcome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my pence: (sayeth the Lorde) I haue bene tyll and refrayned my selfe, but nowe I will crye lyke a troue-lyng woman, & at once will I destroye, and denoure. I will make waye both mountayne and hill, & drye vponer grene thyng y groweth thereon. I will drye by the floudes of water, and dryche by the ryuers. I will byng the blinde into a strete, that they knowe not.
and lede them into a fote path, that they are ignourant in. I shall make darkness lyght before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streight. These thynges haue I done vnto them, and not forgotten them: * They are fallē backe yee, and let them be ashamed earnestly, that hope in ydoles, & saue to fāp-nyed pynges: yee are oure goddes.

Hence, O ye deafe men, and sharpe poure seyghtes to se: O ye blinde, * who is blinde, to blynde (saye they) as the perfecte man and to blynde as the Lozde seruante: Thou vnderstandest much, and hepest nothinge: the eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lozde is mercifull vnto the for his rpyghteousnesse saie: that his woode myght be magnified ad paped. But the people them selues is robbed and trode vnder the fote chapynd in don-geons and they all (I saye) be shut into prison houses. * They be carped awaye captiue and no man doth lowse the: They be troden vnder fote, and no ma doth laboure to bring them agayne. * But who is he amonge you, y poudreth this, that confydreth it, & maketh it for a warninge in tyme to come?

* Who suffred Jacob to be trodden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled: yd not the Lozde? Because we haue sinned agaynst him & haue had no delyste to walke in his wayes, neither bene obedient vnto his lawe. Therefore hath he poured vpon hym his wrathfull displeasure, and stronge battail, which spareth hym on euery syde, yet wyl he not vnderstande. He burneth hym vp, yet synkerth it not into fyer here.

¶ The. xliii. Chapter:

¶ God promyseth to send his chere, which shall drawe his people. He sayeth synners for the atone sake.

In now, the Lozde that made the Jacob, and he that fastyoned the: O Israel, sayest thus: * I feare not, for I haue redeemed the. * I haue called the by name: thou art myne atone. * If thou goest thorow the water, I will with the, that the stronge floodes shulde not pluck the awaye.
* And yf thou walchest thorow the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flume shall not hynde vnde the. For I am the Lozde thy God the holy one of Israel, thy sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Moziars & the Shabars for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, and because I set by the, and loued the. I will geue ouer all men for the, and deliure vp all people for thy sake, feare not:
for I am with the. * I will bynde thy lede fro the East, and gather the together fro the west. I will laye to the North, lett go. And to the South, kepe not backe: & but bring me my sonnes from farr, and my daughters fro the endes of yf woode. Namely, all those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, fastyoned, & made for myne honour.

* Bynge forth that people, which is blinde & yet hath eyes, which are deafe although they haue eares. * If all nations come in one and be gathered together, which amonge the shall declare soche thynges, and tell vs what is to come: Let them bynge the: yet witnesse to what they be se: els, let them heare, and saye, it is tenty. You are my witnesse, sayth the Lozde: and my seruunt, whom I haue choosen: therefore be certified ad geue me faith-full credence: and confyde, * that I am he, before whom there was neuer any God, and that ther shalbe none after me. I am euen, I am the only Lozde: and beside me ther is no sauoure. I gaue warninge, I made whole I taught you when there was no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me poure selues, (sayth the Lozde, that I am God. And enen he am I from the begyninge, and * there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. I do the worke and who shall be able to let it.

Thus sayeth the Lozde the holy one of Israel poure redeimer: * for poure sake I haue sent to Babylon, and brought downe yf stro-gest of them. All they are fugitiue with the Chaldees that boost them of theyr shippes: Euen I the Lozde poure holy one which haue made Israel, and am poure kynge. Thus sayeth yf Lozde: * euen he that maketh a woye in the see, & a foord in the myddle waters: * which bringeth forth yf char-rettes, horses, the hofte & the power of warre, that they may fall and neuer rise, and be ex-tincte, like as towre is quenched.

Remember not thynges of olde, and re-garde nothinge that is past. Scholde I shall make a newe thyng, and shortly shall it ap-peare, & shall you not knowe it: I will make streets in the deserte, and ryuers of water in the wyldernes: The wyldernes shall wozshyppe me: the dragons, and the yonge striches. * For I shall geue water in the wyldernes, and streames in the desert: that may geue drinke to my people, who I cha-le. These people haue I made for my self, and they shall thewe forth my payne. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnluft toward me, O Israel.
Thou gauest me not thy brastes for burnt offerings: neither dydest honour me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no brare spe-ce with thy money, neither purchasedst the fat of thy sacrifices vnde me. * howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerings, neither greuous in inke. Vnt thou hast ladde me with thy synnes, & wrotyd me with thy-ne wogdopis.

* Where as I yet, ene I am he onely, that for myne awne selfe sake do a wape thyne offres, and forget the synnes: so that I will neuer thinke vpon them. But me now in re-membraunce (for we wyl reason together) & shewe what thou hast for the, to make the rpydreous. * Thy fyist father offended soze, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me.
Therefore I ether sulped, or lue the cheest pyures. I byd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel into reppose.

The Prophecie

Which prometh to burne the church.

And heare nowe, O Jacob my seruant, and Israel whō I haue chosen. For thus sayeth the Lord, that I haue made the, fashioned y, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe. We not aske, O Jacob my seruant, thou speakest, whō I haue chosen. * For I shall poure water vpon the drye grounde, & cyders vpon the thyncke. * I shall poure my spere vpon the sede, and myne encrease vpon thy stock. They shall growe together, lyke as y grasse, and as the willowes by the waters syde. * One shall saye: I am the Lordes. Another shall call hym self after the name of Jacob. The thynde shall subscribe with hys hande vnto the Lord, and geue hym self vnder the name of Israel.

25 Thus hath the Lord spoken: euen the kynge of Israel, and his redeemer, the Lord of hostes: * I am the first and the last, and without me is there no God. If any be lyke me, lett hym call forth the thynges paste and openyng thewe it, and laye it playne before me what hath chaunced ynce. I apouerted y people of the world, and what shall be shortly: or what shall come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let them thewe these thynges. We not abashed nor ashyde. For haue not I encreased pouertherto, and warned you? Ye can beare nyne recorde poure felus. Is there any God ccept me? or any maker, that I shulde not knowe hym?

* Esa. xlii. b.

* Esa. xlii. b. Esa. xlii. c.

All caruers of Images are but vayne, & the carued ymagas that they loue, can do no good. They must beare recorde the felus, that (seynge they can nether se nee vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. * Who darre they make a God, or fashion an ymage, that is profitayle for nothyng? * Beholde, all the felowshyppe of them must be brought to confusion. And truly all the worke maisters of them as men, they shall all be gathered to gyther, they shall stande, trefie, and be confounded one with a nother. The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with boate coales, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh w it with all the strength of hys armes: yee, to meet tyme he is saynt for deap hunger, and so sheweth, that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh measure of the tymbe: and spredeth forth his yne: he maketh it with some coloure. he playneth it, beulet it, and squereth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and according to the bewty of a man: yf it myge stande in the temple.

26 Moreover, he goeth oute to hewe downe the trees. He bynnyeth some Elmes and Ches: and takynge a bolde cozaige, he sekerth out the best tymbe of the wodde. He him self hath planted a pyne tree, which the capne hath swelled, which wood serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh of yce of it to haue breade. And after wards he maketh a God there of, to honoure it: an ydole to knelle before it. One peece he burneth in y fyre, with another he rostedd flesh, that he maye eate colde byghely full: with the thynde he warmeth hym self, and sayeth: I ha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh y a God, an ydole for hym self. He knelleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: deliuer me, for thou art my God.

* Per men nether cōspise nee vnderstande, because they cys are stopp'd, that they cannot se: and their hertes, that they cannot perceaue. They ponde not in they mynides, for they haue nether knowlege nee vnderstandynge, to thynke thus. I haue byent one peece in the fyre. I haue baked bread with the coles there of, I haue rostedd flesh with it. * I eaten it: I shall knowe of the residue make an abhominable ydole, and fall downe before a rotten peece of wood? * Thus he doth but lese hys labour, and hys detre which is disceaued, both tyme hym aspe: so that none of them can haue a fre conscience to thynke: maye not I erre?

Considre this (O Jacob and Israel) for thou art my seruant. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israel, forget me not. * As for thyne offences, I haue depuen them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy synes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me, for I haue redeemed the.

Be glad ye heuens, whō the Lord hath made for the: the Lord hath dealete graciously w hys people, let all that is here beneth vpon y earth, beiofull. Reioyce ye mountaynes and woddes, with all the trees therof: for y Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and will shewe hys gloiy vpon Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord thy redeemer, cuf he that fashioned the from thy mothers wombe. * I the Lord, do all thynges my selfe alone. I only spede out the heuens and I only haue layde the foundacy of the earth by myn awne selfe. I destroye the toles of witches, and make the soothsayers foolles. As for the wyle, I turne them backward, and make they connyng folyshnesse.

He doth set vp the purpose of his seruante, and fulfilleth the counsell of his messengers. Concernynge Ierusalem, he sayeth: It shall be inhabited. And of the cryes of Iuda: They shall be buylded agayne, and I will repaye they decayed places. He sayeth to the goddes: be deye. And I will dye by the water foudes. He sayeth of Egypt, & of his myne herberman: to that he shall fulfyll all thynges after my will. he myght also of Ierusalem: It shall be buylded, and of the temple: It shall be fast grounden.

¶ The last Chapter.

the consequence of the people by Egypt. The consequence of Egypt and challenge of the Christians.

1 Thus saith the Lord vnto Cyrus his anoynted whom I haue taken by the right hande, to subdue nationes before hi. * I will lowe the gyble of kynges, & I will open y gates before his face, and not to that their bores. I will go before the, and make the croked streight, I shall breake the broken bores, & burst the yron barres. I shall geue the y byd treasures, & the thyng which is secretly kept: thou mayest knowe that I am y Lord God of Israel which haue called the by thy name: & that for Jacob my seruantes sake, & for Israel my chosen. for I called the by thy name, and opened the eyes thou knewest me. * Cus I the Lord be- fore whos there is none other: for without me there is no God: & I haue prepared the eyes thou knewest me, that I myght be knowne for the ryng of y sunne to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothinge without me. for I am y Lord, and there is els none. It is I y created the light & darknes. & I make peace and trouble: yee, cus I the Lord do all these thynges. * Ye heauens sit above droppe downe, & let the cloudes raine ryghteounes. The earth open it selfe, and bringe forth heath, that ther by righteounes maye flourish. When I the Lord bringe it to passe.

* Wo be vnto him y stryuerth in his ma- her, the pottherde with the potter. Sayeth y clype to the potter. What maketh thou: or thy wothe serueth for nothinge: Wo be vnto him that sayeth to his father. Whyppegettest thou? And to his mother: whyppearest thou? Thus saith the Lord, euen the holy one, & maker of Israel. Alue me of thynges for to come, & concerninge my sonnes: and put me in remembrance, as touching the woche of my hiden. I haue made the earth, and created man vpon it. Wely myne handes haue I spred forth hea uen, and geuen a commaundement for all the host thereof. I shal wake him vp with ryghteounes, and orde all his wayes. * Ye shall buyde my crye, and let out my prisoners: & that nethe for grete noyze wordes, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus saith the Lord. The occupiers of Egypt, the marchauntes of the Egyptians and Sabers, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be thyne, they shall followe the, and go with cheyrenes vnto their sets. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. * Whowee pprofounde art y God, thou God and Shynour of Israel: y Confounded are they all, and put to dishonoure: they are gone hence together with shame, euen y ma- hers of ymagines. But Israel shall be saved in y Lord, which is the euertlasting saluacyon, he shall not come to shame ner confusyon,

for thus saith the Lord: * euen be that created heauē, the God that made the earth, that fastyoned it, and sett it forth, he dōd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited: Euen I the Lord, without whom there is none other. * I haue not spokē secretly, ne- ther in darke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I saye vnto the sebe of Jacob: like me. I am the Lord, which when I speake, declared the thing that is rightuous: & true: gather you & come together, draw me hether, you y are escaped of the people. * haue they eue vnderstandynge, that let by the thornes of thes y doles, & praye vnto a God, that cannot helpe them: draw nye, come hether, and let the al councell one at another and shewe forth. What is he, that tolde this before: or, who spake of it. eue since the be- gynnynge haue not I the Lord done it: * but out whom there is none other God: the true God and Shynour, and ther is els none but I: * And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) that ye maye be saved: for I am God, & there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: oute of my mouth cometh the word of ryghteounesse, and that maye no mā turne: * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shall sweare by my name, saying. Merely, in the Lord is my ryghteounesse and strength. To him shal men come: but all they that thynke scoone of him, shal be confounded. And the whole sebe of Israel shal be iustified and make their bowls in the Lord.

Consider this well, and be ashamed. So into your own selues (O ye cunningeaters.) Remembre the thynges which are past, sence y^e begynninge of the worlde: that I am God & that there is els no God, yee: & that there is nothinge, lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thyng. ¶ The xlviij. Chapter.

¶ The word of the Lorde against Babylon.

Behold as for the (O daughter, y^e byrgyn Babylon) yet thou downe in the dust lye vpon the ground, & yet in a throne (O thou mayden of Caldea.) Thou shalt no more be called tender, & pleasant. * Whyllyng forth thy quene, a grinde meele, vntill she be wyrded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees, & waide thowre y^e water ryuers.

* Thy shame shall be discouered and thy pympnes shall be leue. For I will avenge me of the: & will geue no mercy to the ag, I do to other men I saye thoure redeemer, which is called y^e Lorde of hostes the holy one of Israel.

¶ She shall holde thy ruyne, and get the in to some darch: coynce (O daughter Chaldea) for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyngdomes. I was so wroth wth my people, that I punished myne encheriuer, and gaue them into thy power, & securityers, y^e shewedest the no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them, bydest thou oppresse ryghte soze with thy yock, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be lady for euer. And helpe all that, thou hast not regarded the thynges, nether remembred what was the ende of that cytie Ierusalem. Heere now therefore, thou wilt full, that spitteth so careles, and speakest thus in thyne herte: * I am alone, and without me is there none: I shall neuer be wydow, ner desolate agayne. And yet both these thynges shall come to the vpon one daye in the twynclinge of an eye: & namely, wydowhood, and desolation. * Thy shall myghtely fall vpon the, for the multitude of thy wylches, and for the grente heape of thy consurers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes, and hast sayd.

* A woman seyth me. O thine awne wydome and connyng hath deceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone and without me there is none. Therefore shall trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe, from whence it shall aryse. Whylke shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodayne vnter destruction, shall come vpon the: or eue thou be aware.

¶ Nowe go to thy consurers, & to the multitude of thy wytyches (with whom thou hast weryed thy selfe fro thy youth) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou hast p^rserto had many counsell of them, to let the heuen gaers and the beholders of starres and moone prophets come on nowe and de- luer the: yee, and lett the shewe, when there newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde, they shall be lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye ryde it for the vehemence of the flame. And yet it geueth no synders to warne a man by, ner cleere fyre to syt by, & thus are they with whom thou hast weryed thy selfe, and thus are thy marchantes that haue bene with the from thy youth. Euerp one hath taken his awne waye and shall none of them defende the.

¶ The prophete of the Ierew is expressed. The Lorde is alone with the wylch wytyches, which hath chosen the, and which consureth be for his awne sake.

Eare this, O thou house of Jacob: ye that are called by the name of Israel, adore come out of one stocche with Iuda: which I weare by the name of the Lorde, and beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with tructh and ryghte) which are called * freemen of the holy cytie, & are grouded vpon the God of Israel, & whose name is y^e Lord of hostes.

¶ The thynges that I the Lord pou er sent: sence the begynnyng haue I not brought them to passe, immediatly as they came out of my mouth, and declared them, and they are come: howbeit, I knowe that thou art obstinate, and that thy mych hath an yron yegne, & that thy byowes is of brasse. Securityers, I haue euer sence the begynnyng the wed the of thynges for to come, and declared the vnto the, & eue they came to passe: that y^e shouldest not saye. myne fool hath done it, my caried or molten ymage hath the word it. Thou berdest it before, and beholde, It is come to passe, and wherher can ye prophete of thynges to come: But as for me, I tolde the before at the begynnyng, newe and secret thynges, that thou knowest not of. * And some done nowe, not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer herdest before they were brought to passe: y^e thou canst not saye: Beholde, I knewe of them: Howeouer, there be some wherof y^e hast nether hearde ner knowne, nether haue they bene opened vnto thine eares afore tyme. For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called the a traitour, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Securityers.

Nevertheless, for my names sake, I will wotke vnto the Lorde my God. And nowe sayeth the Lorde, euen he that hath yoned me from my mothers wombe to be his seruante. I myne bying Jacob agayne vnto him: how best, I saie will not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose sight I am gentle, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength.
And he sayde: It is but a small thinge that I act my seruante, to sett by the handes of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Irael. * For I haue made the light of the Gentyls, that thou mayst be my health vnto the ende of the world.

Wherefore, the Lorde God and hys spete hath sent me. And thus sayeth the Lorde God thy redeemer, the holy one of Israel: I am the Lorde thy God, which teach the profitable thynges, and leade the waye, that thou shouldest go. * That thou hadst regarded my commandmentes, then had thy welthyng bene as the water streame: and thy elghtconnes as the waues flowynge in the see.
Thy fere shoulde be like as the sayde in the see, and the frute of thy body lyke y granelle stones thereof. If his name shoulde not be roted out: nor destroyed before me. * So awaye fro Babylon, fye fro the Chaldees w a mery voys speake of this, declare it aboarde, and go forth vnto the ende of the world, saye: The Lorde hath redeemed hys seruante Jacob, that they suffred no thurst, he lead them thorow the wilderness, and caused y waters to flowe out vnto them fro out of the rocke.
* He claue the rocken founteyn, and the water gushid out. * As for the vngodly, they haue no peace, sayeth the Lorde.

art my seruante Israel, y I wil be honoured in the. * Then answered I: I haue lost my laboure, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

Nevertheless, I will comyt my cause and my woyke vnto the Lorde my God. And nowe sayeth the Lorde, euen he that hath yoned me from my mothers wombe to be his seruante. I
best, I saie will not be gathered vnto hym
agayne. In whose sight I am gentle, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength.
And he sayde: It is but a small thinge that I
act my seruante, to sett by the handes of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Irael. * For I haue made the light of the
the ende of the world.

Whereover, thus sayeth the Lorde the anger and holy one of Israel: because of the ab-hoyringe and deuyssinge amonge the Gentles, concerning the seruante of all them that beare rule. Kynges and princes shall se, and arise and wrothyp, because of the Lorde that is saythfull: & because of the holy one of Irael, which hath chosen the. And thus sayeth the Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I heard the, and in the daye of saluacion haue I deli-uered the. * I will preserve the and make the to be the atonement of the people, that y mayst helpe vp the earth agayne: y possesse agayne the desolate heritages. * That thou mayest saye to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknesse: come into the light.
For they shall fede in the hye wayes, and get their pasture in all hye places. * They shall neither hunger, nor thurst: beate nor fenne shall not hurte them. For be that fauoured them, shall leade the, and geue them dynerke of the springe welles. I will make wayes vps all my mountaynes, and my fore partes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shall come fro far: lo, some from the north and west, some from the lande of Shims, which is in the south.
* Reioys ye heauens: yunge prayes, thou earth. Talke of toye ye helles, for God hath comforted hys people, and will haue mercye vpon his that be in trouble.

But Zion sayde: * God hath forsaken, & my Lorde hath forgotten me. Will a wyfe forget the childe of her wombe, and not pite the sonne who she hath borne? And though, they do forget, yet will not I forget y. Be-holde, I haue witten the vp vpon my handes, take a wage. Then the child who the barren shall bring forth unto y, shall saye in thynne eare: thy place is to narrowe, gyve place y I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thynke by thy selfe: who hath begotten me these? since I am barren and alone, a captiue and an out cast? And who hath noursched the vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these?

And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hande to y Gentyls, and set vp by my token to the people. Thy shall bring the thy comnes in their lapys: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy nursing fathers, and queenes shall be thy nursing mothers. Thy shall fall before the wth thy faces flat vpon the earth: and lyke vnto the dust of by fete: that thou mayest knowe how that I am the Lord. * And who so putteth his trust in me, shall not be confounded. Who spoked the gyante of his prapre: or who taketh the welson of the mightye? And therfore, thus sayeth the Lord. The prisoners shall be taken from the gyante, and the people deliuered from the violence: for I will maynteyne thy cause agaynst thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thyne enemyes with thys a wne fleshe, and make them drynke of thys a wne bloude, as of sweete wyne. And all fleshe shall knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lord thy minour, thy noble redeemer.

The Gentils are reproved, and also called.

Thus sayth y Lord: * where is y byll of your mothers deuorcement, that I sent her awaye: or who is y blurce, to who I sold you? * Behold, for your a wne offences are ye sold, & because of youre transgression, is youre mother forsake. For why wolde no ma receaue me, when I came: and when I called, no ma gaue me answere. * I maye haue thowened that it might not helpe: or haue I not power to deliuer lo. * at a woode I dryncke by the see: and of water fountes I make drye lade: so that for want of water, the fylde coureth and drye for thurst. * I for heauen, I clothe it with darkeclisse, and put as it were a sack vpon it.

The Lord God hath geue me a well learned tongue, * so that I can comfort the which are troubled: yee, and that in due reason. He wakeneth myne eare vp by tymes in y morninge: by tymes in the morninge, I saye, he will waken myne eare, that I myght heere as to y stole milters. * The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye, naye: ner wyl I denye my selfe: * but I offere myn backe vnto the smelters, & my chekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face fro shame and shewing, & the Lord God shall helpe me: therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue pardoned my face like an flynt stone, for I am sure, y I shall not come to confound. Ipe is at hand that lustifieth me, who will then go w me to lawe: I et vs stande one agaynst another: yf there be any y wyl reason with me, let hym come here forth to me: * Behold, the Lord God standeth by me, what is he then y can condemne me lo. * thy shall be as thine as an olde clothe, the mothe shall eate the in vp.

Therfore, who so feareth the Lord among you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruante, whose walketh in darkeclisse, and no lyght shyneth vpon him: lett hym put his trust in the name of the Lord, and hold him by his God. But take heere, & ye all hyde a fyxe of the wrath of God, and there by the coales: walke on in the glistering of your a wne fyxe & in y coales y ye haue kindled. This cometh vnto you from my hande, namely that ye shall sleepe in sorowe.

Chap. li. Chapter.

Consolacion & comfort is promysed vnto the captiue.

Enter vnto me, y ye holde of righteousnes, & ye that feare the Lord. Take heere vnto y stone, wherout ye are broken, & to the graue wherout ye are digged. Consolace * A bzahd your father, & Sara y bare you: howe y? I called him alone, & blest hym, and increased him. Therfore shall the Lord comforte Sp, & repaie all her decaye: making her deserte as a paradise, & her wilderness as y garde of the Lord. Myrrh and iope shall abound there, shalkegeuine & yoyce of myrrh. Haue respect vnto me the, O my people both by ghe & lowe & sape thyme eare to me: * for a lawe & an obediace shall go forth from me, to lyghten the Gentils. It is hard by, that my health & my righteousnes shall go forth, and the people shall be ioyded with myne arme.

The plandes, y is the Gentils, shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lift vp your eyes towarde heauen, and loke vnto the earth breeth. * for the heauens shall vayne the awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall waxe olde lyke a cloth, & they y dwell therein shall perishe in lyke maner. But my saluacion shall endure for euer, and my righteousnes shall not cease. Brethen vnto me, y that haue pleasure in righteousnes, y people y beareth my lawe in thynne heart. * feare not the curse of men: be not asfraid of their blasphemys and reuylges: * for women & mothers shall eat the vp lyke clothe & wool. But my righteousnes shall endure for euer, & my sayunge health fro generation to generation. Wake vp, wake vp: and be stronge. O thou arme of the Lord, wake vp, lyke as in tyme past, euer and since the woelde beganne.

Moreover, those shall come helping vnto the, that haue vexed the: and all they that despyed the, shall fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lorde, Zion the cytie of the holy one of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, so that none wold receyue the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioshul thow out all posterities: * Chou shalt sucke the mycke of the Gentiles, and kynges dyckles shall fede the. And thou shalt know, that I the Lorde am thy Sauour and redeemer, the myghty one of Jacob. For byasse, I will I geue the golde, and for yron silver: for wood basse, & for stones yron. I will forge thine opprellion into peace, & thine exactions into righteousnes. Altolence and robbery shall neuer be heard of in thy lande, neither harme and destruction with in thy borders. Thy walle shall be called healeth, and thy gates the praye of God. * The Summe shall neuer be thy daye lyght, and the lyght of the Summe shall neuer thync vnto the: but the Lorde him selfe shall be thine euerylastyng lyght, and thy God shall be thy gloz.

* Chy Summe shall neuer go downe, and thy Summe shall not be hydde, for the Lorde hym selfe shall be thy euerylastyng lyght, and thy sozowfull dayes shall be ended. Thy people shall be all righteous, and possesse the lande euer: the house of my plantyng, the worke of my handes, wherof I will reioyce. Thy pough and leek shall growe in to a thounland, and the spynckle in to a stronge people. I the Lorde shall mostly byngie this thynge to passe in his tyme.

Chy. I. Chapter.
The prophete that wherof haue anoynted and sent to oiaue.
* He spere of the Lorde God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, and sent me, to preach good tydynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde by the worded bettes, * that I myght preach help vnto the captiue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable peare of the Lorde, and the daye of the vengeance of oure God: * that I myght comforte all the that are in heuy-nesse, that I myght geue vnto them y mouene in Zion, that I myght geue y saye, bewty in the strede of adas, to sayll ornament for syngynges, pleasaunt raynde for an heu-ry mynde: that they myght be called trees of righteousnes, a plantyng of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They shall bynde the longe rough wyldernes, & sett vp the olde deserte. They shall repayre the waste places, & soches haue bene bynde thow out many generacions. *
Strangers shall stande and fede poure catel, and the Alcaunters shall be your plowme & dyckers of poure bynes. * But ye shall be named the pierces of the Lorde, and me shall call you the seruantes of oure God. Ye shall enioye the goodnes of the Gentiles, and truste in their substance. For your greate reproch you shall haue double sope, and for shame, shall they haue lope of their porcion.
For they shall haue double posselsion in their lode, and euerylastyng sope shall be with the.
For I the Lorde, which loue righte and hate robbery (though it were offered me) shall make they: workers full of forthfulness & make an euerylastyng couenent with them.

They shall also and their generacion shall be knowe amonge the Gentiles, and amonge the people. All they that se the, shall knowe that they are the hye blessed seede of the Lode.
And therfore * I am ioshul in the Lorde, & my soule reioyshe in my God. * For ye hath put vpon me the garment of saluacion, & conceded me with the middle of righteousnes. *
The Lorde shall be my lyke a byrgeome, and as a hyde y hath by apparrell vpon her. For lyke as the goodde byngeth forth fruite, & as the

I have leaue watchmen upon thy wal-les (O Ierusalem) which shall neither cease daye nor night to pearch the Lorde. And ye also that remembre the Lorde ye shall not kepe him close, nor leaue to speake of him, vntill Ierusalem be sette vp, & made the prayle of the world. The Lord hath sworne by his right hande & by his stronge arme, that from hence forth he will not geue thy cozine to be meate for thyne enemies, nec thy byne (wherein hast laboured) to be drinke for the straun-gers. But they that haue gathered in the coze-ne, shall eate it, & geue thanches to the Lord: & they þ haue bozne in the wyne, shall drinke it in the court of my sanctuary.

So you, go you thow the gates, make cleane the way, make playne, make playne þ fore pathe, & take a waye þ stones, out of ye & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lord proclaimeth vnto þ endes of þ worlde:

wreth coloured clothes of Bosra, (which is so costly cloth) & cometh in to my gyde: w all his strength.
I am he that teacheth ryghtuousnes, & am of power to helpe. wherefore then is thy clothyng read, & thy raimet lyke his that trea-deth in the wyne presse: I haue trodden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me. Thus will I treade do-wne myne enemies in my wrath, and let my feet vpon them in my indignacyon. And their bloude shall be spoyne vpon my cloofthes, and to wll I stape all my payment. * for the daye of vengeance is assigned in my heart, & the prayse whē my people shall be deliuered, is come. I loab a bouite me, and there was no man to geue me any helpe, I was as a p man helde me vp. Then I helde me vp myne awne arme, & my seruentele susteyned me. And thus will I treade downe þ people in my wrath, & bathe the in my dyscalature: and vpon the earth will I laye their steege.

* I will declare the goodnesse of þ Lord, ye and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greates good þ he hath done for Ierusalem: which he hath giuen them of his awne fauour, & accordyng to þ multitude of his louynge kindnesse. For he saueth: & hee no bouite as my people, & no syn-hyng chylde, and so he was their sauour.
In their troubles he was also troubled w them, and the angel þ went forth from bys presence, deliuered the: Of very loue & kyndnesse þ he had vnto them, redeemed he the, he hath bozne them, and caryed them vp ouer, sence þ wolde be ganne. But after they prouoked him to wrath & bered his holy mynde he was their enemye, & fought agaynst them eth in the felde: and the blythe gyuen of God gnyeth him selfe.

Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name with all.

* Take downe open scd heauen, & beholde the dwellinge place of thy sanctuary & thy glory, howe is it, þ thy gloriously, thy stryght, the multitude of thy mercies & thy louynge kindnesse, will not be entreated of vs: Pet art thou * our father. For Abrahā knoweth vs not, neither is Iherusalem acquainted w vs.
But þ Lord our father & redime, & thy hast þ led vs out of thy waye: * wherfore hast thou hardened our heeres, þ we feare the not: & at one w vs agayne, for thy seruātes sake and for the generacyon of thyne be-rptage. Thy people hath had but lyte of thy sanctuary in possession, for our enemies haue troden downe the holy place. And we were thyne fro the begynnyng: when thou wast not thy Lord, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

For thus longe haue I euer holden out my handes to an vnfaithfull people, y^e go not the rhyght waye, but after their a wye ymaginacyons: & o a people that is euer despyng me to my face. * They make their oblacions in gardens, and their smoke vpon aulcers of hyrthe, they lurche amogge the graues, and lye in the denues all nyght. * They eat swyned fleshe, & vniclane wyth is in their vessels. * 1. Cor. 1. 1. a.

All these men wher I am angry, shall be turned to smoke & * fyre, that shall burne for euer. Beholde it is wryten before my face, & shall not be forgotten, but recompened. * I shall rewarde it them into their vholome: I meane youre mydedes, and the mydedes of youre fathers together (sayeth the Lorde) which haue made their smokes vpon y^e moditaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the bylles: therefore will I mealeure their olddedes into their vholome againe. Whereouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: * lyke as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men saye vnto hym: break it not of for it is holy: & euen so will I do also for my seruantes sakes, that I wyl not destroye them all. But I wyl take a sede out of Jacob, & out of Iudas one, to take possedion of my byll. My choise shall possede the thyn-

And as for y^e olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, ner hepte in mynde: but y^e Lorde shall be glad and euermore reioyce, for the thynge, that I shall do.

For why? Beholde, I shall make a topfull Ierusalem, and his people topfull, y^e, I myselfe will reioyce with Ierusalem, & be glad in my people. * And the voyce of weeping and waylyng shall not be herde in her from thence forth. Jheremie the sonne of helkiah the priest, one of them that dwelt at * Anathoth in the lande of Beniamin: when the Lord had spake thus unto him, in the tyme of Iothab the sonne of Amon kynge of Iuda, in the xxiij. yere of his reigne: and so durynge unto the tyme of Iehoaachim the sonne of Iothab kynge of Iuda, * and untill the xij. yere of zedekiah the sonne of Iothab kynge of Iuda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, even in the fifteth moneth. The wordes of the Lord spake thus unto me: * Before I fashioned the in thy mothers wombe, I knewe thee. And o ever thou wast holie, I sanctified the, and ordeined the, to be a prophete unto the people. Then sayde I: * Wh Lord God, I cannot speake, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lord answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge: * For thou shalt goe to all that I shall sende the unto, * and what I shall commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Wherefore then wilt ye go to lawe with me, leaping peccall as spinners against me, saying to the Lord: It is but lost labour, that I smyte people chylren, for they recuze not my correction. ¶ Pour a wine bewnde befoze thy peppets, like a deuoninge upon. ¶ O pe people, loke vnto the worde of ¶ I Lords. ¶ Am I then become a wildeene like vnto the people of ¶ Irael: or a lande þe hath no light: wherefore sayth my people the: we are Lordes, we will come no more vnto the: With a mayden forget her rayment, or a byrde her stomacher: ¶ But as for my people they haue forget me, dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes to hyell: to obtayne fauoure there thou wast: when thou hast perstained the with blasphemers: and teachest thine a wine wayes.

* Alpon the wyngenis foude the bloude of poore and innocent people, & yet not in co-uerses holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darrest I saye: Jam-ⁿ (without spyns) a gyslele. & thu, his wiach can not comt vpo me. & holde, I condemne the in iudgement, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. And why cumest thou lo often to and fro, to chaunge the wyppes? For thou thalt be confounded, as well of Gages, as of the Ilyrians: yee, thou thalt go thy wyue from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpo thy head. Because the Lozde doth abhorre y confidence and hope of thynne, and thou thalt not wofore with all.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

God heyrnge mercifull called vnto repentance his people, which he had forfaken for their whoredome with Idolles. He exhorteth Israel vnto repentance, vpon fpyng them wether they that haue become the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God, confefsyng their offence.

Comevily, & when a man putteth a waie before the face of the Lord, him he marcheth with another, then the question is: Quinde he resorteth vnto her enemy more after that? Is not this felde then despyed and vncleane? ¶ But as for the, thou hast playd the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me. Sayeth the Lorde. Lyst vpon thine eyes vnto thy filiaunters & loke, yf thou be not despyed with whoe-dome. Thou hast waied for the in the street, and as a murderre in the wyldernesse.
Thowost thy whoredome & shamefull blas-phemyes, is the lande despyed.

* This is p cause, p therayne & eueninge bewe hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whored forehead, and wilt not be ashamed.

The prophete

His woldest thou saye vnto me : O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp : & led me from my yowth: Wylt thou then put me awaye, & cast me off for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy little chaire from me? & reuerthels, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doinge worke and worke.

* Jer. l. i. a.
Jer. l. i. b.

* C * The Lorde sayde also vnto me: In the tyme of Iosias the kynge: hast I sene what that rebellion Israel hath done? howe the hath runne vp vpon all the hilles, and amde all which erris, and there played the harlot. hast I sene also (when he had done all this) howe I sayde vnto her: that she shulde turne agayne vnto me, & yet she is not returned?

* Jer. l. i. b.

* Iuda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also sawethys: Namely, p after I had well sene the aduouture of the whorling harlot Israel, * I put her awaye, and gaue her a bill of deuocement.

* Jer. l. i. b.

For all this, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda was not ashamed, but went backe & played the whoore also: yee, and p nople of her whoredome hath bespyed the whole lande. For the hath committed fornicacion with stones and stocks.

* Jer. l. i. b.

* D Reuerthels, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda is not turned vnto me agayne with her whole herte, but farnedly, sayeth the Lorde. And p Lorde sayde vnto me: * The backslider Israel is more rpguous, then the vnfaithfull Iuda: & therefore go preache these wordes towards the north, and saye: Thou disobedient Israel, turne agayne (sayeth p Lorde) & I will not let my wrath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (sayeth the Lorde) & I will not allowe my wrath to beare displicure aganst p: but this I will, that thou knowe thy greute blasphem: Namely, p thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken p Lorde thy God, & hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge Goddes.

* Jer. l. i. b.

* E vnder all greene trees, but hast had no wedd * vnder all greene trees, but hast had no wedd to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

* Jer. l. i. b.

* F * O ye disobedient chyliden, turne agayne sayeth the Lorde: & I will be marryed with you. for I will take one out of the cytie, & two out of one generacion, fro amde you, and bringe you in to spon: and will geue you herdme after myne owne mynde, which shall fede you with leaunage ad wyldome. Whorevour, when ye be increased and multiplied in the lande, then (sayeth the Lorde) there shall no more boast be made of p arches of the Lorde: because: For m shall thinke vpon it, neither shall any man make mcyon of it: for from thence forth it shall neither be vspreed, nor honoured with offres.

* Jer. l. i. b.

* G * Then shall Ierusalem be called p Lorders leare, & all they that shalbe gathered vnto it, for p name of the Lorde sake, which shall be set vp at Ierusalem. And from p tyme forth, they shall followe no more the ymaginacion of their awne towarde herte.

* H Then those p be of p house of Iuda, shall go vnto p house of Israel: & they shall come together out of the north, into a same lande p I haue geuen your fathers. I haue the word also, howe I toke the wy byngs but a childe & gaue the a pleasant lande for thine heritage, yee, & a goodly houle of the shephen: howe I admaunded the, p thou quidest call me father only, and not to chynge fro me.

* I But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully hath her husbande, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. * And therefore the voyce of the chyliden of Israel washerbe on hye, wylnging and wylnging: for they haue bespyed their maye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

* K O ye disobedient chyliden, turne agayne & saye: lo, we are thine, for p art the Lorde our God: And so shall I heale youe herenylges. Truly vanyly trustest be for thyselfe: for I lok ety for it in the hylles and in vayne is it sought in the multitude of the mountaynes, * but the healeth of Israel shalbe only vnto God oure Lorde.

* L Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers labour from oure yowth vp: yee, their shepe and bullockes, their sonnes and daughters. So do we also slepe in oure confusion, and shame couereth vs: * for we are our fathers fro once yowth vp vnto this daye haue sinned aganst the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

* M The iij. Chapter.
The true remembrance of vntowage to God. He is devoted to the circumcison of p herte. The redemption of Ierusalem is prophesied for the maiest of this herte.

N Israel, p p wyle turne the, then I turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And p p wyle put awaye thine abhominacions out of my syght, p shalt not be moued: * And shalt sweare: The Lord I wene in truely, in roupe & rpgreousnesse: and all people shall be foraynable & to sayll in him. For thus sayeth p Lorde, to all Iuda & Ierusalem: plowe your lande, and some not amonge the thornes.

* O Be circumsised in p Lorde, and cut awaye the foreskynne of your hertes, all ye of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacye bryake not out lyke fyre and kynble, to p no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednes of your ymaginacions.

* P Breach in Iuda and Ierusalem, crye out and speake: blowe the trumpets in the lande, crye p enemy m maye here gather together, & saye: Gather you together, and we will go in to bryde cyties. Set vp p token in Ierusalem, and make no taryge: * for I wyl bringe a grente plague, and a grente destruction from the north. For the spoller of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyb out of his denne, that he maye make the lande lande waste, and destroy the cities, so that no man maye dwell therein. Wherfore, gyrd your selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearful wrath of the Lord is not withholde from vs.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lord) the heres of the hynde and of the princes shall be gone, the penitents shall be astonied, and the prophets shall be close afraide. Then sayd I: O Lord God, hast thou then disceined this people and Ierusalem, saying: * ye shall haue penitence, and nowe the swearde goeth ehozowe thez hynds: Then shall it be sayde to the people of Ierusalem: * a stronge wynde in the hye places of the wyldernesse cūmeth ehozow the waye of my people, but nether to fan, nor to cleanse.

After that, shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then will I also geue sentence vpon them. For so, he cometh downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a storme wynde: * his horsemen are swifter then y Eagle. Alas vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, a wail thyne here fro wretchednesse, that thou mayest be helpe. how long shall thy noyson thoughtes remaine with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim spaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Remembre y herthen, and geue Ierusalem warning, and pence vnto her, that watchers ouer her are comyng from far cōtries. They haue crept out agaynst y cities of Iuda. And they haue beset her aboute in every place like as the watchmen in the feld:

For they haue prouoked me to wrath, sayth the Lord.

Thy wapes and thy thoughtes, haue broughte the vnto this, such is thyne owne wickednesse and disobedience: and because it is a better thyng, it hath strikē the to y heart. I am y help, and my help, (saith thou) how is my heart to sore: my heart paterh with me: I cannot be thy self, for I haue herde the crying of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crye: murdres vpon murdres, the hole lande shall perishe. Immediatly, my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twynklyng of an eye. how longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Remember this, this shall come vpon them, because my people is become foolyshe, and hath not knowen me. They are the children of foolyshehede, and without my discretion. To doo my selfe, they haue wyl ynough: but to doo well, they haue no wyl. I haue spoken vnto thez, and se: it was waste and voyde. I tolde them so be brauen, and it had no thynge.

I behelde the mountaynes, and lo, they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare.

I tolde aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the bydes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all theye cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lord, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lord sayd: The whole lande shall be desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore, shall the earth mourne, as the hauben be soyne aboute: for the thyng that I haue spokē to the prophets purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I will not go fō it. The hole lande shall flye, for the noyse of the howsen and bowmen: they shall runne into tentes, into wyddes, and clyme vpon the stone rocks. All y cities shall be voyde, and noman dwelling therein.

What wyle thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? * For though thou clothe thy selfe with scarlet, y decke the w golde: * though thou payntest thy face with colours now, yet shalt thou tēp thy selfe in vayne.

For those that hyetheto haue bene thy greates fauouers, shall abhorre the, and goe about to slay the. For I haue a people, yf e as it were of a woman trauaplyng, of one inhousynge of her selfe: and the voyse of the daughter syde, that casteth out her arms, and twowyneth, saying: My woe is me, how sore vered and faint is my heart, for feare of the murderers?

The v Chapter.

In yemphas is ezechiel reprobus of sayntlynt man founde, cyther amongst the people at the rulers, for whol: fali: y Lord wylde repare the crye. Wote: for yemphas destroyed of the dysynge.

Beholde Ierusalem, beholde I and se: Scherthowere her streets also withun, if ye can fynde one man that doth equal and right, or seker for the truthe, and I shall fynde that cytie (sayth the Lord) * For though they call saye: the Lord spūeth, yet they looke to discepe. Where as thou (O Lord) lokest onely vpon sayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused the correction. They made thez faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thought in my selfe: peraduenture they are to synple and foolyshe, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes waye, and indgements of our God. * Therfore, will I go vnto thez: breddes rulers, a take the with them: yf they knowe the waye of y Lord and the indgements of our God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the pacte, and burst the bondes in sondre.

Wherfore, a Lyon out of the woodde hath burste them, and a wolfe in the cūnyng shall destroye them. The Leopard doth lyke lynchynge by thez cities, to teare in peces all thez.

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scome, & haue no lust thereto. And therefore, I am full of thyne indignacion, (O Lord) & I make linnen no longer. But make it out vpon thy children & pre without, and vpon all yonge men. For the man must be taken prisoner with the wyfe, & the aged with the crepel. They boules with theyr landes & wyues shall be turned vnto strangers, when I stretch out myne hand vpon the inhabitours of this land, sayeth the Lorde. * For from the leste vnto the most, they hang all vpon courtousnelle, & from the prophete vnto p prest, they go all aboute with falsheed and lyes.

* And helpe that, they heale the hurt of my people with thyre wordes, sayeng: peace, peace, wher there is no peace at all. Where they ashamed when they hadd commytted abominacion: * Trulpe nay they be past hame: * And therefore they shall fall among & slayne, in the houre when I shall vy-set them, theyr shall be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lord: go into the strea-tes, conspyde & make inquisition for y olde waye: and yf it be y good and ryght waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we wyll not walke therein, and I wyll lett watchmen ouer you, & therfore take hede vnto y voyce of y cōsper. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Here therfore ye cōspies, & thou cōgregacyon shalt knowe, what I haue de-uysed for them. Heare y earth also: behold, * I will cause a plague to come vpo this people, euen y fruite of their aduine imaginacions.

For they haue not bene obediēt vnto my wordes & to my laue, but abhorred them.
Wherefore, * byng ye me incense from Saba, & swete smelling Calamus from farre countreys: Your burnt offeringes dysplease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrificys.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: behold, I will make this people fall, and there shall fall from among them the father to the chyldren, one neygbboure shall perpe the wyth another.

Thus sayeth the Lord, * Beholde, there shal come a people from y North, & a great people that shal arpe from y endes of the earth, with bayes, and with dartes shall they be weakened. It is a rough & ferece people, & an vnnueryfull people, theyr voyce canreth like y see: theyr ryde vpon horses well appointed to y batell agaynst y. A daughter shon, the crepe of them haue we herbe.
Our armes are feble, dreynesse & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trau-elyng with chyldre. Let no man go forth into y felde, let no man come vpon y hie stre-te: for the swearde and feare of the enemy is on euery syde.

Wherefore, gyde a sack cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) I praye thy selfe to atthes, * mourne & wepe bitterly as vpon thy only beloued sonne. For the destroyer shall suddenly fall vpo vs. The haue I set for a strage towre: (O thou prophe-te) a well fenced wall amonge my people, to seke out and to trye theyr wayes. * For they are all stubberne apostates and fallen awaye, walkege dysecrefully, they are clea-ne blasfe & prou, for they hurt & destroye eu-ery man. The beilous are byt in y fyre, y lea-de is not molten, y melter melteih in vayne for y euell is not taken awaye from them.
Therefore do they call the naughty yscuer, because the Lorde hath cast them out.

Of the vii. Chapter.

Jeremy is commaunded to shryue vnto the people the worde of God, which testifieth in the outwarde reuer-se of the temple. The cruelties that shall happen to the Jewes for the despayning of theyr prophetes, & scrifyces both not the Lord chiefe requyre of the Jewes, but y they quid other des word.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremie: sayge. * Stande vnder the gate of the Lorders house, and crye out these wordes there to a loud voce, and saye. Heare y worde of the Lord all ye of Iuda, that go in at this doore, to wor-shyppe the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord of holles the God of Irael. * Amede your wayes & your counceils, and I wyll let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false lyge wordes, sayeng: here is y temple of y Lord, here is the temple of the Lord, here is y temple of the Lorde.

But rather in deade amede your wayes and counceils, * and iudge ryght betwixte a man and his neygbbour: oppresse not the stranger, y fatherles, & the wyddow: the de-not innocent bloud in this place: cleue not to strange goddes to yur aduine descrei-ce: then wyll I let you dwell in this place, per-in y lad that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lyuge talke, y beggelyous do you no good.
For when ye haue stolen, murdered, com-myned aduouty, & perjury. When ye haue offered vnto Baal, following strange & unknowne goddes shall ye be vnprynced: Yet then come ye, & stande before me in this house, * (which hath my name geuen vnto it) & saye. Cuius we are absolue quite, thou ghe we haue done all these abominacions.

What thynke you this house y deareth my name, is a deime of thurs? * And yea I se what you thynke, sayeth the Lorde.

haue I done this? But every man, as soone as he is turned backe, runneth forth still, lyke a wylde horse in a battayll. The stone in his hand knoweth his appointed tyme, the little dove the shadow & the Crane confounde the tyme of the trauayll, * but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punishment of y^e Lorde. how darre ye saye then, we are wylde, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Surely in wayne hath he prepared his pen, & wapily haue the wynters wypten it: therefore shall the wylde be confounded, they shall be astrayed & taken: for lo, * they haue cast out the worde of the Lorde: what wylde can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I wyl woe they wyues vnto alcautes, and they felde to dewtowers.

* For from the lowest vnto y^e hest, they folowe all fittly lute: & from y^e prophete vnto y^e wylde, they deale all wylde. * Heere shalbe they heale y^e hurte of my people verely tenderlye, sayenge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.

For for shame, how abominable thynges do they: and yet they be not ashamed, yee, they knowe of no shame.

* Wherfore, in the tyme of theyr visitacion, they shall fall amonge y^e deed bodyes, & be ouerthrowen sayeth the Lorde.

* Wherouer, I wyl consume the in deade (sayeth the Lorde) for there shall not be one graue vpon y^e wyne, neither one pygg vpon the pygge tree, and the leaues shall be plucked. And the thyng y^e I haue giuen them shall be taken fro the wyne, wylde wylde be y^e pygge? Let vs gather oure selues together, and go into y^e strange cytie, there shall we be in rest. For y^e Lorde oure God hath put vs to sylfice, & geuen vs water myte w gall, to drynke: because we haue synned agaynst hym.

* We looked for peace, & we fare not the better, we waped for the tyme of healt, & lo, here is nothyng but trouble.

The noyle of his hostes is heard from Dan, y^e whole lode is astrayed at y^e penyence of his strange hostes: for they are come in, & haue deuoured y^e lode, w all y^e in it: y^e pytties, and those y^e dwell therein. * Wherouer, I wyl sende Cochatries & serpentes amonge you (which wyl not be charmed) & they shall bite you, sayeth the Lorde.

* I wolde haue had coforte agest fortove: but fortove is come vpon me, and heynnes vereth my hert: for lo, y^e voyce of y^e ceptenge of my people is herde for feare of them, that come from a farr countre. Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not y^e King in her? Wherfore then haue they turned me (shall the Lorde saye) w theyr pnyges & foolys draunge falsyons of a foeyne god? The hartest is gone, the winter hath an ende, & we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of y^e hurte of my people. I am heup & abashed, is ther no triacle at Silcadi? Is ther no wysspycon ther? Why then is not the helthe of my people recovered?

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ The compleate and bringyng of the prophete, the maieste of the people. In the knowlege of God wought we ouer to cryste. The brennyng of the hert.

¶ Who * wyl geue my head water? * enough, and a del of teares for myne eyes: y^e I maye wepe night and daye: for y^e slaughter of my people? Wolde God, that I had a cotage some where farr from folche. y^e I myght leaue my people, and go fro the fo: they be all aduoutrers & a shyn chynge soite. They hede theyr tunces lyke bobes, to thote out lyres. They war strange vpon erthe. As for y^e truth, they maye nothyng a wape withall in the wold. For they go from one wylchidnes to another, and wyl not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.

* Yee, one must kepe hym selfe from ano- ther, no mā maye falslye trust his owne bro- ther: for * one brother undermyndeth ano- ther, one neyghbour begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth w another, and they deale w no truth. * They haue practised theyr tunces to lye, & taken great paynes to dis- cheke. Thou syttest y^e synndes of a dysceat- full people, which for very dissemblinge fal- thede, wyl not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of ho- stes: beholde, I wyl melle them, and crye them, for what shuld I els do to my people. * Theyr tunces are lyke sharpe arrows, to speake dysceate. Wylth theyr mouth they speake peccably to theyr neyghbour, but pynely they laye wape for hym. * Shulde I not punysh the fo: these thynges, sayeth y^e Lorde? Wyl shulde I not be aued of any foche people as this? vpon y^e mountaynes wyl I take vnto a lamentacion & a forowful crye, & a mourning vnto y^e saye playnes of y^e wildernesse. Namely, how they are so biete w y^e no man goeth there any moore. Yee, a man shall not heare one bealle crye there.

¶ Wydes & catell are all gone from thece. * I wyl make Ierusalem alio an heape of ston- es, & a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyl make y^e pytties of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wylde, as to vnderstande this? W to whom hath y^e Lorde spoken by mouth, that he may heare this & saye. W y^e lande, why perishest thou so? Wherfore art y^e so biete w y^e lyke a wylbernes, y^e no man goeth thowoe? Yee, the Lorde hym selfe tolde y^e same vnto the, that for soke his lawe, & kepte not y^e thyng y^e he gaue them in commandment, neither spued the cracker: * but folowed the wicked- nes of theyr owne hertes, & serued draunge Gobbes, as theyr fathers taught them.

The Prophecy

E Therefore, thus sayeth J Lord of hostes, the God of Israel. Beholde, J will s^ede this people in wormwood, & geue them gall to dryncke. J will scatter the also among the heathen, whom neither they ner they fathers haue knowen: J will s^ede a lawe arde among them, to persecute them, vntill I bypnyng them to naught. Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Beware of y vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and cal for mourning wyues, & sende for wyfe women: that they come quickly, and syng a mourning songe of you: that y scarses may fall out of oure eyes, and y oure eyes lyddes maye gush out of water.

F For there is a lamentable noyle hearde of Sion. How are we so sore destroyed! How are we so yptiously confounded! We must forsake our awie naturall countre, & we are shut out of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the woide of the Lord. Oye women) & let poure eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: y ye may lerne poure daughters to mourne, & that euery one may teach her neyghboure, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is chynnyng vp us at oure wyndowes, he is come into oure houses, to destroye the chylde before y doze, and the yonge man in the strete.

G But tell thou playnly, thus sayeth the Lord. J The deed bodies of men shall lye vpon the ground, as y donge vpon y feld, & as the hye after y mowder, & ther shall be no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lord. Let not the wyse man reioyce in his wisdom: ner y strong man in his strenght, neither the ryche man in his rycheesse. But who so will reioyce, let hym reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for J am y Lord, which do mercy, equyte and righte outlesse vpon y earth. J Therefore, haue J pleasure in such thynges, sayeth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) y y will bypny all them, whose soe kynne is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edoymptes, the Ammonytes, the Moabites, J and the haueu Habanptes, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

¶ The x. Chapter.

J The conuulsions of the Carres are not to be feared. J The weakness of Sion, and of the power of God. J Four curates.

A Care the woide of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the, J y house of Israel. Thus sayeth J Lord. J Ye shall not lerne after y manner of y heathen, & ye shall not be afrayed for y tokens of heauen: for y heathen are afrayed of loch-pee, al y customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothinge, but vayne. J They hewe downe a tree in y wood with y handes, of y workeman, and fashion it to the age: they couer it ouer with golde or siluer, they fallen it with naples & hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as y as y palme tree, it can neither speake ner go one fote, but must be bozle. J We nor ye afrayed of loch-pee, for they can donether good ner euill. But the re is none lyke vnto y , J Lord. J great is the name of y power. Who wolde not feare the? J kyng of the Gentils for thynne is the domynion.

F For amonge all y wyse men of the Gentyles, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none y maye be likened vnto y . They are all together vnlerned & vnywysse in this one thyng. All theyr compnyng is but vayne: namely, wood, syluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, & venter to plates: and golde from y Ophir, a workle y is made with the hnde of y craftsman & the calter, clothed with pelow sylk & scarlet: enen so is the workle of theyr wyse men all together. But y Lord is a true God, a lypnyng God, & an euillastynge kyng. J If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacyon.

A As for theyr goddes thus shall you saye to them: they are goddes, that made neither heauen ner earth: therefore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) J he made y earth w y his power, and with his wisdom doth he order y whole copasse of y world, with his discrecyon hath he spred out y heuens. At his voyce y waters gather togethe in y pape, J he draweth vp y cloudes fro the vttermoost partes of y earth: he turneth y lpyhtenpnyng to rayne, & wyngeth forth the wyndes out of their treasures. His wyl do-mic maketh all men fooles. And cōfounded be all castres of ymagys, for y they cast, is but a vayne thyng, & hath no life. J The wayne craftmen w y their workes, J they in their vayne haue made, shall perishe one w y another y tyme of vilsitacyō. Reuerthes-les, Jacobs porcyon is no loch: but it is he, J hath made all thynges, & Israel is y rodd of his inherprance. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the land, y that art in y strage place. For thus sayeth J Lord. Behold, J will now shewe as w y a lone syngie y inhabytours of this lā-de: at this once, and J will bypnyng trouble vpon them, that they shall p y ore trewe the wordes y J haue spoken by the prophetes.

A las, how am I hurt: Alas how payne-full are my scourges vnto me! For J con-fesse this sorow by my self, and J must suffer it. J tabernacle is destroyed, and all my

my coardes are broken. My chyliden are gone fro me, & can no where be folide. Now have I none to fynde out my tent, or to set up my haggenges. For our p herdmen have done folphly, that they have not sought p Lord. Therefore, have they dealt unwysely with thep2 cattell, & all are scarred abode. Beholde, p nople is harde at hand, & great desolacion out of p noyth: to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernes, & a dwellinge place for dragons. * Now I knowe (O Lorde) p it is not in mas power to ordie hys a wne wyse, or to rule his a wne steppes & goynges. ¶ And the Lorde saye vnto me. It is for be out, that whole Israel and all the citizens of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned theselues to the blasphemyes of theyr forefathers, which had no lust to heare my woide. Euen I heretofore haue thesc also folowed strange goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israel & Juda haue broken my couenaunt, which I made with theyr fathers.

¶ Therefore, thus sayeth p Lord. Behold, I will sende a plage vpon the, which they shall not be able to escape: & though they crye vnto me, I will not heare the. ¶ Then shall the comers of Juda & the citizens of Ierusalem go, & call vpon thep2 goddes vnto whom they made theyr oblacros: but they shall not be able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. * For as many cyties as p halt, O Juda, so many goddes halt p had also. And loke how many strettes there be in p, O Ierusalem! so many shamefull altiers haue pe set vp, altiers I sape to offer vpon the vnto Baal. ¶ Therefore, praye not p for this people, byd netter paye nre prayer for the, for though they crye vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

¶ What parte hath my beloued in my house, sence he hath the wicked abomination set vponge many goddes? ¶ The holy beech of seinges in the temple at goone fro the O Juda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy boast of ytt. ¶ The Lorde called p a grene olyue tre, a saye one, a fructfull one, & goodly one: but with greate clamor hath the enemy lett fyre vpon it and the braches of p are destroyed. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath deuyded a plage for the (O thou house of Israel and Juda) for p euill that pe haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that pe byd scrupce vnto Baal.

¶ Thus (O Lorde) haue I cried of the, and vnderstand it, for thou hast thewed me theyr ymaginacions. ¶ But I am, as a meke lambe an oxe that is carped a wape to be slayne, & theyr had deuicyed such a counsell agaynst me, saying: * We will destroye his meate with wodde, & dryue him out of p land, of p lpying: p his name shall neuer be thought vpon. ¶ Therefore, * I will beseeche the now (O Lorde of hostes) thou ryghteous iudge, thou that tresp2 p reynes & the hertes: lett me se the auedges of them, for vnto p haue I comitted my cause. ¶ The Lorde therefore spake thus of the cytyens of Iheroth, that sought to slayne me, saye ge: ¶ preache not vnto vs in the name of p Lorde, or els p shall bye of our hader. ¶ Thus (I sape) spake p Lorde of hostes. The .xii. Chapter.

¶ The prophete marvelled greatly at the prosperite of the hebreis, although he comde god to be righteous. The Jewes are children of the Lorde, he speaketh against theiur and pischers that seduce the people. The Lorde theateineth destruction vnto the nation that he drewe vpon them, wher they had ben and heretofore.

 that are boine in this place, of the mothers that haue boine them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this lade thus sayeth the Lorde. ¶ They shall dye an horrible death. ¶ No ma shall mourne for the ner bury them, but they shall lye as donge upon the earth. They shall perise thorow the swerde and honger. ¶ And theyr bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, ad shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall beuepe the, no man shall clyppe p haue him selfe for them.

They shall not one bise another, to mour-ne wyth them for their dead, or to comforte them. One shall not offere another the cuppe of consolacion, to forget theyr heuynes for father and mother. ¶ Thou shalt not go in to theyr feast house, to lye downe, to cate and drinke with the. For thus sayeth p Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: ¶ Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place, p hope of myrth ad glauiesse, the voyce of the bypdegrome and of the byde: pee, and that in Thus ſayde the Lorde: So thy waie I and bye the an earthen pytcher, and byng forth the ſenatours ad the preſters into the valley of the cyprian of Iheruſalem, which lieth before the doore that is made of hyrcle, and ſtewe them there the wordes, that I ſhall tell the, and ſaye thus vnto the. Heare the wordes of the Lorde, ye kynnges of Iuda, and ye cyprians of Ieruſalem. * Thus ſaith the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael: * Beholde I wyll bring ſo the a plague vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it ſhall growe. And that becauſe they haue forſaken me, and vnholowed this place, & haue offered it vnto ſtraunge goddes: whome neither they, the preſters, ner ſo kynnges of Iuda haue knowne. They haue ſpilled theyr place alſo with the bloude of innocents: for they haue ſett vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their childen for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neither commaunded, ner charged the, neither thoughte once there vpon.

Beholde therfore the tyme cometh (ſaith the Lorde) that this place ſhall nomore be called Copheth, ner the valley of ſo cyprian of Iheruſalem, but the valley of ſlaughter: for in this place wyll I ſlaue ſo ſenatours of Iuda & Ieruſalem, and ſpall them downe with the ſwearde in the ſpyght of thei enemyes, ad of them that ſeke their lyues. And their deed carcasses wyll I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beaſtes of the felde. And I will make this cite ſo deſolate and deſpoyled: * that who ſo goeth ther by, ſhall be abaſhed and leaſt vpon her, becauſe of all her plagues.

¶ Jeremie is taken and cast into prison, for p[re]siding of the worde of God. He p[re]dicteth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complaynes p[er] his a more kynges t[ri]bute for the worde of God. He is compelled by the t[ri]bute to p[re]dict the worde.

And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, vntill he be perforce and fulfill the thought of hys dette. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meaninge.

I haue not sent these prophetes (saith the Lorde) & yet they came. * I haue not spoke to the, and yet they pynched. But yf they had continued in my counsell they had opened to my people my wordes & they had turned my people fro their euell wayes & wyled ymaginations. * Am I then God that seeth but the thinge, whiche is nye at hande, ad not that is farre of: sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

The byson of the two pannes of pygges. The fourth byson sayeth that parts of a people should be brought agayne from captiue. And from that Jeruchas & the rest of the people should be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a byson: Beholde, there stode two mannes of pygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that * Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led a wape captiue Jeruchas: as the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Iuda, & myghtie men also of Iuda, with the work-masters, and conynge men of Ierusalem, vnto Babylon. In the one manne were very good pygges, such lyke as those yf be first ripe. In the other manne were very naughtie pygges, which might not be eaten, they were to euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seest thou Jeremyp: I sayde pygges, of which some be very good, ad some locust, that no man maye eat them.

Then came the wordes of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith the Lorde the God of Israel: lyke as thou knowest the good pygges, so shall I knowe & men led a wape, whom I haue sent out of this place into the lande of the Caldees, for they profyte: and I will set myne eyes vpon the for the best, for I will bying the agayne into this lande: I will byide them up, and not breake them downe: I will plante them, and not rote them out. * And I will geue them an herke, to knowe how that I am the Lorde. They shall be my people, & I will be their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their whole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtie pygges, which maye not be eat, they are so euell: Even so will I (sayeth the Lorde) let Jeruchas the kynge of Iuda, (ye and all his prynces, & the residue of Ierusalem that remaine ouer in this lande, & them also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed and plagued in all kyngdomes and lades. hes þe wolde not heare me (sayd the Lord:) but haue defied me wth þe woekes of your handes: to your awne grete harme.

28 And hereto thus saith the Lord of Hosts:
a. i. b. Because ye have not hearkened unto my word, lo, I will sende out, I call all the people, that dwell in the North, saith the
a. i. b. Lord, and will prepare Babuchodonozor the kynge of ^{a. i. b.} Babylon my seruant, and will brygge the waye vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therein, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and will vnterprete them out. I will make of this a wildenesse, a moorhous, and a continuall deserte.

3 Wherefore, I will take from them the voice of gladness and solace, the voice of the hynde groome and the hynde, the voice of the anointed, with the creddeited: and thus whole lande shall become a wyldernes, and these nations shall serve the kynge of Babylon, these coe peares and ten: When the lxx. yeares are expired, I will visit also the wyldernes of the kynge of Babylon and his people sayeth the Lorde: yee, and the lande of the Caldees, and will make it a perpetuall wyldeynes, and wylly fullfill all my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuised agaynst it: yee, all that is wylde in this booke, which Ieremy hath prophesied of all people: to that they all shall be subdued vnto diuers nations & great kynges * for I wyl recompense them, accordyng to to theyr deedes and wordes of theyr wyne harbour.

For thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of indignacion from my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whom I send thee, for to dyspache of it: that when they haue drunken thereof, they may be mad, & out of their wittes, when the swerd shall cometh, that I will sende amonge them. Then take I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to dyspache thereof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me.

But first the cytle of Ierusalem, & all the cytles of Iuda, their kynges ad pynces, to make them desolate, wyl, despyll'd, ad dysp'd ad, and cursed, accordinge as it is come to passe this daye. Per, and Pharaos p kyng of Egypte, his seruantes, his pynces, and his people all together one wyth another & all kynges of the lande of Byssy, all kynges of the Philistynes lande, Acanon, Iazab, Acraon and p remnant of Afsod, p Edoites, the Quabites and the Ammonites al p kynges of Trus & Sidde: the kynges of the Ales that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Che-ma, Buz & all the p dwell in the vntermost partes of p world: all the kynges of Arab and generally all the kynges that dwell in the deccrete: al the kynges of zamar, al p kynges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all kynges towarde p North, whether they be farr or nye, euery one agaynst his neygh-bours: Per, and all the kyngdomes that are vpon p whole earth. The kynges of Seerach saide he shall deruicke with them also.

Therefore saie thou vnto them: Thus is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: dygnke and be droncke, speake and fall, that ye neuer rise, and that thoz who be the shearde, wherof I will sende amonge you. But if they will not receaue the cuppe of the hande, and dygnke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of hostes threaten you: dygnke it ye shall, and that thortely. For so, I beegme to plague e-uerye that my name is geue vnto: chynke pe then that I will leaue you vnguarded: Ye that not so quyte, for why, I call for a sheard vpon all the inhaibitours of the earth, saith the Lorde of hostes.

Therefore tell them all these wordes and saye vnto them. * The Lorde shall crye aboue, and let his voyce be heard from his holp habytacion. With a great noyse shall he crye cording to all as Jeremij sayth. Howe whe * Ichoahim the kinge with all the estates &

* pynnes had hearde hys wordes, the kynge * went about to slaye hym. * When Ariah * perceaued that, he was straped, and fledd, and departed into Egypte.

Then Ichoahim the kinge sent Ierua-tes into the lande of Egypt, namely Elnithan the sonne of Ichoab, and certayn men with hym into Egypt, which ketchen Ariah out of Egypt, and brought him vnto kynge Ichoahim, that he slew him with the sword, and cast hys dead bodie into the comen peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saaphan helped Jeremij, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ The xxviij. Chapter.

¶ Jeremij, at the commaundement of the Lorde, send eth bondes to the kynge of Iuda, and to the other kynge that were ney, whereby they are mouged to dremue subiects into Babuchodonosor. ¶ He warneth the people and kynge and rulers, that they be-lieue not false prophetes.

In the begynninge of the reygne of Ichoahim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came this word vnto Je-remij from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me: ¶ Make the bondes and chap-nes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab, to the kynge of Ammon, to the king of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messengers, which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Iedekiah the kynge of Iu-da: and byd them saye vnto theyr masters: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the men and the cattell that are vpon the grounde, with my great power and outstretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto who it pleased me. * And nowe will I deliuer all these landes into the power of Babuchodonosor the king of Babylon: my seruant. ¶ He bestales also of the felde shall I geue hym to be hym seruaunt.

* And therefore, folow not your prophetes, soothsayers, ex pounders of dreames, charmers and wyches: which saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you yes: to byngye you farre from your lande, and that I might cast you out, and destroye you. But the people that putt theyr neckes vnder the pocke of the king of Babylon, and serue hym, those I will ke remaiue still in their owne lande, sayeth the Lorde, and they shall occupie it, and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I Iedekiah the king of Iuda, and sayde: ¶ But your neckes vnder the pocke of the king of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue.
¶ Whyt wilt thou and thy people prech with the swearde, with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuised for all people, that will not serue the kynge of Babylon? ¶ Therefore, geue no care vnto those prophetes, that tell you: ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon: for they preache you lies: neither haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde.
Howbeit they are bolde, falsly to prophesie in my name: that I myght the sooner byng you out, and that ye myght yett the withd preachers. I spake to the prestes also, and to all the people. ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes, ppreache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, ¶ the vessels of the Lordes house shall be brought hither agayne from Babylon. For they prophesie yes vnto you. Hear them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye maye lyue. ¶ Therefore will ye make this city to be destroyed. ¶ But ye be true prophetes in very heere, and ye the wordes of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then let them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remaunt of the ornamente (which are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yett in the house of the kynge of Iuda and at Jerusalem) be not carped to Babylon also: For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concernyng the pylers, the lawer, the seate and the restidye of the ornamente that yett re-maiue in this citye, which Babuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, * when he caried awaye Ierohiah the sonne of Jehoahim king of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, captiue.

¶ Yee, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchyng the residue of the ornamente of the Lodes house, of the kynge of Iudas house, and of Jerusalem. ¶ They shall be caried vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne: vntill I byt them, sayeth the Lorde. ¶ Then will I byngye them hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yere, euen in the begyngynge of the raygne of Iedekiah kyng of Iuda.

¶ The xxviij. Chapter.

¶ The false propherye of Hananiah the prophete.
¶ Jeremij sheweth that the propherye of Hananiah is false, by example of the other prophetes, the kynge inspired of the Lorde, contrary Hananiah, prophesie crynge hys deatly.

But

But in the xij. yeare of the reygne of iehoiakim kinge of Iuda, in the v. moneth, it happened y^e Hananiah the sonne of Aduy p^rophete of Silab, spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the prestes, & of all the people, and sayde: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the king of Babilon, & after two yere will I brynge agayne into this place: all the ornaments of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon caried awaye from this place vnto Babilon. Per. I will brynge agayne Iechoniah the sonne of Iehoiakim y^e kinge of Iuda hym selfe, with all the prisoners of Iuda: that are caried vnto Babilon: euen into this place, sayeth the Lorde: for I will bryake the yoke of the kinge of Babilon.

Then the p^rophete Jeremye gaue answere vnto the p^rophete Hananiah, before the prestes and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. * And the p^rophete Jeremye sayde: Amen, the Lorde do y^e, and graunte the thyng which thou hast p^rophesied: that he maye bryng agayne all the ornaments of the Lordes house, and restore all the prisoners from Babilon into this place. Heuerthelesse, hearken thou also, what I will saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The p^rophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which p^rophesied of warre, of trouble, of pestilence, ether of peace, vnto many nacions, and great kingdomes, were proued by this: (for God hath sende the in be-

And hananiah the p^rophete toke y^e chayne from the p^rophete Jeremyes necke, and bryake it, and with that sayde hananiah, y^e all the people might heare. * Thus hath the Lorde spoken: When so will I bryake y^e yoke of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, from the neck of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yere. And so the p^rophete Jeremye went his waye. And after that hananiah the p^rophete had taken the chayne from the p^rophete Jeremyes necke, and bryake it. The worde of the Lorde came vnto the p^rophete Jeremye, sayeng: Go, and tell hananiah this worde. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd: but in steade of wodd thou shalt make chernes of yron. For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: I will put a yoke of yron vnto the neck of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon: yee, and so shall they do. And I will geue hym the breake in the felde. Then sayde the p^rophete Jeremye vnto the p^rophete Hananiah: * heare me Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent y^e but thou thyngest this people into a false be-lefe. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: be-holde, I will sende the out of the lande, and within a yere thou shalt dye, because thou hast falsly spoken agaynst the Lorde. So hananiah the p^rophete dyed the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

Chapter.

The p^rime of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He p^rophesied they should returne from captiuitie after 70. yeres. He p^rophesied the destruction of the kinge and of the people that remained in Ierusalem. He threatned two p^rophetes that scoured the people. The death of Ieremias the Archeite in p^rophesye.

These are the wordes of the boke, that Jeremye the p^rophete sent vnto Ierusalem vnto the prisoners, y^e senatours, prestes, p^rophetes, & all the people, who Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilon: after that tyme that king Iechoniah and his quene, his chibberlaynes, the princes of Iuda and Ierusalem, the waykeimasters of Ierusalem were departed thither: Whiche boke Eliah the sonne of Shaphan, and Samaria the sonne of Iehikiah dyd breake, who Iehoiakim the sonne of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes boke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoke vnto all the prisoners, that were led from Ierusalem vnto Babilon: * bryde you houses to dwell therein: plant you gardes, that ye maye enioye the frutes thereof: * take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, proude wyues for your sonnes and husbands for your daughters: that they maye get sonnes and daughters, and that ye maye multiplie there. Labour not to be frute, but seke after peace and prosperite of y^e cite, wherein ye be prisoners, * & praye vnto God for it. For in y^e yere thereof, shall y^e peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Let not the p^rophetes and sorciners y^e be among you discomfite you: * beleeue not your awie dreames, for why? * they preache you lies in my name, and I haue not sent them, sayeth the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: * Whiche ye haue fulfilled lxx. yeres at Babilon, I will bryng you home, & of myne awie goodnes I will carpe you thither agayne into this place. Thus I know what I haue desired for you, sayeth the Lorde. * If thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you all ready, and that ye myght haue hope agayne. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. * Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Yee, p^ro be that ye seke me with your whole hert, I will be founde of you, sayeth the Lorde, and will deliuer you oute of y^e prison, and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherein I haue scattered you, sayeth the Lorde, and will

I shall besteele all the people, among whom I have scattered the, yet will I not be troope the, but correcte the, * and that with discretion: for I knowe that thou art in no wyse without faulte. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: Thy broylings are perillous, & thy woundes ready to cast p in to sickness: There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to lay plasters upon the, or to bynde up thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgoit the, and care nor bynge for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chattered the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy myddes: for thy synnes haue had the ouer bande. Althow makest thou mone for thy harme in bedde, thou art soze wounded & inleopardye: but for the multitude of thy myddes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

* And therefore, all they that deuoure the, shall be deuoured: and all thyne enemies shall be led into captiuitie. All they that make the roast, shall be wasted them selues, & all those that robbe the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy breath agayne and make thy woundes whole, sayeth the Lord: because they rauled the, as our cast awaye and despyled, & yon (sayde they) is he whom no man regardeth.

For thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, * I will bringe agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs centres, and defende his dwelling place. The cytye shall be buylded in her olde estate, and p houses shall haue their ryght foundation, And out of them shall go forth kyngdomes, and the voyce of ioye.

I will multiplye them, and they shall not be fewe. I shall cndue them with honoure, & no man shall subdue them. Theye chyldren shall be as a foze tyne, and their cgregregation shall continue in my sygh. And all those that were them, will I vyle.

* I captayne also shall come of them: and a pryncce shall springe out from the myddest of them: hym will I challenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. * For what is he, p greuth ouer his bet to come vnto me: sayeth the Lord. * He shall be my people also, and I will poure God. * Beholde, on the other syde shall the wynd of the Lord breake out as a foamy water as a mighty whirle winde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the Lord shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, & performed the intent of hys bette, * which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayeth the Lord, shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, and they shall be my people:

¶ The xxx. Chapter.

¶ The propheth that the people of Israel shalbe reioyce agayne vnto theyr piosprith. As he returned from Spaine in the spirit of God. The byrth of Christ is prophesed. All the wyche shall dye in theyr wyche herbes. The new testament and covenante in piosprith. The chrystan are taught, and indurct of the Lawe. Howe manye shall be tempted, that theyr net ones be brought on, God prometheth, that he will cast of the wyche. The byrth of agayne of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * The people of Israel, which escaped in the wilderness from the sweerde, founde grace to come into theyr rest. Out to shall the Lord now also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: * I loue the with an euerslasting loue, therefore, by my mercye I haue gauen the to me. I will repaire the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, y thou mayest be safe and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, and go forth with them, that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plante bynes agayne vpon p bylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and commenly ente of it.

For the dayes shall come when the wyche men vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye: * a crye, let vs go vp vnto Shion to the Lord God, for thus sayeth the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentils: speake out, spyn, and saye: O Lord haue thy people, the remnant of Israel, and make them whole. * Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from the endes of the wyche, and gather them from the endes of the wyche, and with the bynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chyld, and such as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greace.

They shall come wepyng and with mercifull pitye will I bringe the hyether agayne. I will leade them to the ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shall not thome. * For I am Israels father, & Ephraim is my first bozne.

Heare the woide of the Lord, O ye Gentiles, preache in the ples, that the farrer of, and saye: he that hath scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, & shall kepe hym as a shepheard doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and red hym from the hande of the violent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Shion, and shall haue plenty of goodnes, which the Lord shall geue the. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yoge theye & calurs. And theye shall be as a well watered garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

¶ Then shall the mayderes of the doctee, yee, both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorrowe into gladnesse, and will comforte them from theyr sorowes and make them ioyfull. I will poure plentyfullnesse vpon the herbes of the ples, and my people people shall be satisfied with my goodness, sayeth the Lord.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord: ¶ The voice of heepnes, weeping and lamentation was heard on the river of Rachel mourning for her children, and would not be comforted, because they were a way.

¶ But now, sayeth the Lord, leave off weeping and sorrow, withold thyne eyes from tears, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayeth the Lord. And they shall come againe out of the lande of their enemies: yee, euen thy posterite shall have consolation in this, sayeth the Lord, y thy children shall come againe into their owne lande.

¶ Moreover, I heard Ephraim, that was led away captiue, complaine in this manner:

¶ O Lord, thou hast correct me, y thy chastening haue I receaued, as an vntained calf: ¶ Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou art my Lord God: yee, as thou hast correct me, I shall reforme my selfe: and when I understande, I shall smyte upon my thighe, for verely I haue committed shamefull things. For I haue borne the reproche and confusion of my prync.

¶ Upon this complaint, I thought thus by my selfe: as I heard Ephraim my deare sonne:

¶ Is he not the child, with whom I haue had all myrrour and pastyme: for I knowe the name: y I first comened with hym, I haue him euen in remembrance: therefore, my very hart depyneth me vnto him, gladly and louynglye will I haue mercy vpon him, sayeth y Lord. See the watchmen, proude teachers for y, let thine heft vpon the ryght waye, y thou shouldest walke, and turne againe, O y daughter of Israel, thoue againe to these cities of thine: howe longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou bypnyng daughter: for the Lord will worke a newe thing vpo earth. A woman shall compass a man.

¶ For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: I will come therto, y when I haue brought Iuda out of captiue, these wordes shall be heard in the lande and in hye cities: The Lord, which is the fayne y bydegrome of ryghte outnes, make y fructfull, O thou holy hill. And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cities, y shepherdes, and husbandmen. For I shall fede the hongry soule, and restrye all faynte heertes. When I heare thys, I came againe to my selfe, I muste, yke as I had bene walked oute of a swete sleep.

¶ Beholde, sayeth the Lord, the dayes come, that I will sawe the house of Israel, y the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell. ¶ Yee, I shall come therto, that I maye as I haue gon about in tymes past to rate the out, to kate them, to brake them downe, to brekpe them, and chasten them. Euen so will I also go diligently about, to bypde them vpon againe, y to plante them, sayeth the Lord. ¶ Then shall it nomore be sayde: the fathers haue cast a fower grape, and the childrens tere are set on edge: for euerie one shall bye for hye a wine implende, for y who so cateth a fower grape, bys tere shall be set on y edge. ¶ Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lord, that I will make y a newe couenant to the house of Israel, and to the house of Iuda: not as the couenant that I made to the fathers, when I toke the by y hande: and led the out of the lande of Egypt: which couenant they brake: yee, euen when I as an husbande had rule ouer them, sayeth the Lord. ¶ But this shall be the couenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayeth the Lord. ¶ I will plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in their heertes, y will be their God, and they shall be my people.

¶ And from thens forth, shall no man teach his nepghbour or his brother, y saye: knowe the Lord. But they shall all knowe me fro the lowest vnto the hest, sayeth y Lord. For I will forgue their iniquities, and will neuer remembre their synnes any more. Thus sayeth the Lord, which gaue the sunne to be a light for the daye, and the moone and starres to thine in the night: which mouth the see, so that the foudens therof were feare: his name is the Lord of hostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken oute of my sight, sayeth the Lord. So shall the seide of Israel neuer cease, but allwaie be a people before me.

¶ Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: Iph as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, y as the foundations of the earth beneth maye not be sought out. ¶ So will I also not cast out the whole seide of Israel, for that they haue committed, sayeth the Lord. Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lord, that the cite of the Lord shall be enlarged from the towre of Hamanuel, vnto the gate of y corner wall: from thens shall the ryght measure be take before yee vnto the byll toppe of y Garab. ¶ And that come abugte Gaath, and the whole valley of the deefenaces, and of the almes, ad all the feldes vnto the byle of y Edon: and vnto the corner of the bysgate towards the east, where as the sanctuary of the Lord also shall be set. And when it is nowe bypde, and let vpo of thys fashyon, it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

¶ Here maye be cast into prison, because he prophesied that the cite Iuda be taken of the kynge of Babylon: for the faine that I haue bought at the comement of the Lord, I stande by, that the people shall come againe to their owne possession: The people of God are bys seruantes, and bys thys Lord. So feare God, y shouldeste go to, to the which the seigne maye be cleped.

The

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremye, in the .x. yere of zedekiah king of Iuda: which was the xviij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kyng of Baby-lons booke layed siege vnto Ierusalem. But Jeremye the prophet saue boode in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Iudas house: where zedeiah the kyng of Iu-da caused hym to be layed, because he had prophecyed of this manner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, I will deliuer this citee into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, which shall take it. * As for zedeiah the kyng of Iuda: he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon: which shall speake in him mouth to mouth: and one of the shall loke another in the face. And zedeiah shall be caried vnto Babilon, and there shall be, vntill the tyme that I viset hym, sayeth the Lorde. But ye shall be in hande to fyght against the Chaldees, thou shalt not prece.

25 And Jeremye sayde: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananiel the sonne of Selum thynne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the labe that is therein in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of hynure it is thy right to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And Hananiel myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Wye my lande, I praye the, that is therein in Anathoth in the contrey of Benjamin: for by heritage thou haste ryght to looke it oute for thy selfe, therefore redeme it. Then I pre-ceased that thys was the commaundment of the Lorde, and so I bought the labe from Hananiel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weied him theret the moneye: euen seuen shekles and ten shylver pence.

I caused hym also to make me a writing and to seale it: and called receorde therby, and weyed hym there the moneye vpon the way-ghites. * So I toke the euidence with the co-pye, when it was orderlye sealed and redde ouer, and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Ariah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananiel my copfyn, and in the presence of the witnesses, that he named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the court of the prison:

I charged Baruch also before them sayinge: The Lord of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take thys sealede eui-dence with the copie: and to laye it in an earthen vessel, that it maye longe continue.

For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel hath decreyned that houses, felde, and vyneyardes shal be possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Ariah, I besought the Lorde, sayinge: O Lord God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and thy arme, and there is nothyng hyd from the. * Thou hauest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recourest the wil-kednes of the fathers, into the bolosine of the chylidren that come after them.

Thou art the greate and myghtye God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and excellent in woche. Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens cheldren, * to reward euery one after his waye:
* according to the frutes of his inuencions.

* Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte, as was: se-thys daye, vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel oute of the land of Egypt, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghtye hande, with a stretched out arme and w greate terribleness: and hast geuen them this lande, yche as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers. Namely, that thou woldest ge-ue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honney.

* Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, and therefore come all these plagis vpon them.

Beholde, there are bullwoches made now agaynst the citee, to take it: and it shal be wone of the Chaldees that beseger, with swearde, with hunger and death, and looke what thou hast spokē, that same shall come vpon them.

For so, all thynges are present vnto the.
Yet (sist thou vnto me, O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall looke a pce of lande vnto my selfe, and take witness thereto: and yet in the meane season the citee is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesh, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therefore thus saith the Lorde: * be-holde, I shall deliuer thys citee into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, they shall take it in. * For the Chaldees shall come, and wyne thys citee, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whole parlers they haue made sa-cerfyce vnto Baal, and powred dymch offspringes vnto strange Goddesses, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

be foze me euer fro the yowth vpon, what haue theye done, but prouoked me wth p^{ro}uokings of their owne handes: sayth the Lorde.

¶ And what hath this cite bene elles but a prouoking of my wrath, euer: & seuer the daye that theye bursted it, vnto this houre wherein I call it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemies of the children of Israel: & Iuda, which theye haue done to prouoke me: yee, they, their kynnges, their prynces, their prestes, their prophetes, the men of Iuda, and the cytyens of Ierusalem.

* When I stode vpon early, and taught the and instructed them, theye turned their backs to me, and not thep^{er} faces. Theye wolde not heare, to be reformed and coerect: + but set their p^{ro}uols in p^{ro}uols, that is halowed vnto my name, to derpe it. Theye haue builded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Bennom, to vowe thep^{er} sonnes and daughters vnto tholoch: which I neuer commaunded them: neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda spume with such abhominatyon.

¶ And now the foze, thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which: as ye poure selues confesse: shal be deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, when it is wonne with the sword, with hyder and with pestilence. * Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wherein I haue scattered them in my wrath in my fearfull and great displeasure: and will bring them againe vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And theye shal be my people, and I will be their God.

* And I will geue the one hert and one waye, that theye maye feare me all the daies of their lyfe, that theye and their children after them maye p^{ro}spere. * And I will sett vpon euery lastyng cōuenant with the. Anielpe, that I will neuer ceasse to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hertes, so that theye shall not turne awaye from me. * Yee, I will haue a lust and pleasure to do the good, and faithfullye to plaite them in this lande with my whole hert and with all my soule.

¶ For thus sayth the Lorde: I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so will I also bring vpon them all p^{ro} good, that I haue promysed the. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, wherof ye saye now, that it shall nethe be inhabited of people ner of cattell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chalbees. Yee, lande shal be boughte for money, & ciuities made shetup, and scaled before witness in the cōuentry of Benjamin, and rounde aboute Ierusalem, in the cities of Iuda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneeth: yee, and in p^{ro} cities that are in the south. For I will brynge their personsither againe, sayth the Lorde.

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, * when he was yet bound in the court of p^{ro} lye. ¶ Thus sayth the Lorde, which fulfilled the thing that he speaketh: the Lorde which performeth the thing that he taketh in hand: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: * erpe vnto me, & I will answere, and shewe the great and hye thinges, which were unknowne vnto the.

¶ Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cite, and the houses of the kynnges of Iuda, & theye are broken thowowe the ordinaunce and the swerde. Because the inhabitours of this cite haue come to fight against the Chalbees, and theye are fylled with the deede harrales of men, whom I haue vsperne in my wrath and displeasure: when I turned my face fro this cite, because of all her wickednes. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will repayre & heale their woundes, and make the whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and trouth.

¶ And I will returne the captiuitie of Iuda and Israel: and will set them vpon againe as they were afore. * From all mynedes, wherein theye haue offended agest me, I will cleane the. And all their blasphemies which theye haue done agaynst me, wher theye regarded me not, I will forgyue them.

¶ And thus shall geue me a name, a prayse, & honour amonge all the people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: yee, theye shall be asfayed and asfounded at all the good dedes and benesyfites that I will do for them. Wherefore, thus sayth the Lorde: * In this place, wherof ye saye that it shal be a wyldecnes, wherein nethe people ner cattell shall dwell: in like maner in the cities of Iuda & without Ierusalem (which also shal be so voyde, that nethe people ner cattell shall dwell there) shall p^{ro} voyce of gladnes be heard agayne, the voyce of the happybecome & of the bypde, the voyce of them that shall linge: * Wherof the Lorde of hostes, for he is longpye and hye mercy enbureth for euer: and the voyce of them that shall offer vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I will refoze the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore, sayth the Lorde. ¶ Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: It shall come yet therto, that in this lynde, which is voyde from men and cattell, and in all the cities of the lande, there shal be set vpon thep^{ro}cedes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountaynes.

Then spake Jeremie the prophet all these wordes unto zedekiah kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hooste beseged Ierusalem, and the remain of the cyties, namely, Iachus and Azbaceh, which yet remained of þe stronge besieged cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Ieremy the prophete, when Zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed * a libertie: so that euery ma shuld let his seruante & handmaide go free, Hebrew and hebrewesse, and no fewe to holde bys brother as a bonde man.

and all the people which had gathered vnto they were obedient, & let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and hande maydens, whome they had lett go free, and so made the same againe.

for the which cause the woide of þe Lorde came vnto Ieremie the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayeth þe Lord God of Israel: * I made a cōuenant with yēre fathers, & I brought the out of Egypt: (that they shuld no more be bondmen) sayinge: When seue yeares are oute, euery man shall his bought seruante an hebreue go fre, yf he haue serued hym fyre yeares. But yowre fathers obeyed me not & herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, & did right to let me, in that ye proclaimed euery man to let his neighbour go free, and in that ye made a cōuenant before me, in the temple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned yowre selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, yf euery man hath requyred his seruant a hādmayde agayne, whō ye had let go quyte and fre, & compelled the to serue you agayne, and to be yowre bōde men, and bondwomen. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame fre

The xxvi. Chapter.

¶ Warthy wipeth (as I have emptied) the boke of the curlew against Judea a Israel. he is sent with a boke unto the people, and readeth it before them all. he is called before the rulers, & readeth it before the also. The rulers shew unto the king the woides of the boke. Iherosolaim taketh the boke, and readeth a pte of it, and after causeth it to be spye. There is another written at the commaundment of the R. Rabbis.

In the

In the fourth yere of Iehoaſhim the ſonne of Iehoiab the kynge of Iuda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremye, ſayinge. * Take a booke, and wyte therein all the wordes, that I haue ſpoken to thee, agaynſt Iſrael agaynſt Iuda, and agaynſt all the people, from the tyme þat I beganne for to ſpeake vnto thee (in the raigne of Iehoiab) vnto this daye. What when þe houſe of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuoyſed for them, they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man ſed þys wycked waye, that I maye forgiue theſe offences and ſinnes.

Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the ſonne of Aſariah, * and Baruch wrote in the booke at the mouth of Jeremye, all the wordes of þe Lord, which he had ſpoken vnto hym. And Jeremye commaunded Baruch, ſayinge. I am in priſon, ſo that I maye not come into the houſe of the Lord: therefore go thou thyſelf, and reade the booke, that thou haſt wyrtten at my mouth. Namely, the wordes of the Lord and reade them in the Lords houſe vpon the faſtynge daye, that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye make-ly before the face of the Lord, & turne euery one from þys wycked waye. For great is the wrath and diſpleaſure, that þe Lord hath taken agaynſt this people:

So Baruch the ſonne of Aſariah dyd, accordinge vnto all that Jeremye the Prophete commaunded him, readiſſe the wordes of the Lord out of the booke in the Lords houſe. And this was done in þe fyfte yere of Iehoaſhim the ſonne of Iehoiab kynge of Iuda, in þe iiij. moneth * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ieruſalem ſhulde faſt befoze the Lord, and they alſo that were come from the cyties of Iuda vnto Ieruſalem.

Then reade Baruch the wordes of Jeremye out of the booke with in the houſe of the Lord out of the treaſury of Gamariah the ſonne of Sapphai the ſcribe, which is beſyde the hyer loſte of the * newe doze of the Lords houſe: that all the people myght heare. Nowe when Aſiechab þe ſonne of Gamariah the ſonne of Sapphai had heare all the wordes of þe Lord out of the booke, he wote downe to the kyngeſ palace into the ſcribes chambres, for there all the wyſemen were ſet. Eliſama the ſcribe, Balaiſah the ſonne of Semai, Elnaſan the ſonne of Achob, Gamariah the ſonne of Sapphai, Ieheliah the ſonne of Hanaſiah, with all the wyſemen: And Aſiechab tolde theſe all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade out of the booke befoze the people.

Then all the princes ſent Iehudi the ſonne of Aſariah, the ſonne of Shelamiah, the ſonne of Achuiſ, vnto Baruch, ſaying. Take in thine hande the booke, wherout thou haſt red befoze all the people, and come. So Baruch the ſonne of Aſariah toke the booke in his hande, & came vnto they. And they ſayd vnto him. Wryt downe, & reade the booke for we maye heare alſo. So Baruch ſayde that they might heare. Nowe when they had hearde all þe wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, & ſayde vnto Baruch. We will certifie þe kynge of all theſe wordes. And they examyned Baruch, ſayinge. tell vs, howe dydeſt thou wyte all theſe wordes out of þys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he ſpake all theſe wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wrote them in the booke.

Then ſayde þe princes vnto Baruch: So thy wyſe, & dydeſt thou with Jeremye, ſo that no man knowe where ye be. And they went into the kyng to the couerte. But they kept þe booke in the chambze of Eliſama the ſcribe, & tolde the kyng all the wordes þe myght heare. So the kyng ſent Iehudi to fetch him þe booke which he broughte out of Eliſama the ſcribes chambze. And Iehudi red ſuit, that the kyng and all þe wyſemen, which were aboute him, myght heare. Nowe the kyng ſat in the wynter houſe, for it was in the ſe. Moneth & there was a fyre befoze him. And when Iehudi had redde theſe of foure leaues thereof, he cut the booke in peces with a penne knyfe, and * caſt it into the fyre vnder the hearth, vntill þe booke was all byſten in the fyre vnder the hearth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or reuente his clothes: nether the kynge him ſelfe, ne his ſeruauntes, though they hearde all theſe wordes. Aſuertheleſſe Iuditha, Balaiſah, & Samariſh beſought the kyng, þe wolde not burne the booke: nor withoute dyng the kyng wolde not heare them, but commaunded Ierahmeel the ſonne of Amalech, Sarnaiſah þe ſonne of Eſriel & Shelamiah þe ſonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the ſcribe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete: but the Lord kepte the out of ſpyght. After nowe that the kyng had byent the booke, & the ſermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye, ſayinge. * Take another booke, and wyte in it all þe ſoſayde ſermons: that were wyrtten in the fyrſt booke, which Iehoaſhim the kynge of Iuda hath byente.

And toll Iehoaſhim þe kynge of Iuda: thus ſapeth the Lord: thou haſt byete the booke, & thoughteſt with in thy ſelfe. Why haſt thou wyrtten therein, that the kyng of Babylon ſhall come, and make thyſe lande waſte: ſo þe ſhall make both people & cattell to be out of it? Therefore thus the Lord ſapeth of Iehoaſhim þe kynge of Iuda. * There ſhall none of þys generation ſet vpon the throne of Dauid, þys ſeede caſt ſhalbe caſt out, that the heire of the daye, and the froſt of the myght maye come vpon hym. And I will byſte the wyrding wyckednes of hym, of his dede, & of his seruantes, Whosoever, all the well that I haue promysed them (though they berde me not) wyl I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabytours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremy another booke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the sermons that were in the first booke, which Iehoaikim the kyng of Iuda dyd burne. And there were addid vnto them many more sermons, then before.

¶ The xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ Ieremiah succedeth Eroniab. Hereafter vnto Jeremy to praye for hym. Jeremy goinge into the lande of Ben Iamin, to Iericho. Whis letter, and put in prison. He is deliuered by kinge Zedekiah.

Zedekiah s sonne of Iosiah * which was made kyng of Iudaea Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, reigned in the lade of Iuda, in the streade of Eroniab the sonne of Iehoaikim. But nerther he, ner his seruantes, ner the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the prophet Jeremy. * Neuertheles, zedekiah the kyng sent Iehuphal s sonne of Selemiah & Whodoniah the sonne of Chasabiah the West to the prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Howe Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Whencos he also was come out of Egypt: which was the Caldees that beraged Ierusalem pertrauced, they departed from thence.

23 Then came the woide of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the prophet, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, thys answere shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for counsell: * Schoolde, Wharous hoste which is come forth to helpe you, shall retorne to Egypte into his owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyght agaynst thys cyte, wyne it, and lett fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde, disceane not pouce a wne mynde, thynklinge on this maner: wch, the Caldees go now their waye from vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees, that beseye you, and every one of the slayne lape in his tente, yet shalde they stande vp, and lett fyre vpon thys cyte. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremy went out of Ierusalem towarde the lande of Ben Iamin, to get hym from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Iamins porte, there was a poster, called Ieriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Ihananiah, which tell vpon him, and toke hym sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles, Ieriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremy bounde before the wyntes. Wherefore the princes were angere with Jeremy, and smote hym, and layed hym in prison in the house of Iontas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into the dongon and yelson, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah the kyng sent for him, and layed hym in, and asked hym quyetly in his owne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this busynes (that now is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yee, that it doth: and thou (sayed he) shalt be deliuered into the kyng of Babylons powere.

¶ Jeremy went into the house of Iontas the scribe, and layed hym in, and asked hym quyetly in his owne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this busynes (that now is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yee, that it doth: and thou (sayed he) shalt be deliuered into the kyng of Babylons powere.

Whosoever, Jeremy sayde vnto kyng zedekiah. What haue I offended agaynst the, against thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? * Where are poure prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, & sayde, that the kyng of Babylon shulde not come agaynly you & this lade? And therefore heare now, O my Lorde the kyng: let my prayer be accept before the, and sende me homoge into the house of Iontas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in s fore entre of the prison, and dayly to be geuen hym a cake of bread out of the bakers strate vntyll all the bread in the cyte was eat vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entre in the prison.

¶ The xxxix. Chapter.

¶ The moeyon of the rulers Jeremy is put into a dongon. At the request of Adoniameth the Cham: because the kyng commaunded Jeremy to be brought forth of the dongon. Jeremy sheweth the wyse howe he myght escape death.

Saphatiah the sonne of Nathan, & Godoliah the sonne of Shaphur, Iucal the sonne of Selemiah, and Ihabazur s sonne of Iehelchiah perceived the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Who lo remayneth in thys cyte, that perishe, ether with the swerde, with hunger or with the pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape withynge his soule for a praye, & shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: Thys cyte (no doute) must be deliuered into the power of the kyng of Babylon, and he also shall wyne it. Then sayde the pynces vnto the kyng: Spx, we beseeche you let thys mā be put to death. For thus he discoyageth the handes of the sounders that be in thys cyte, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh for the wordes vnto them. This mā decrip laboureth not for feare of the people, but myscheth. zedekiah the kyng answered & sayde to, he is in your handes, for the kyng maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast hym into the dongon of Iehelchiah ſeichtab the ſonne of Hamelch, that dwelt in the ſore entre of the priſon. And they lett downe Jeremy with cordes into a donged, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy ſtack ſaſt in ſ myre. Now when Abed-melch the Moſian beyuge a chamberlayne in the hyngeſ court, underſtoode, that they had caſt Jeremy into the dongeon: he went out of the hyngeſ houſe, and ſpake to ſ hynge, (which then ſat vnder the poſte of Benjamin) theſe wordes: My Lorde ſ hynge, where aſ theſe men medle with Jeremy the prophet, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in priſon, there to dye of hongre, for there is no more bread in the crite. Then the hynge commaunded Abed-melch the Moſian and ſayde: Take from hence .xx. m. of whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dongeon, befoze he dye. So Abed-melch toke the men w him, and went to the houſe of the hynge, and there vnder ſ ſeraiſir he gaue olberagges & wome cloutes, and lett them downe by a corde, into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abed-melch the Moſian ſayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O, put theſe ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixte them and the cordes: ſ Jeremy dyd ſo. So they drew vp Jeremy with cordes & toke him out of the donged, & he cameyned in the ſore entre of the priſon. Then ſ zedekiah the hynge ſent & cauſed Jeremy the prophete to be called vnto him, into the thyrde entre, that is in the houſe of the Lord. And the hynge ſapd vnto Jeremy: I will aſke the ſome what but haue nothinge frome. Then Jeremy answered zedekiah: If I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cauſe me to ſuffer death: If I geue the council, thou wilt not folowe me. So the king ſwoze an oath ſecretly vnto Jeremy, ſayinge. As truly aſ the Lorde I purſe that made vs theſe ſoules, I will not ſlaye the, nee geue the into the handes of them that ſeke after thy lyfe.

¶ The ſayde Jeremy vnto zedekiah. Thus ſayeth the Lord of hoſtes the God of Iſrael. ¶ If caſe be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou ſhalt ſaue thy lyfe, and thyſe crite ſhalt not be vnto thee, both thou and thy houſe ſhalt ſcape with youre lyues. But yf thou wilt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons princes, the ſhall thys crite be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees, which ſhall ſet fyre vpon it, and thou ſhalt not be able to eſcape the. And zedekiah ſapde vnto Jeremy. I am aſtrayde for the Iewes, that are fled vnto ſ Caldees, leſt I come in the ſy dades, and ſo they to haue me in deſiſon.

ſo ſhalt thou be well, and ſaue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, ſ Lorde hath tolde me this playnely: Beholde, all the women ſ are left in the kynge of Iudas houſe, ſhalbe led forth out to the kynge of Babylons princes. And they ſhall ſaye, ſ thou art deſeuered: and that they who thou diſeſt put thy truſt, haue gotten the vnder, ſ ſett thy ſete ſaſt in the myre, and gone theſe wyne ſed the. Therefore all thy wyces with theire clyphens ſhall they leade forth vnto the Caldees, and thou ſhalt not eſcape theſe handes, but ſhalt be the kynge of Babylons priſoner, & theſe crite ſhalt thou cauſe to be bent. Then ſayde zedekiah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of theſe wordes, and thou ſhalt not dye. But ſe the princes perceaued, ſ I haue talked with ſ, and come vnto the, ſaying. O ſpake, what ſayde the king to the: byde it not ſed vs, ſ we will not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what ſayde the hynge to the. ¶ So they geue them thys anſwere: I haue humbly beſought the hynge, that he will lett me lye no more in Jehonathans houſe, that I dye not there. ¶ Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and aſked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner aſ the hynge had hym. Then they helde theſe peace, and lett hym alone for they perceaued nothinge. ¶ So Jeremy abode till in the ſore entre of the priſon, vntill the daye that Ieruſalem was wonne.

¶ The lxxx. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor beſegeth Ieruſalem. zedekiah ſleeth. & dyd taken of ſ Caldees. How ſonne aſe ſlayne. Iſle eyde are ſhuld out, Jeremy is purgued for. Abed-melch is cauſured from captiuitie, becauſe of the confeſſion that he hath in God.

¶ Now when the crite of Ieruſalem was taken (for in the .ix. yere of zedekiah kynge of Iuda in the tenth month, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylons a all his hoſte, and beſeget Ieruſalem & foughte againt it. And in the .xi. yere of zedekiah in the fourth month .ix. daye of the month, he balle into the crite.) ¶ The all the princes of the king of Babylons, came in, & ſat them downe vnder the poſte: Aregel, Sarezet, Samgarncho, Sarſachim, Rablaris, Aregel, Sarezet, Rabmag, w all the other princes of the kynge of Babylons. ¶ And when zedekiah the kynge of Iuda with hys ſouldiers ſawe them, they fled, and departed out of the crite by nyghte throughe the kyngeſ garden, & thowowe the poſte that is betwene ſ two walles, and ſo they wente towarde the wylderniſſe.

But the Caldees hoſte followed faſte after them, and toke zedekiah in the ſilue of Jericho, and brought hym priſoner to Nabuchodonosor ſ kynge of Babylons vnto Babel, that lyeth in the land of hennath where he gaue iudgement vpon him. all the nobles of Iuda be layne, before hys face at Ierelch. And made Iehedias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with two chaynes, and sent him to Babylon.

C * Moreover, the Caldees went by the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the cite, and such as were come to helpe the, what socure was left of that come to helpe the? But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne let the remnant people (that those that had nothyng) dwell still in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes & coyne fildes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concerninge Jeremyp, sayinge: take and cherish hym, and make moche of him: for thou do hym no harme, but intreake him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabuzarban Nablares, Seragal Sarezzer Rabmag, and all the kynges of Babylons Lordes sent for Jeremyp: * and caused hym to be set out of the foze entre of the prison, & comited him vnto Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Shaphan: that he shoulde carie him home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people. Now whyle Jeremyp laye yet bounde in the foze entre of the prison, & woordes of the Lord came vnto him, sayinge: Soe and tell Abednemelech the Mozyan: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuyed for this cite, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will deliuer it (sayeth the Lord) and thou shalt not come in & banish of those men, whom thou fearest. For doubtles I will saue the, so that thou shalt not perish w the swerde: but thy lyfe shalt be sau'd, so that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lord.

C The xl Chapter.

Jeremyp hath heere to go whether he wyl. He dwelith with the people that remayned at Ierusalem, our whom Sodoliah reuised. Iohanan prouphered vnto Sodoliah.

I * whys the woordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremyp, * when Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had led him go fre from Iamath, wherher he had led him bothe amonge all the prisoners, that were caried from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babylon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremyp, and layde vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake myghtely before of the mysery vpon this place: Nowe the Lord had sentie, and persourmed it as he had promysed. For ye haue lyened agayn the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therefore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowe the bondes from thy handes this daye: yet wilt nowe go with me vnto Babylon, vp then: for I will se to the, & prouyde for the. But yet thou wilt not go with me to Babyls, the remayne here. * Beholde, all the lande is at thy will, loke wher thou thyself chusest and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Sodoliah therefore he sayde to him: Go backe to Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Shaphan: * wher the kyng of Babyls hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Iuda, & dwell with hym amonge the people, or remayne wher soeuer it pleaseth the. So the chefe Captayne gaue him hys expenies with a rewarde, and let him go. * The wente Jeremyp vnto Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Chizpa, and dwelt there with hym amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the hoste of Iuda (which w their felowes were scattered) abode on enery syde in the lande, vnderstode that the kyng of Babyls had made Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernoure in the land, and many wyfe and childe, yee, and & poore men in the lande: that were not led captiue to Babylon: Quide be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Sodoliah vnto Chizpa: Samely, Imael the sonne of Anthanias, Iohanan and Ionathan the sonnes of Cereah, Sarezah the sonne of Chanyometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Metopachite, Iesaias the sonne of Chazathi, with theyr companyes. And Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Shaphan, (woye vnto them and they felowes in this manner: * We not afraied to serue the Caldees, dwell in the lande, and do the kyng of Babylon serue, so shall ye prosper. Beholde, I dwell at Chizpa to be an officer in the Caldees be helpe, and to satisfie forbe as come to vs. Therefore gather pou wyne, coyne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in poure cyties that ye haue in keepyng.

Yee, all the Jewes also & dwell in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Iudaea and in all the countreys, when they herde, that & king of Babyls had made Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Shaphan, gouernoure vpon the) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Iuda to Sodoliah vnto Chizpa, & gathered wyne & other fenes, & that very moche.

Moreover, Iohanan the sonne of Cereah and all the captaynes of the hoste, that were scattered on enery syde in the lande, came to Sodoliah in Chizpa, & sayde vnto him: knowest thou not that Saalis byng of the Ammonites hath sent Imael the sonne of Anthanias, to slaye the: But Sodoliah the sonne of Ahikam beleued them not. Then sayde Iohanan the sonne of Cereah vnto Sodoliah in Chizpa in Egypte these wordes secretly: Let me go, I praye the, and I will paye Almael sonne of Rathamiah, so that no body shall knowe it. Wherefore wyl be apill the, that all the Je-wes which be fore unto the, might be saved and the remnant in Iuda pershe. And Sodoliath the sonne of Abraham sayde to Joh-nan the sonne of Careab: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but Ives, that thou sapest, of Almael.

The Captaynes aske counsell of Jeremie what they ought to do. Jeremie answered the remanace of the people not to go into Egypt.

So all the captaynes, & Iohanan y^e sonne of Achazab, Iezanab y^e sonne of Shalaph came with all the people fro the least vnto the most, and sayde vnto Ieremy the prophete. * ¶ Weare our petition, that thou madest praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, namely, for all the remaue, where of there be very fewe of vs left of many, as y^e self vs: y^e Lorde, thy God may shewe vs a waye to goin, & tell vs, what we shalde do. Then Ieremy y^e prophete sayde vnto them: I haue herde you. Behold I will praye vnto God your Lorde as ye haue requyred me: and loke whate shal lnter the Lord greue vnto y^e, I shall certifie you therof, and heere nothinge backe for you. And they sayde vnto Ieremy. * The Lord offereth & faithfulness be oure recorde, that we wyl do all y^e the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euell. ¶ The xliii. Chapter.

Loke vnto Jeremj. The called he Iohanan the sonne of Kareah. & all the captaynes of p people that were with him: yee, and all the people from the leest to the moost, and saide vnto them: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel vnto whom ye sent me, to saue forth your pappers before him: * If ye wyl dwell in this lande, I shall bryde you by, and not breake you downe: I shall plaite you, and not rote you out: for so I recynt, as concerninge the trouble that I haue done to you. feare not the byrge of Babilon, of whom ye stand in awe, he be not afrayed of him, sayeth the Lorde: for I wyl be w you, to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hande. I wyl pardon you, I wyl haue mercie vpon you, and cause him to pttie you, & brynge you agayne into your awne lande.

¶ Nevertheless, if ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nre to folowe the voyce of the Lorde your God: but wyl saie thus; we will not dwell here, but gointo Egypt: where we shal neither fe warre, heare the noyse of the trompe, nor suffer longer, there wyl we dwell. Wherto soe, heare now the woide of p Lorde, wpe remnant of Iuda. * Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: If ye be wholy purposed to go into Egypte, & ye curse thre to dwell as straungers: * the two-arde p ye feared shall ouer take you in Egypte: and p hunger wherof ye be here afrayed shall hang vpo you & folowe you into Egypte, and there ye shall dye. And all they, that of set purpose vndertake to go into Egypte to sojourn there, shall perishe with the two-arde, with hunger and pestilence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the place, that I wyl byrge vpon them.

* Jer. lxxvi. a.

* Jer. lxxv. c.

¶ For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I like as my wiaht and indignacyon is moued agaynst p inhabitaours of Ierusalem, so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynst you also, if ye go into Egypte: & there ye shal be ruyled, abhoyred, brought to shame and confusyon: and as for thys place, ye shall neuer se it moie. The Lorde forbyderth you, O ye remnant of Iuda, that ye shall not go into Egypte.

¶ And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, for ye haue dissembled w me. * For ye sent me vnto the Lorde your God, and sayde: O praye thou the Lorde oure God for vs: and loke what answer p Lorde oure God doth geueth thee, that byrge vs agayne, and we shall do therafter. Nowe haue I answered, and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde your God, for the which cause he hath sent me to you.

* Jer. lxxv. a.

* Jer. lxxv. b.

¶ Nowe therefore, * If ye wyl not folowe it, be sure, that ye shall perishe with p two-arde, with hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place, wher your lust is to go, and dwell.

¶ Iohanan receyved the remnant of the people into Egypte, contrary to the commaund of Iheremie. Iheremie prophesied the destruction of Egypte.

Nowe when Jeremj had ended all the wooides of the Lorde his God vnto the people which to declare p Lorde thep: God had sent hym to them, (euen all thes wooides I saie) Azariah the sonne of Ussiah, and Iohanan the sonne of Kareah with all the subbozne persones, sayde vnto Jeremj: * Thou lyest, the Lorde cure God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there: ¶ But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght brynge vs in to the captiuitie of the Caldees: p they might slaye vs, and carie vs awaye pte soners vnto Babilon.

¶ So Iohanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all p people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Hamely, to dwell in the lande of Iuda. But Iohanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye all the remnant in Iuda, * that were come together agayne from all the byrthe (among whom they had bene kateb) to dwell in the lande of Iuda: Men, women, chylde, the byrges daughters, all those that Nabuzardan the cheie captayne had leftte with Gedoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Shaphan. They caried awaye also the prophete Jeremj, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyent vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

¶ And in Taphnis the woide of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremj, saying: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the byrch wall, vnder p doze of Itharazs house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda may se, and saie vnto thee: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I wyl sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon my seruante, and wyl sett his sente vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall breake his tente ouer them.

The xliiii. Chapter.

He reproveth the people for their idolatrie, they that are yet in the land of Egypt, and are chafed. The destruction of Egypt and the returne thereof is prophesied.

In this is the worde that was shewed to Jeremie, concerning all the Iewes: which dwell in Egypt: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Moph, & in the land of Patures. Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye have sene all the miserie, that I have brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon the ciues of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellinge therein: and that because of the greates blasphemies which they committed, to provoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifices and worship vnto strange goddes: whom neither ye, nor your fathers haue knowne. howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes all the prophets. * I rose vpe early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warning. O do no such abominable thynges, & thynges that I hate. But they woulde not followe ner beken. To turne from their wickednes, & to do no more sacrifices vnto strange goddes.

Wherefore myne indignation and wrath was kindled, and it beate vpon the cyties of Iuda, the feltes with the streets of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therefore, thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: howe happeneth it, that ye do so greake cupill vnto poure owne soules: thus to destroye the men and women, children and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye poure me vnto wathe with the woiches of your owne handes: when ye offer vnto strange goddes in the land of Egypt, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myght utterly perishe, and that ye myght be reuelled and shamefully intenced of all nations. * Ye haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kinges of Iuda and their wyues, the wickednes that ye poure selues and poure wyues haue done in the land of Iuda, in the cytie and in the land of Ierusalem.

Yet are ye not foy vnto this daye, ye fence not, neither walke ye in my lawe and in my commandementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and your forefathers.

Therefore thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determyed to punish the you, & to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnant of Iuda, that purposly wente into Egypt, ther to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall all be destroyed. In the land of Egypt shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swearde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the moost, they shall perishe with the swearde and with hunger. Whereouer, they shall reuelled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will visite them that dwell in Egypt, * as I haue visited Ierusalem, * 117. 55. 56. 57. 58. with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. So that none of the remnant of Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egypt, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda all though they thynke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but such as are fled awaye.

Then all the me which haue we that their wyues had offered vnto strange goddes, and a greates losse of wyues that stode ther, per, and all the people that dwell there in Egypt in the cytie of Patures, answerde Jeremie, and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lord, we will in no wise heare them: but whatsoever goeth out of our owne mouthe, that we will do. We will do sacrifices and offer oblatiouns vnto the quene of heauen, * as we haue done our forefathers, our kynges and our heades haue done in the cytie of Iuda, and in the streets and feldes of Ierusalem. For then had we plentyfoules of vitayles, then were we in prosperper, and no misfortune came vpon vs.

* But sens we left to bene iustice, and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perishe with the swearde and hunger. Laste of all, when we women byd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, byd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinck offerings, eue to that yinge byd we sacrifice and scrute, without our husbandes wyles.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answer: Byd not the Lord remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kynges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the cyties of Iuda, in the streets and lande of Ierusalem: and hard he not considered this in his inprider. In somuch that the Lord might no longer suffer the wickednes of your inuicuous, and the abhominable thynges, which ye byd: * I will not poure lande desolation and voyde: per, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye.

* Byd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydols, and sinned agaynst the Lord. * Ye haue not followed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordynances and statutes.

Per, this is the cause, that all misfortune happeneth vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Whereouer, Jeremie spake vnto all the people and to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lord all Iuda, ye that be in

Of the prophery the destruction of Egypt. Which was promysed to Iehoiakim.

These folowe the wordes of the Lord to the prophete Jeremie, which he spake agaynst all the Gentyles. These wordes folowing preached he to the Egyptians concerning the doost of Pharaos Necho kyng of Egypt: * when he was in Charchanis, by the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of Iehoaquim the sonne of Iosias kyng of Iuda.

* Make ready buckler and shilde, and go forth to fight: harness your bowes, and lett your selues vpon them: lett your saiettes fall on, bing forth sperres, coure your swardest, and put on your backe plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, if ye you so afeide: why shynke ye backe? The worstes are sayne. Yee, they runne so fast awaye, that none of them looketh behynde him. Fearfulness is fallen vpon everyone of them, sayth the Lord. The lightest of foete shall not be awaye, and the worstes shall not escape.

Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stonde and fall. But what is he this, if twelfth vp, as it were a floude, roaring and ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that rysth vp lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters with to greate noyse.

And he sayde: I will go, and will couer the earth, I will destroye the cite with the that are therein. Gett you vp ye hoyses, rolle forth ye charrettes, come forth worstes: ye Chaldeans, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Libeans with your bowes. This daye of the Lord God of hostes, is a daye of vengeance, that he maye auenge hym of bys enemyes. The sword shall denoure, it shall be satisfied, and barbed in theyr bloude. For the Lord God of hostes shall haue a sayne offering towarde the north, by the water of Euphrates. So vp, O Gilead, and bypunge triacle vnto the daughter of Egypt. But in dayne shalt thou go to surgerye: for thy wounde shall not be stopp'd. The wherthen haue hearde of thy name, and the lande is full of thy confusion: for one stronge man dyd stombie vpon another, and they are fallen boeth together.

* These are the wordes of the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremie concerning the coming of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, which was sent to destroye the lade of Egypt. Preach out thowse lade of Egypt: cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, at Memphis, and and Caphnis, and saye: Stande still, make the ready, for the sword shall consume the round aboute.

Howe happeneth, if they mighte wot, they are fallen: why stode they not fast? Then because the Lord thurst them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euery still vpon another. One crept vpon another. Al, let vs go agayne to oure owne people, and to oure owne naturall contry from the cruell sword.

E They dyd crye out there, O Pharao king of Egypt thou troublous king: the tyme will bring sedition. As truly as I liue, sayth the king, * whose name is the Lord of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Cabaos, and as Achanis of it stode in the sec. O daughter of Egypt make ready thy geer to flye. For Caphis shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The lande of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe: but destruction shall come out of the north I saye it cometh. Her wonged sonnes that ben with her, are like fat calves. They also shall be a waye together, and not as yet: for the daye of theyr slaughter, and the tyme of their visitation shall come vpon them.

The crye of them shall make a noise, as if the blast of a trumpet. For they shall enter in with theyr hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wodde. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayth the Lord. They shall be innumerable: for they shall be more in number then the gre choppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt is confounded, and deliuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I will visit that restless people of Alexander, Pharao and Egypt: yee, also theyr goddes and theyr kynge: euen Pharao, and all them that putt theyr trust in hym. Yee, I will deliuer them into the handes of those, that seek after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruantes. And after all these thynges is she inhabited as afore tyme, sayth the Lord.

E But be not thou afrayed, O my seruant Jacob feare not thou, O Israel. For so, I will helpe the from face, and thy seede from the lande of theyr captiuitie. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shall profpere and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not, O Jacob my seruant, sayth the Lord, for I am with thee: and will destroye all nations, amonge whom I haue scattered thee. neuertheless, I will not consume thee: but chasten thee and correcte thee: yee, and that without ceasse: neither will I spare thee as one that were senseless.

The xliij Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistines.

Here are the wordes, that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cite of Azah. Thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, there shall waters aryse out of the north: a shall growe to a greate floude, runnyng ouer and coueryng the lande, the ctyes, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall moune at the noise and stamping of theyr stronge barbed horses, at the shaking of theyr charrettes and at the rombinge of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyliden, so faste and weep shall theyr handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. he shall make waste both Geras, Sidon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lord will destroye the Philistines, the remnant of the yle of Caphos: And Idelle is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other bailleys shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wilt thou sleepe, O daughter of the Lord? When wilt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy sweete rest, and lraue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lord hym selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynst Ascalon, and rayed it vp agaynst the ctyes of the se coast?

The xliij Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Moabites.

Hus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst * Moab: who shall be to the ctye of Abo: for it is layed wast, brought to confusion: and Kariatiarim taken, Hlgab is brought to shame and afrayed: Moab can boast nomore of the helde: for they haue druypled against it. Come, shall they saye, let vs rote them out, yf they maye be nomore amonge the number of the Gentiles, and that thou Haden maye nomore be thought vpon: and the sword shall persecute the. A voyce shall crye fro Hozanaim: with greate walkinge and destruction is Moab made desolate.

Chyliden coule tell of the crye therof. For at the goinge vp vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentation and mourninge, and downe towarde Hozanaim, they heard a cruell and a deely crye. Set you a waye, snue pour lyues, and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wilderness. * For because thou hast trusted in thine owne waxes and treasure, thou shalt be take: Chamos with his preests and priests shall go a waye into captiuite.

none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the fildes shall be laped waste, lyke as the Lorde hath spoken.

¶ True wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedily: for her cyties shall be made to desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. Cursed be he that doth the woiche of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that heareth backe his * swaerde from the shepynge of bloude.

Moab hath cuer bene ryche and carelesse from her yowth vp, she hath sytten and talid her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yett put out of one vessell into another (that is: the neuer wente awaye into captiuyte, therefore her taste remaineth, and her saour is not yett chaunged.

¶ But lo, the tyme cometh, saith the Lorde, that I shall lende her trustles to trulle her vp: which shall remoue her from her dwelling: and to munge her vessels, and brenke her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of * Asriel, wherein she put her trust. Altherfore do ye thynke thus: we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed, and her cyties bent vp: her cholen younge men be layne, saith the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on apace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that know her name shall saye, Howe happerith it, that the stronge state and the goodly rodde is thus bzolien: And thou daughter Zidon, come downe fro thy glozy, & syt in thyll. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and brenke downe thy stronge holde.

¶ Downe and cepe, scilicet out at Arnon, & Moab is destroyed. For iudgment shall come vpon the playne lande: Hamel, vpon Holon, and Jahaz, vpon Ephraim and Zidon, vpon Sabo and the house of Zebulaim, vpon Asiattharim and vpon the house of Samul, vpon the house of Moab and Carioth vpon Moab and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they be farre or neare.

¶ The bozme of Moab is smytten downe and her arme broken, saith the Lorde. Make her broken, for the magnified her selfe aboue the Lorde, that me maye clappe theyr hãdes at her voinpte, and that she also maye be laughed to scozme. O Israel, halte thou not laugh him to scozme, when he is taken amonge theues. ¶ Yee, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste hym, thou shalt be dyspuent awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cyties, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

¶ As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard of it: she is verreye imyded. I knowe her stoutnes, her donly ynge, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomack, saith the Lorde. I knowe (saith the Lorde) her inbignepson, the both not ryghte, her woordes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therefore shall her mourning be made for Moab, and euery man shall cepe for Moabs sake: a lamentation shall be made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer and for the, O thou vineyard of Sabaanah. Thy vyne bzaunches shall come ouer the see, and the bzaunches of Jazer but vnto the see: & destruction shall brenke into thy harvest and grape gathering: myrris and cheare shall be taken a waye from the tymble side, and from the whole lande of Moab.

¶ There shall be no sweete wyne in the presse, the b... shall haue no stomack to crye yee, ther shall be none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were heard fro Hebron to Elefant and Jahaz, which listeth vnto their voyces fro zoar vnto Mozonaim, that theyr bullocks of the peare olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Chemrim shall be dryed vp. O reouer, I will make Moab cease, saith the Lorde, from the offerings, and ceasing that. ¶ The doth made vnto her goddes in his places. Altherfore my heart mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the menues sake of the bypke wall my heart mourneth also: euen as a pyper that ppyeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very frawe, and destroyed.

¶ All heades shall be shauen, and all beeders clipped of: all handes boũde, and lopynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and steetes of Moab, theyr shall be lamettable mourning. For I will brenke Moab lyke an vnproffable vessell, saith the Lorde. ¶ Howe is the destroyed: O howe mourneth she: O howe doeth Moab hange downe her brade, & is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughing stock: & ynd in derision of all the þe rounde aboute her. ¶ For thus saith the Lorde. Beholde, the enemye shall come slyng as an eagle: & speede þys wynges vpon Moab. Theyr shall clyme ouer þe walles, & wyinne the strongholdes. Then I myghty mens bettes in Moab shall lyke the bett of a woman trauelyng with chylde.

¶ And Moab shall be made to desolate: that she shal nomoze be a people, because she hath sett vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. ¶ Fears, pyper, make shall come vpon the, O Moab, saith the Lorde. Whoso escape th the fears, shall fall in the pytte: and wpo to getteth out but of the pye, shalbe taken in the snare. For I will bring a yere of visitation vnto Moab, sayeth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of helybon: For there shall go a fire out of helybon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vpon that poudre people of Moab, and the toppes of those felicitous chylidren.

Who be vnto y, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos thilt perishe. Yee, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe leade awaye captiue. Yet at the laste wyl I bringe Moab out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde of Moab.

Concerning the * Ammonites, thus the Lorde sayeth: hath I Israel no childe, or is he with out an heire? Why hath poure king then take Gad in? Wherefore both his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therefore, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lorde, I will bring a nople of warre into Baanias of the Ammonites: and it shall be layed on a desolate trape: and her cities bzett vnto the Ircalities shalbe lozdes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayeth the Lorde. Helybon shall mourne, for it shall be roted out of the grounde, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The cities of Baanias shall crye out, and crye the selues with sacke cloth: they shall mourne, & eume about the walles: for they shall be led awaye perloner: yee, his priests and priuces with hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the valley / the valley hath flowd awaye, & thou fearest daughter, & thynekest y thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no mā shall come to thee? Beholde, I will bringe a feare vpon thee, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that be about thee: so that ye shalbe scattered euery mā from another, and a mā shall gather them together agayne y be fled. But after that, I will bringe the Ammonites also out of captiuitie agayne.

* ¶ Vpon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wyfdom in Chemā? Is there no more good counsell amonge his people? Is there no more wyfdomen then turned cleue to naught? Gett you hence, turne poure backs, crye downe into the deppe, O ye cities of Medan.

For I will bringe destruction vnto Elan: yee, and the dape of yps visitation. If the grapegatherers came vpon thee, thouldest thou not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, thouldest thou not take so much as they thought were ynough?

¶ But I will make Elan bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them: & yse shalbe wasted awaye: yee, yps brethren and yps neyghbours, and be hym selfe shall not be lesse behynde.

¶ Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chylidren behynde thee, and I wyl kepe them, and thy wyddowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. * Beholde, they that me thought were vnnice to dynike of the cuppe, haue dyonken with the Epziz: and thynekest thou them to be free?

¶ No, no, thou shalt nerber be quyte nor free: but thou must dynike also. For wyl I haue twooze by my selfe, sayeth the Lorde, y Iozarah shall become a wyddowes, an open shame, a laughing stocke and curlynge: and all her cyties shalbe a continuall deserte.

For I am perfectly informed of y Lorde that he hath sent a message alker by vnto the hepten. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make pou ready to the battayle: for lo, I will make the but small amonge the hepten, and I will regarded amonge men.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy, concerning * Elam, in the beginningge of the raigne of zedekiah kynge of Iuda. Thus saith the Lorde of hostes: Scholde, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye there strength: and vpon Elam I will bring the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and will scatter them agaynst the same foure windes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall be vnto them.

For I will cause Elam to be a prey of their enemies, and of them that feke thez lives: and will bringe upon them the indygnation of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I will persecute them with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to naught.
I will sett my thorn in Elam, I will de-stroye both the hynde and the pycces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in pzoesse of tyme I will bringe Elam out of captiuitie again, sayth the Lorde.

The 1-Chapter.

¶ The prophesy of the destruction of Babylon, and the deliverance of Israel, which was in captivity.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Ieremie, concerninge Babilon, and the lande of Chaldees: * *Preache amonge the Gentyles, let your voyce be hearde, make a token, cepe out, hepe no siler, but saye: Babilon is worne. * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome.* see. iij. and. iij. and. iij. and. iij. and. iij.

¶ Per, these goddesses be brought to thaim: and their priuages buell in peeces. foz out of the north & there doth come a people against her: which make her to be so waste, that no body dwell therein, neither man nor beast: foz these dayes and departs from thence. ¶ In those dayes and at that tyme, sayth y^e Lord: the chylidren of Israel shall come, they and the chylidren of Iuda, weeping and making haste, and shall seke the Lord their God. They shall aske the way to Sion, they shall say they turne their faces, saynynge: Come and we will cleaue to the Lorde, in a covenant that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a losse & flocke. * Jer. xlii. 21. & xlii. 27.
 My shepherdes haue discaused the, and haue made them go astraye vpon the bylles.
 They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hyl, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and theye themselves sayde: We haue made no fault agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yee, euen the Lorde, which is the beweper of theyr pygheousnesse & that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye sic from Babilon, and departe out of the lande of the Chaldees, and be as the lam- * Jer. xlii. 28. mes that goe before the flocke. & for 100. wyll wake vp an hooste of people from the northern lande, and bringe them vpon Babylon: theie shall laye lege to it, and wyne it. Theye arrowes shall not mysse, yke as a connyng archer queth not wzonge.

And the children shall be spoiled, and all they that spoyle them, shall be satisfied, sayth the Lord. * although ye were so chearfull and gladd, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie.
Your mothers shall be so confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame.
Soe shall be the least feyt by amonge the nations, hope, wasteth and dreyed by. Roman shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lord, but the shall be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shall stande still, and be amazed, and shall wonder at all her places.

Go forth in your arape againſt Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes: ſhute at her, there no arrowes: for ſhe hath ſpined againſt the Lord. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, againſt her rounde about: the shall yelde her selfe, her foundations shall fall and her walles shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lord. * Per, vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so shall we with her. Make out of her from Babylon, and him that handleth the spear in her wall. For feare of the sword of the enemy, every man shall gett him to his owne people: and every man shall flee to his owne lande. * Israel is a scattered flocke, the lions have dispersed them. * First the king of the Assirians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon hath broyed all their bones.

Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visit the king of Babylon and his kingdome as * I haue visited the king of the Assirians, and will bringe Israel againe to his pleasant pasture, that he maye feede vpon Chamel and Balaan, and be satisfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galad. * In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayth the Lord, * of the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde. * Men enquire for the syn-ne of Iuda, there shall be none: for I will be mercifull vnto them, whom I sware to re-maine ouer.

So downe, O thou auenger, into the enemies lande, and visit them that dwell therein: downe with the, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayth the Lord: do according to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the lande a crye of a slaughter and great murder, namely on this maner. How happeth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and broyed in sunder?
Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wilderness amonge the heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed waite for the, and thou art take vna waies: art thou trayed and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto anger. The Lord hath opened his house of ordinance, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thinge that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lord of hostes worke.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: breake vp her cheynes: thus shee as yett thy-rope: despoyle her, that nothinge shall be left.
Slaye all their mighty men souldyers, and put them to death. * Make vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their visitation is at han-de. * We thinke I beare already a crye, of them that be dead and escaped out of the lade of Babylon, which were in Sion the vengeance of the Lord our God, the vengeance of his temple: yet, a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitch your centres rounde about her, that none escape. * Recor-pence her, as she hath deserued: and accor-dyng as she hath done, so deale with her: a-gayne, for she hath * set by her selfe agaynst the Lord, agaynst the holpe one of Israel.

Therefore shall her yong men fall downe in the streets, and all her men of warre shall be coted out in that daye, sayth the Lord. Be-holde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayth the Lord God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitation.
And the proude shall stumble and fall and no man shall helpe him vp. I will burne vp his cities with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: The children of Israel and Iuda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in capti-uisme, kept them fast, and wyl not let the go, but their auenger and redeemer is mighty, whose name is the Lord of hostes: he shall interpret their cause, he shall make the lade shake, and inuolue them that dwell therein, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Chaldees, sayth the Lord, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men. The swearde vpon their souldyers, as for those, they shall become foolles. The swearde vpon their women, so that they shall stande in feare. The swearde vpon their hoymen and charretts, and vpon all the conion people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke women. The swearde vpon their retri-bute, so that it shall be like a wynde. I brought vpon their waters, so that they shall be drye vp. For the lande was drye vpon the ymagis, and deliuered in strange wonderful thinges.
Therefore shall wynde beastes, lambs & catte of mountaynes, and creepes dwell therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed * Sodom and Gomorah, with the cities that laye there about, sayth the Lord. So shall no man dwell there also, neither shall any man haue there his habitation. * Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a great bombe of men, and many buyges shall stan-de by from the endes of the earth. They beare bowes and bucklers, & cwell are they and vnmurderfull.

Their voyce roareth like the raging see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fight agaynst the, O Babylon. * As soone as the king of Babylon heareth tell of them, his handes shall waxe feeble. * Sowme and heugnes shall come vpon him, as a woman trauelynge with chyld. Beholde, * lyke as the lyon cometh vp from the pleasant me-dowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Ebron, so wyl I dye the with fyre, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shall I chole out: & ordeyne to such a thinge?

The prophery

* Job. xlii. For who is lyke me, or who will strepe w me, or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me? Therefore, heare the counsell that y Lord hath gyven vpon Babylon, and the denyer y he hath take vpon the land of the Chaldees: y be least among the people shall teare them in peeces, and loke what pleisat thing they haue: they shall laye it waste. y he noper at the wympyne of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the erpe shall be heard amonge the Gentiles:

The II. Chapter.

¶ Hebre Babylon quide be ouerthowen. Item: my greute hys booke to Sarafas.

A lyus hath y Lorde sayd: * beholde, I wyll rase vp a peryous wynd e agaynst Babylon, and her citezels, that heare euyl wyl agaynst me. I wyll sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out, and to bestrope her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde. Moreover, the Lorde hath sayde vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme ouer y walles in byest places. Ye shall not spare her young men: kyll downe all her host. y his y flayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, and the wounded in the stretes. * y as for Israel and Iuda, they shall not be forsaik of their God, of y Lorde of hostes: for the holy one of Israel take no, though they haue fylled all their land full of synne. * y I shal awayne from Babylon, euery man saueth his lyfe, that ye be not rote out w her wickednesse: for the tyme of the Lorders vengeance is come: yee, he shall reuow her agayne. Babylon hath the vnye in the Lorders hande, * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes droncken. Of her wyne haue all people droncken: therefore, are they out of theyr wittes. * y thus sorely is Babylon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, bynyng plaisters for her woundes, yf she maye parauenture be heald agayne. Woe wold haue made Babylon whole, saue they: but she is not reco- uered. * Therefore wyll we let her alone, and go euery man into his awne countrey. For her iudgment is come into heauen, & is gone vp to the cloudes. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousnes. And therefore come on, we wyll shewe Sion the worke of the Lorde our God.

* Iudic. ii. c. ii. Reg. xli. c. Eake thare the arrowes, and multiplie poure theydes: * for the Lorde shall rase vp the spere of the kinge of the Medes, which hath already a desyre to destroye Babylon. This shall be the vengeance of the Lord, and the vengeance of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon: make poure watchstronge, sett poure watchmen in raye: yee, holde yenne watch: and yet for all that shall the Lorde go forth with the denyer, which he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

¶ Thou that dwellest by the greates waters, y thou that hast to great treasure and riches, thyne ende is come, and the rekenyng of the wynginges. * The Lorde of hostes hath twome by him self, that he wyll ouerwhelme the wylh men, lyke greeshoppers in number, which with a coage shall crye, alarū, alarū agaynst the. * Yee, euen the Lorde of hostes, that w his power made the earth, w hys wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discretis spard out the beastes. y none as he letteth his voyce be heard, the waters in paye were scarce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He tareth y lightenynge to rayne, he byn- geth the wyndes out of their secrete places. y hee be etemed by their wysdome, all me are become fooles. * y Confounded be all the casters of ymages: for the thing y they make is but disceate, and hath no breath. Wanye is it and an erronpouse worke: and in the tyme of visitation it shall perishe.

¶ Nevertheless, the poore of Jacob is none such: but he y made all thynges, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, he is the robbe of his cheriteaice. y thou hast bene myne hammer and weapens for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peeces: and with the haue I destroyed kingdomes. y howe the I haue beaten to powder hoyle and hoysman: yee, the charettes y soch as sit vpon the. y do- rowe the I haue broke man y womā, olde y yonge, bachelers y mayden. y howe the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattell, the prynces and the rulers. y therefore wyll I reuward the cite of Babylon y all her citeisng, y Chaldees w all the euyl w which they haue done vnto Sion: yee, that ye yone silurs shall se it, sayth the Lorde. y beholde, I come vpon the, & y noploine hill, sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyedst all landes: I wyll trete ouer my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and will make the a bent hill: so that neither corner stones, nor plinckes, nor foundatpys of stones shall be taken eny more out of the. but wast and desolate shall thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the shepthen: prouoke y nations agaynst her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, y Chenni and Cians agaynst her. Set the ynce agaynst her: byng as grent a fozte of terrible hozes agaynst her: as yf they were greeshoppers. y repare agaynst the people of the Medes w their kynges, y prynces and all their chefe rulers: yee, the wy- ple lande that is vnder hyne.

agaynst Babylon to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worst types of Babylons shall frame þy battail, and hepe the selues in ströge holdes, their strength hath sayed them, they shall be brent vp, they shall be brent vp. One pursuuant shall meete another: yee, one post shall come by another, to bring the henge of Babylon to þinges: that his cytie is taken in on euery syde, the footes occupied, the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers soe astrayed.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babylons hath bene in her tyne lyke as a thyrtieth floore, but shortly she shall be brent. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swallowed me by lyke a dragon, and fylled his belly with my delicacies: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance awaye, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yee, & my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I will bekeude thy cause, and auenge thee: I will drinke vp byr see, and drye vp her water hyppes.

* Babylon shall become an hepe of stones & dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnes and woundyng, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke Lyons, and as the ponge Lyons when they be angrey, so shall they bende them selues. In theyr heate I shall gnye them a vyner and they shall be dyoncken for soye.

* Then shall they slepe an curiall ynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shall carpe the downe to be layne lyke sheepe, lyke wetters and goates. How was it? Selach wone: How was the glory of the whole lade taken? how happenech it, that Babylon is so woncked at among the heathen? The see is ryfen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her w his greates waues. Her cyties are laped waste the laude lyeth vnbryded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man traunsellet thowowe. Moreover, * I will visit Sclat Babylon: and the thinge that he hath swallowed vp, that same shall I pluche out of hym mouth. The sentryls also shall runne no more vnto hym, yee, and the walles of Babylon shall fall.

* My people, * come out of Babylon, & euery man inape saue his lyfe, from the fearful wyth of the Lorde. Be not fayne heret, and feare not at euery rumour that shall be heide in the lade: for euery yere bringeth new tydings, & in the yere folowynge new tydings, & a robberyng in the laude and Lorde bys Lorde. And so, the tyme cometh, that I will visit the ymagines of Babylon, & the whole lade shall be confounded: yee, and her slayne shall lye in the myddes of her. Heaue & earth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babylon, wher the destroyers shall come vpon her to the roste, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe & flayne many out of Israel, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her hyngdome. Ye that have escaped & forward, haste you, & feare not to fly, remember the Lorde a farr of, and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemies: our faces were couered with shame, because the strange aleauntes came into the Sanctuary of the Lorde. Wherefore, beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh, that I will visit ymagines of Babylon, and thowowe the whole lade they shall mourne and faile. * Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers sayeth the Lorde.

A pyteous cry shall be heard from Babylon, and a grete myser from the land of the Caldees, when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryeth out the hye stomach & proud boastyng, wherwith they haue bene as furious as & waues of grete water floods, and made grete crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (then vpon Babylon) which shall take their wothyes, and breake their bowes: for God is disposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yee, (sayeth the Lorde.) I will make theyr princes, theyr wylmen, theyr chiefe rulers, and all their wothyes, dyoncke: so that they shall slepe an curiall ynge slepe, and neuer wake, Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The thyrde wall of Babylons shall be broken, and her hye gates shall be brent vp. And the thinge that the sentryls and the people haue wrought with grete traunale and labour, shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge & Jeremie gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Azzabai, the sonne of Azadaiab, when he went towards Babylon with sedachai the kyng of Iuda, in þe fourth yere of hys enygue. Nowe thus Saraiab was a praeable yzyer. Jeremie wrote in a booke all the misery that shoulde come vpon Babylon, yee, and all these firmos that be wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiab this charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, it that thou reade all these wordes, and saye. O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neither people nor catrell shall dwell there any more, but to lyr waste for rure: and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddelt of Euphrates, and saye, Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, & be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I will bypnye upon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus saith the preache bynges of Jeremy.

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

¶ We expreth the takinge of Ierusalem is taken of the Chaldees, & edekiah sonnes are hildred byr: for the fact, and hys crew put oute. The cytie is burnt. The temple is spoiled and redded. Thus that were left in Ierusalem are caried to Babylon. bynges Jer: boachyn is brought forth of prison, & led into a henge.

Zedekiah was * one .xx. yeare olde, when he was made kyng, and he reignede eleven yeare in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremys daughter of Iphnia. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jeboachin dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Ierusalem, and Iuda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of hys presence. And zedekiah fell fro the kyng of Babilo. * But in the nyth peare of hys reygne. In the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon with all hys hoste came before Ierusalem, and beseged it, and made them bulwoches rounde aboute it. And thus besegynge of the cytie endured vnto the eleventh peare of byng zedekiah.

* And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cytie: that there were nomore vntayles for the people of the lande. So all the foundiers brake awaye, and fled oute of the cytie by nyght thoro we the waye of the porte betwene the two wallis by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wot these men their waye towarde the wyldernes.

¶ And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the fride of Jericho, when his hoste was runne fro hym: So they caried the kyng awaye prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babilon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

* Jer. xxxix. b.

¶ The kyng of Babilon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, yee & put all the prynces of Iuda to death at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with two chernes, to be caried vnto Babilon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

¶ Nowe the tenth daye of the fiftth moneth in the nyth peare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne and the kyng of Babilons seruantes came vnto Ierusalem, and bent vp the house of the Lorde. He bent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buyldynges in Ierusalem. And the whole hoste of the Chaldees that were with the chefe captayne, brake downe all the wallis of Ierusalem rounde aboute.

¶ As for the poore people and such tolke as yet was left in the cytie: which also were fallen to the kyng of Babilon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried the awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countre, byd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leane in the lande, to occupie the vncardes and feldeis. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde, yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the Chandelers, chowles, sickepokes, spyghlers, spoues, and all the haken vessel that was occupied in the scrupce: with the basens, colepannes, spyghlers, potters, candelltykes, spoues, and cypers: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

¶ The chefe captayne toke also the two pylers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate: * which byng Solomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel conteyned so much metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piler was eghtene cubytes hie: and the rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubytes, a foure spyngers thicke and rounde. Nowe vpo the rope were brasen knoppes, ad euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hie: and vpon the knoppes were whopres, and pongranates rounde aboute of cleane bras.

¶ After thus maner were both the pylers fastened to the pongranates, wherof there were an hundred and .xxvi. which hanged vpon the whopres rounde aboute. The chefe captayne also toke Shariab the hie prestre, and Shophoniah that was chefe nexte hie, and the thre hepres of the treasury. He toke oute of the cytie a chabrelayne which was a captayne of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruantes, which were founde in the cytie: and Sepher a captayne that vsed to mulster the men of warre, with thre score men of the countre that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblath: and the kyng of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Iuda was ledde a waye captiue, oute of hys awne lande. ¶ This is the tyme of the people, who Nabuchodonosor ledde a waye captiue.

¶ In the seventh peare of hys reygne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thye thousand and thye and twenty. In the .xliij. peare Nabuchodonosor chodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem eggt handreth thirty and two personnes.

In the xxiii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Ra-bazardan the chele captayne, toke awaye seuen handreth forty and fyue Jewes pisoners, is foure thousande and fyve hundreth.

In the xxxvii. yeare after that Jehochin the kyng of Iuda was carped awaye in the xxv. daye of the xii. moneth, Cylmerodach kyng of Babilon (the same yeare that he reigned) gaue Jehochin the kyng of Iuda hys prison, and let hym out of prison, and spake loungly to him. And leit his crone aboue the cronies of the other kynges þ with hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yee, and he dyd cate w hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall supping geuen him of the kyuge of Babilon, euery daye a certaine thyng allowed him all the dayes of hys lyfe, vntill he dyed.

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ It happeneth after Ierai was brought into capti-uety, and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremie the pro-phete saie weeping, and sorrowfully bewailch Jerusalem and saynginge and bewailinge with an heu-re and twofull heere, sayng.

ALAS, howe spyteth the optie so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that geueth her any comforte: * yf her nexte fren-des traile her agens her, and are become her enemies. Iuda is taken prisoner, because the was despyled: and for scrnyng so many strange goddes, the dwelleth nowe amonge that persecuted her, toke her, in synapte places where the coude not escape. The creaters of Sion moune, because no man cometh no more to the tolepyne festes. All her gates are desolat, her prestes make lametard, her map-des are carefull: the her selfe is in great be-hynesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer tie of the daughter of Sion is awaye, her princes are become lyke beetes that synbe no pasture. They are buyd awaye before thep enemie, so that they haue nomore power.

Howe doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobeidice, yee, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past seyng her people is brought downe thow the power of thep enemye, and there is no man to helpe her: her enemies stande lo-kinge at her, and laugh her saubath dayes more and more, therfore is she come in de-scape. All thep that had her in honour despyse her: for they haue sene her synthynes. Yee, the sygheth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

¶ Her synthes are despyd, the remembered not what wolde followe: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to co-ferte her. O Lorde, consyde my trouble, for I myne enemye hath the vpperhande. The enemye hath put hys hade to all the pious vyle I am become. haue ye no regards all ye that go soze by, be holde and se, yf there be any sorow lyke vnto myne, wher with the Lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of his secrefull wrath. ¶ From aboue hath he sent downe a spye into my bones and it burneth them cruelly: he hath laird a net for my fete and thowen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournyngge. The yoke of my transgressions is come in the last, with hys hade hath he taken it by, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I cannot quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the myghtye men, that were in me: he hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the no man to comfort her. The Lorde hath loosed the enemies rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become a desolation in the midst of them. * Dan. ix. 4. The Lorde is righteous, for I have provoked his countenance unto anger. Take heere all ye people, and comforte my heaviness. My iniquities and my poynt men are led away into captivitye.

I called for my louers (but they beggled me) for my priests and counsellors, but they perished: euen while they sought for meate, to save thes Ispies. * Conspire (O Lorde) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my heart turneth about in me, and I am full of heaviness because I rebelled stubbornly. He swearde hurte him withoute, & within I am like unto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that will comfort me. All mine enemies have heard of my trouble and are glad thereof, because thou hast done it and thou hast brought forth p tyme which I calledst, wher they also shall be like unto me.

For the shall come all their diversitie thou shalt plucke the awaye out as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wickednes. For my sorowe is very greates, & my heart is heuy.

A Las, howe hath the Lorde darckened the daughter of Syon so sore in hys wrath. As for y honour of Israel he hath sent it downe fro heauen unto y earth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembered not his owne * foretelle when he was angry? * Jer. lxxviii. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitationes of Jacob without any fauour: all y strong places of the daughter Iuda hath he broken in hys wrath, and throwen them downe to the grounde: her lyingdome and her pynnes hath he suspended. In the wrath of hys indignacion he hath broken alle the hornes of Israel: he hath wdrawen his right hande from the enemye: yea, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed y all rounde aboute. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye, he hath fastened hys right had as an arrowe: and euery thyng that was pleasant to se, he hath smytten it downe.

He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemye, he hath deuoured Israel and all hys palaces: yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled y daughter of Iuda with moche sorowe and heuynesse.

* Her tabernacle, which was lyke a garden of pleasure, hath he destroyed: her feyde lyke a feast hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the feyde feyde feastes and Sabbathes in Syon, are cleane forgotten. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the hynge and prestes to be defiled: * Jer. lxxviii. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

The Lorde hath forsaken hys owne altar, and hath abhorred his owne sanctuary, and hath geuen the wallis of the temple into the hands of the enemye. They enemies made a noise in the house of y Lorde, as it had bene in a solemne feaste daye.

The Lorde thought to breake downe the wallis of the daughter of Syon, he spied out his fyre, and drew not in hys hande, till he had destroyed them: Therefore mourn the turrettes and the broken wallis together.

Her gates are sonke downe to the ground, her barres are broken and smytten inonder, * her hynge & pynnes are caried awaye to the Gentylis. They haue neither lawe nor prophetes, nec yet eny vlyon fro the Lorde.

The senatours of the daughter of Syon sate upon the ground in silence: they haue throwed ashes upon thes beades, and gyved them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe thes beades to the ground.

Myne eyes begyne to faile me, & thowowe weeping, * my body is disquieted, my luer is poured vnder the earth, for y greates hurte of my people, for yenge the chylidren and babes vnder the stretes of the cite.

Euen when they lyne to thes mothers: where is meate and drynke: for whyle they so laye, they fell downe in the stretes of the cite, lyke as they had bene woibed, and some dyed in thes mothers bowome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter of Jerusalem, to whom shall I liken the? To whom shall I compare the? O daughter of Syon, to comforte the withall: The hurte is lyke a mayne see, who maye brale the?

* The prophetes haue looked out vpon me and tolde the thyngs for the, they haue not thowowed the of the wickednes, to kepe the fro captivitye: but haue overladen the, and thowowed fastned scatered the a bynde. All thet that go by the, clappe thei handes at the byssyng and wagginge thei beades vnder the daughter of Jerusalem, and saye: Is this the cite that men call so farye: wherein the whole lande reioyseth?

All thine enemies gaue vpon y: whysperinge and bytyng thei teeth, saying: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde and fene it. * The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng, that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuised longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine aduersaie triumphe ouer the, and set vpon the hornes of thine enemye. * Let thine herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou cite of the daughter of Syon: let thei reares runne downe lyke a ryuer dawe and nyght, rest not, and let not the aple of thine eye leane of. Stande vp and make the prayer in the fressh watch of the nyght, poure oute thine heart lyke water before the Lorde. I spit vpon thine handes, for the

the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuery of the Lord? Ponge and olde spe behynde the streets vpon the grounde, my mapdens and ponge men are slayne with the sword: whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yet, euen thou hast put them to death, & not comde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so in the daye of the Lord dye wyth none escaped, neither was eny left ryshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

Chapter.

In the mō, that (thowoe the rodd of mys wyth) haue experience of miser. He deuoe me forth, and led me: yet, into darckenesse, but not into lycht. Agaynst me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My fleische and my sypping hath he made olde, & my bones hath he brused. He hath brylled rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and trouaile. He hath left me in darckenesse, as they that be dead for euer.

He hath to hedged me in, that I cannot get out, and hath layed heuy lynes vpon me. Though I crye and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vpon my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

He layeth waite for me like a Beare, and as a lyon in a hole. He hath murthered my wayes, and brölle me in pces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent hys bowe, & made me as it were a march to shut at. The arrows of his quyncur hath he shot euen into my nyne eyes. * I am laughed to scoyne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath epi-led me with bitternes, and geuen me wormwood to dryncke. He hath smitten my teth in pces with stones, and rolled me in y dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. Wherein yet my miscrep and my trouble, the worm wood and the gall.

Yet, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule meketh a waye in me. Whye I consyde these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercies that we are not, vterly consumed. For tulpes hys ptefull compassion hath not craftel. He woe merces shall the Lord therew vpon the, eily, yet in the daye spyng, (O Lord) greates thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lord is my portyon, I saye my soule, therfore will I hope in hym. How good is the Lord vnto them, that put theys trust in hym, and to y soule that seeketh after hym. The good man with steynes and pa-ciance trieth, for the health of the Lord.

How good is it for a man, to take the pock vpon hym from his mouth vp. He speteth alone, he holdeth hym still, and dwelleth quietly by hym selfe. He laith hys face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be eny hope. He offeth hys cheke to the smyter, he will be content with repressions.

For the Lord will not forsake for euer, * but though he punyssh the hym: yet according to the multitude of his merces, he recraueth to grace agayne. For he doth not plage, & call out the children of men from his berte.

To craue all the pteousers of the earth vnder his fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the most hygh bet.

To condemne a man in hys cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in soche thynges.

What is he then that saith: there shalbe some thyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hygh self goeth not euill and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the luyane man: let him murmur at his a woe pynce.

* Let vs loke, well vpon our a woe wayes and remembre oure felices, and turne agayne to the Lord. Let vs lyfte vp oure bertes with oure handes vnto the Lord: that is in heauen. We haue bene discomblers, and haue offended, wyle thou therfore not be in-traced? Thou hast conuersed vs in thy wyth, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauoure. * Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, y oure prayer shuld not go thowoe. Thou hast made vs out castes, and to be despyed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gaue vpon vs.

Feare and pyte is come vpon vs, yet, de-ceyte and destruction. * Whole swerde of water gusheth oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

* Myne eyes runne, and cannot cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wilt thou loke downe from heauen, and consyde?

* Myne eye breaketh my herte: because of all the daughters of my cyte. Myne enemies hunted me out sharply, like a byrde, yet, and that without a cause. They haue put do wne my life into a pyte, & they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my head, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of y depe pyte. Thou hast bere my voyce: and hast not turned a waite thyne eares from my syghthyng and cryng. Thou hast enclined thy selfe vnto me. When I call upon the, and haste sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lord) hast mapntened the cause of my G Tonic, and hast redemed my lyfe. O Lord y hast sent my blasphemers, take thou my cause upon the. Thou hast well considered howe they go aboute to do me harme, & that all their counsels are agaynst me. Thou hast heard their despyetfull wordes (O Lord) yee, and all theyr ymaginacions agaynst me.

The types of myne enemies, and theyr demerits that they take agaynst me, all y daye lōge. Thou seyst also theyr syttinge downe, and theyr rylinge by: they make theyr fonges of nothyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lord) accordinge to the workes of theyr handes, Geue them an obstinate herte: curen theyr curse. Persecute them (O Lord) with thine indignacyon, and rote the out from vnder the heauen.

The booke of the Prophet Ezechiel.

¶ The fyfte Chapter.

¶ The tyme wherein Ezechiel propheted, and in what place. His vsynge, and aspre. The visyon of the four beastes. The visyon of the wheles. The visyon of the throne, and of the pynge about the throne.

In the fyfth daye of the fourth moneth, that I was among the pylconers by the ryuer of Ebro: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a visyon of God. Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of mynge Iosaphins captiuite. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the prest, in the lanbe of the Chaldea by the water of Ebro, * where the hande of the Lorde came vpon hym.

¶ And I looked, and beholde a storme wynde came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with hys gyftre lpghtened all rounde aboute. And in the inbush of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an angell, and as it were the lykenes of foure beastes, and thys was there lykenesse.

¶ They were fastioned lyke a man: saynyge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

¶ They legges were straight, but they fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they gyftred, as it had bene sayne scoured metall. Vnder they wynges, vpon all the foure corners they had mens handes. ¶ They faces and they wynges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they went, they turned them not aboute: but eche one went straight forward.

¶ The saydon and worche of the wheles was lyke fyre. The foure wheles were topned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forward, they wente all four, and turned the not about in they goynge. ¶ They were large greate and horrible to loke vpon. ¶ They backes were full of eyes rounde about them all four. When the beastes wente, the wheles wente also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vpon the earth, the wheles were lyft vpon also. Whither soeuer the sprete lyfte them, thither went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vpon, and folowed them: for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forth, soke theyll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheles also wente, soke theyll, and were lyfte vpon, for the verty of lyfe was in the wheles.

The Proheteye

Aboue, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a fymment, which was fapbonded as it had bene of the moft pure Chriftall, and that was fpyed out a bone vpon the? bea-des: vnder the fame fymment were the? wynges layed aboide, one towarde another and two wynges covered y body of eue-ry beaste. And when they wente forth, I be-arde the noyse of the? wynges, lyke y noyse of grente waters, as it had bene the voyce of the grate God, and a rufhyng together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they fode ftill, they let downe the? wynges.
Some when they fode ftill, and had letten downe the? wynges, it thounded in the fym-ment that was aboue the? heades. Aboue the fymment that was ouer the? heades, there was the faptyd of a feate, as it had bene

G made of Saphyre. vpon the feate there fette one lyke a ma. * I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes upwarde.

And beneath, when I looked vpon him vnder y loynes, me thought he was lyke a wynyng fyre, that gureth lycht on euery fyde.
Yee, the thyme and glyfte that lychtened rounde about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Eue so was the fimplytude, wherein the gloire of the Loide appeared. When I fawe it, I fell vpon my face, and hekened vnto the voyce of hym that fapke:

¶ The prophete is fente to call the people from Behold, thou sonne of man: I will lide the thou doft dwell amonge fcorpions: but feare not the? wordes, be not abashed at the? ylookes, for it is a frowarde boufholde.

So that thou fapke my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obftinate. Therefore, thou sonne of the, & be not thou fyneched, lyke as they are a fyneched boufholde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

was fent vnto me an hade, wherein was clofed a booke: and the hade opened it before me, and it was wyrtten within and without

¶ The iii. Chapter.

¶ The prophete drynge fede with the wyche of God and with the conftant bolowes of the fyre, is fent vnto the people that were in captiuite. The punyfhment of a curfew that curfew not the people theyr fyneure.

¶ After thys, fapd he vnto me: I thou sonne of man, eate that, what fower it be: yee: eate that booke, and go thy waye, and fapke vnto the chyldren of Ifrael: So I opened my mouth, ad he gaut me the booke for to eate, and fapd vnto me.
Thou sonne of man, thy bely thall eate, and thy bowels thall fylle with y booke, that I geue the. Then byd I eate the boke, & it was in my mouth fweete then honey. And he fapd vnto me: thou sonne of man, & yet y fooke vnto the houle of Ifrael, and fawe the the wordes, that I comaunde the for I fende the not to the people that hath a ftrange, viknowne, or hard fpeache, but vnto the houfe of Ifrael. Not to many nacyns, which haue dyurle fpeeches and harde languages, whofe wordes thou vnderftodeft not: Neuertheleffe, yf I fent the to thole people, they wolde folowe the. But the houfe of Ifrael will not folowe y, for they will not folowe me: yee, all the houfe of Ifrael haue fiffe foheades & harde hertes. * Beholde therefore, I will make thy face yzempile agaynst the faces, and harde thy fozehead agaynst the fozeheades: fo that thy fozeheade thall be harder then an * Adamant or yf fone ftone: that thou mayest feare them the leffe, and be leffe afayed of the, for they are a frowarde bou-fholde.

He fapd mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent heed with thyne eares, to the wordes that I fapke vnto the fatten them in thyne herte: and go to the prifoners of thy people, fapke vnto them, and fape on thys maner: Thus the Loide God hath fpoken: whether ye heare, or heare not, with that the fyre toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a grente rufhyng and remouyng of the moft blessed gloire of the Loide out of yys place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rufhed one agaynst another, ther, yet, and the eatinge of the wheles, that were by them, wherby eueryng and nople was verp greafe.

* Howe when the sperte toke me vp, and earyed me awaye, I wrote wyth an heup a sorrowfull mynde, but the harte of the Loze was comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the psoners, * that dwelt by the water of Eobar, & remayned in y place, where they were: And so continued I amonge them seuen dayes, beynge verp soze.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Loze sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchma vnto the house of Israell: therfore take good hede to the wordes of my mouthe, & geue the warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (wrythout doute) he must dye, and thou guesst hym not warnynge, nec speakest vnto hym, that he may turne from hys euell waye, and so to lue: Then shall I blame vngodly mā by in his awne vncyghteousnes: but hys bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hand. Auertheles, if thou geue warnynge vnto the wyched, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynnes: then shall he dye in his awne wychednesse, but thou hast discharged the soule.

Howe if a ryghteous man go from * his ryghteousnesse, and do the thynges yis euell: I will lape a stonbyng blocke before him, and he shall dye because thou hast not geuen hym warnynge: yee, but shall he in hys awne synne, so that the vertue, wherby he dyd before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande.

Auertheles, if thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, & so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lue, because he hath receaved thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came y harte of the Loze vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Sitte vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke wyth the.

So when I had rised vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the gloze of the Loze stode there, * lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Eobar.

* Then fell I downe vpon my face, & the Loze came in to me, wherby he me vp vpon my fete, & sayd thus vnto me: So thy waye, and spere the fell in thine house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chayne be broughte for the, so to bynde the wythall, so that thou shalt not scape out of them. And I will make thy tynge cleue to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme, & not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstinate houleholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth y Loze God: who so heareth, let hym heare: who so wyll not let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate houleholde.

C. The liij. Chapter.

The belege of the cite of Iherusalem in thynghys. The longe compassynge of the captiuitie of Israhel. An honde is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

Howe sonne of man: take a tyle lath, & lape it before the, and besetpe vpon it the cite of Iherusalem, howe it is beseged, howe bulwarthes and stronge wythes are grauen on euery syde of it: deshepe also tentes, and an hoode of men rounde aboute it, wyth engynes of warre.

Whoeuer, take an pson painne, and let it be twixte the and the cite, in the ende of an yss wall. Then let thy face toward it, belege it, and lape a commaunce agaynst it, so wythine it. Thys shalbe a token vnto the houle of Israhel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and lape the synne of the houle of Israhel vpon the. Certayne dayes appointed, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beate their synnes. * Auertheles, I will appoynte the a synne (to put off the synnes) & the nombre of the dayes: The hundred, & x. dayes must thou beate the wychednesse of the houle of Israhel. Wyl thou halt fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde. xi. dayes, and beate the synnes of the houle of Iuda.

* A daye for a pease, a daye (I saye) for a pease, wyl I cur lape vpon the. Therefore sit now thy face agaynst that beseged Iherusalem, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophespe agaynst it.

Beholde, I will lape thynne vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barley beanes, growell fce, Adimam and spyches: & put these together in a deshel, and make the loanes of bread therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou shalt lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for the hundred and x. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall be as a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twente spels euery daye. Thys appoynted meate shal thou eate dayly, so the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt bynche also a certayne measure of water: namely, the fyft parte of an hin shalt thou bynche dayly fro the begynnyng vnto the ende. Earlye eates shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fynd tolt them at a tyme made with mans doge, that they maye lete. And with that sayde the Loze: Euen thus shall the chyldre of Israhel eate their despyed bread in the myddes of the Gentyls, amonge whom I will leaue them.

Esay. Then

The prophete

When sayde I: O Lord God. Beholde my soule was yet neuer slayned: for from my pouth vp vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a deere carcase, or of that which was slayne of wyde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane fliche in my mouth.

Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: well than, I will graunte þe to take cowed donge for the donge of a ma, and to tolke the bread wth all besoye them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou count of man, & I will mynde all the promys of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shall wepe their hys: and eate it wth carenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a depe lytle measure therof, to drynke. And when they haue no more bread nor water, one shall be destroyed wth another, ad samplly a waye for eche wyche of the.

Chapter.

The rebuke of the heere, in which is signified the destruction of the people. The cause of the rebuke of God to warte the people.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a shepe hynde, namely, a ransome. Take that, and shawe the heere of thy head and beere: Then take the scales and the wayge, & deuyde the heere a lunder. And after thou hast accomplished þe dayes of the wege: burne the thynde parte therof in the fyre in the myddelt of the cyete, & cut the other thynde parte in peeces wth a hynde. & as for þe thynde parte I remayne, cast it in the wynde and I will dyaue out þe swerde after them.

* Ier. 18. b.

Yet afterwarde, take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curteley of it, and cast it in the myddelt of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there goon a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel.

When sayde I: O Lord God, thus sayde the Lord God: Thus sayde Ierusalem. I sett her in the myddelt of the heathen & nations that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyed my iudgements more then the Gentiles them selues, and boast my commaundementes more then þe nacyons, that lye rounde aboute her: for they haue cast out myne ordinances, and not watched in my lawes.

* Ier. 18. b.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As for so much as ye haue bene more augmented in nombre of people then the heathen, I dwell rounde aboute you: and ye haue not watched in my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinances, and ye haue not lpyed for gyft-wyllynes as the beethen that are rounde aboute you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I will also come vpon the, I my selfe I saye, for in the myddelt of the wyll I lye in indignyt, in the syght of the heathen, & will handle the of such a fashon, as I neuer wold before, and as I neuer wyl do from this tyme forth, and that because of all thynge abho-minacions. For in the, fathers & shall be sayne to eate their awne sonnes, and the sonnes their awne fathers. Such a coute wyl I kepe in the, and the whole remnant of the wyll I sette in to all the wyndes.

Wherefore, as truly as I lye (sayeth the Lord God) I sayng thou hast despyed my statutes, wth all maner of abhominacions: wth all thy shamefull offenses: for thy cause wyl I also destroye the. And yre eye shall not ouerle the, neither wyl I spare the.

One thynde parte wyl in the, shall be of the pestilence & of hunger: Another thynde parte shall be layne downe rounde aboute the wth þe swerde: The other thynde parte I remayne, wyl I sette aboarde towarde all the wyndes, and dyaue out the swerde after them. Thus I wyl perforce my indignacion, & set my wath agaynst them, and call my selfe. So that wth I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lord, which wyl a freuent gloriously haue spoken it. Moreover, I wyl make the wath and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwell aboute the, & in the syght of all them, that go by the: so that wth I punish the in my wath, in myne anger, & wth þe plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a galyng & woundinge stone, amonge the heathen that lye aboute the. And the Lord haue spokē it, and it shall come to passe, when I shute amonge them the yrlous darters of hunger, which shall be but death: yee, therefore shall I shute them, because I wyl destroye you: I wyl encrease hunger, and mynde shall the prouision of bread amonge you.

Blasphemy & misery wyl I sende you, yee, & wylde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedinge shall come vpon you, & the swerde wyl I bringe outt you. Euen I the Lord, haue sayde it.

The rebuke that the people shall playe for the synne of Idolatrie. The prophete the repentance of the sinners of the people, and they desire requite. The destruction of the rebuke in prophete.

Ad the worde of the Lord came vnto I me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophete vnto them, and saye: heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, wyl bynye a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyl cast downe youre altars, and breake downe youre pynges. aboute youre aulcers, and dwelling places.
The temples shalbe desolate, the synagogues laid waste: youre aulcers destroyed, & broken: youre goddes cast downe, and taken awaye, your temples layde euil with the grounde, your women moches cleane rated out.

Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. Those that be amonge you & haue escaped the sword, will I leaue amonge the gentiles, for I will scatter you amonge the nations. And they that escape of you, shall shinke vpon me amonge the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that whozeph and vnfaithfull heete of thes, wherewith they runne a waye frome, I will breake it: yee, & put out the eyes of thes, that committe fornicacyon with theyr Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased with thes felices, for the wickednes and abominacions, which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe. For I am the Lorde howe that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde spake, to bynge such misery vpon them.

The Lorde saye moreover vnto me: Simple thes handes together, and stampe with thys fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abomi-nacions and wickednes of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe with the sword, with hunger and with pestilence. Who so is fauer of, shall bye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perishe with the sword: and the other that remaine & is not besieged, shall bye of hunger.

Thus will I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when youre slayne men lye amonge youre Idols, and a-boute youre aulcers: vpon all the hylls and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all the chekes: eue in the places, where they dyd sacrifice to all theyr Idols.
I will stretch myne hande out vpon them, and will make the lande waste: so shall the lande be desolate and vopre, for the wickednes of thes. And I will saye forth, thozowe all theyr habitacions: to leaue thes: to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The viij. chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall be come. For cause of the destruction thes. For the is commandment of thes the summe of the curse that is at hande.

The woordes of the Lorde. Come vnto me on this manner: The Lord I call, O Sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lade of Israel: The ende cometh, vpon the lande of Israel pee, verely the ende cometh vpon all the four corners of the lade.
But now shall I sende come vpon thes: for I will sende my wrath vpon thes, & will punish thes: accordinge to the wayes, & rewar-de the after all thys abominacions. * The ende shall not ouerthe the, neither will I spare the: but rewarde the, accordinge to thy way-es, and declare thys abominacions. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after another.
The ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, that I have said: the ende is come all ready, thy destruction is crye come agayn the, & dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sebitis is harte by, & the crye shall not be as the soundinge agayne of the mountaynes. Therfore, I will hostly pour out my fure displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the.
I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recedpence the all thy abominacions.

Thys tyme shall not ouerthe the, neither will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, & thys abominacions shall be punished in the middes of the, to leaue you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. I saye: Beholde, the daye is here the daye is comme, & hour is rane out, the robbe shalberth, pyre wareth grene, malicious violence is growne vp, and the yngodly warre to a blast. None of thes shal remayne ouer, none of thes riches, not one of thes seide, and no lameta-cion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye:
* Who so byeth, lett him not reioyce: he that selleth, lett hym not be foy: for why. * Coupable shall come in the myddes of them: so the seller shall not come agayne to the thinge he solde, all though they lye be yet with lyuinge. For wher the prophete was predicted vnto all the people, none returned from ther synne, and noman toke strengthe to him agens his wickednesse, to make his awne lyfe. The trompettes shall be blowe, & iuanke you all ready, but noman shall goo to battell, for I am wroth with all the whole mu-litude.

The sword shall be without, pestilence & and hunger wythin: so that whoso is in the felde, shall be slayne with the sword: and he that is in the cite, shall perishe with hunger and pestilence.

And such as escape and he from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylls, lye as the do-uers in the felde: euery one shall be strayed, because of his awne wickednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, & all knees shall be wake as the water: they shall gyde them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon them. Theyr faces shall be confounded, * and theyr heades bald: theyr flyuer shall they cast forth in the strettes, & their golde shall be despyed. * Yee, theyr flyuer & golde maye not deliuer the, in the doye of the fear-full wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfie their hungry souls, neither fill their empty bellies therewith: for it is become their owne because they show their wickednes. And ther bewyfull collyre ornemente that God had ordeyned to be their great gloire, in it they haue sett by abominacions vnto their Idoles. For this cause will I make them and it to be abhoired. Moreover, I will geue it into the handes of the stranger to be to spoyle: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face will I turne fro them, my treasure shall be desied: for the thens shall go in to it, and suspende it. Make a cheyne, for the lande is whole desied weth vncyberous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the eyrie is full of violent oppresyon. Wherefore, I will bringe the most cruell tyrannutes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I will make the poynte of the proude to reasse, and ther sanctuare shall be desied. When thyrs trouble cometh, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One mylchefe and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumoure shall come after another. * Then shall they seke visyons in bayne of their prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the prestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the prynces shall be clothed with heuynesse, and the haddes of the people in the lade shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after theyr owne wayes, accordyng to their owne iudgements: will I iudge them: to leaue them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The viij. Chapter.

In apperance of the spirititude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Iherusalem in the spyre. The Lorde dwelleth in the spyre: the tholatries of the house of Israel, and the charite of the ydles.

IT happened, that in the fyrte yere of the fyrte daie of the fyrte moneth. I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the countell of Iuda with me: and the bande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. And as I looked vp, * I sawe as it were a licknesse of fyre from hys loynes downe warde, and feth hys loynes upwarde: it shyned inuiculus cleare a lyke an angell to loke vpon. * This spirititude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the heare of lockes of my head, and the spyre lyfte me vp betwixte heauē and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Iherusalem, into the entrie of pinner porte that lyeth toward the north: there stode an ymage, with whiche that hath all thynge in hys power, was wep wroth.

And beholde, the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen * as I had seene it afore in the feld. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, dyest vp thynne eyes, and loke toward the north. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes toward the north, and beholde:

besyde the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacyon in the very enteryng in. And he sayde further more vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, test thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abominacions that the house of Israel comete in thys place: to dyne me to my sanctuare? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt see greater abominacions. And wylt thou that brought me to the court gate: * when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in y wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, dygge thow the wall. And whē I dygged thow the wall, beholde, there was a bore. And he sayde vnto me: So thy waie in, and loke what wycked abominacions theyr do here. So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of womens & beastes, all Idoles and abominacions of the house of Israel painted eueri one rolde about the wall. * Ther stode also before the ymages. * Icy. Lordes of the countell of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Jaazanih the sonne of Saphan: And eueri one of the had a censoure in hys hāde, and out of the incense, there went a smoke, as it had bene a cleyde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, hast thou seene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, eueri one in hys chamber? * For they saye: Truly, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Tuene the yet agayne, and thou shalt see pet greater abominacions y they do. And wylt thou that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house, toward y north. And beholde, there int women mournyng for Chamus. Then sayde he vnto me: Hast thou seene this, thou sonne of man? Turne y aboute, and thou shalt see pet greater abominacions then these. And to be brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: and beholde at y porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the foz entrie ad the aulter, there were fyue and twety men, that turned their backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces toward y east, and these wo-shopped the fozme.

And he sayde vnto me: Hast thou seene this, thou sonne of man? * Epheneth the house of Iuda, that it is but a trifle, to do these abominacions here: Shulde they fill the lande full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee, and purpely to call vp theyr noyses vpon me. Therefore will I also do some thyng in my wrath full displeasure, so y myne eyes shall not ouerle the, neither wyl I spare them. * Yee, and though they cry in myne eares weth loud boye, yet wyl I not heare them.

The destruction of Iherusalem, and the conuersion of the Egyptians. Wher that which saith are marched. For that are dismembered are signs. A complaint of the prophet for the wickedness of the people.

Ezech also wrote a loud voice in myne eares, sayinge: Come, here ye rulers of the cyte, euery man with his weopened hande to the slaughter. Then came theye me out of the streete of the upper porte towarde the north, and euery man a weap in hys hande to y slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on hym a linnen rayment, & a wyrters pynchoyne by hys syde.

These wente in, & stode besyde the brasen altar: for the glory of the Loide was gone awaye from the Cherub which was upon him, & was come downe to the threholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment upon hym, and the wyrters pynchoyne by his syde, and the Loide sayde vnto hym: So thy wyrters thow we the cyte of Iherusalem, and set a marche vpon the foreheades of them, that moue and are soyr for all the abominacions, that be done therein. And to the other, he sayde that I myght heare: So goe after hym thow we the cyte, slaye, ouerleue none, spare none: hyl and destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren, and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marche vpon them: se that ye touch the not, & and be ymune at my sanctuary. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto the: When ye haue despoiled the temple, and fylled the courte with the layne, the go yow waye forth. So they wente out, & slewe downe thow we the cite. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, & yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & cryed, sayinge: O Loide, wilt thou then destroye all p resydue of Israel, in thy soyr displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Iherusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Iuda is verye greate: so y the lande is full of bloude, and the cite full of unfaithfulnesse: for they saye: * With the Loide regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therefore will I vndothem, myne eye shall not ouerle the, neither will I spare the, but will recompense theyr wickednesse vpon theyr heades. And behold, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters pynchoyne by hys syde: tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Loide as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

Of the man that toke the wheles burninge colles out of the wheles of the cherubyns in token of the burninge of Iherusalem. A reuerall of the wyrters of the wyrters, of the beades, and of the cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns there appeared the spirytwode of a kole of Saphyr vpon them: * Then sayde he that sat therein, to him that had the lynn rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne hande full of heate coales out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer syde. And he crepte in, that I myght se.

Nowe the Cherubyns stode vpo the ryght syde of the house. The man wente in, & the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the glory of the Loide remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloude, and the courte was full of the myne of the Loides glory. Per, and the folde of the cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore courte, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghty God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had byden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the heate coales from the myddell of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubyns: he wrote a stode besyde the wheles. Then y one Cherub reached forth hys hande from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the syde that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen rayment in his hande: which toke it, & went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lyckensse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so y by euery cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were: to loke vpon (after the fashion of the precious stonc of Charlysch: per (vnto the spght) they were all iij. of one fashyon, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all four together, not turnyng aboute in their goinge. But wher the spyt wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goinge. Their whole bodies, their backes, the yr handes & wynges, per, and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all four. And I hearde hym call the wheles. * Crepe one of the had y fower faces: so that the one face was the face of a cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, & they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the best, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe whil the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente with them, and when the Cherubyns toke theyr wynges to lyfte the selues vpwarde, y wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortly, when they stode, the wheles stode also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheles were lyft vp also with them, for the spyte of syde was in the wheles.

* Then the glory of the Loide was lyft vp up from the theholde of the temple, and remained upon the Cherubyns. And the Cherubyns flattered with the wings, and lyfte them liues up from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles wth them. And they stode at the east syde of the yowre that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lorde was upon the. Thus is the bras p^r I sawe under the God of Israel, by the water of Eobar. And I perceived, that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had foure faces, & euerie one foure wynges, and under the wings, as it were mens handes. Howe the figure of the faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Eobar, and so was the countenance of the. Every one in hys goinge wete stryght forwarde.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ And thus were that sene the people of Israel. And thus were the cherubyns. And thus were the wheels of the chariot. And thus were the four countenances. And thus were the four wheels. And thus were the four countenances. And thus were the four wheels. And thus were the four countenances.

After this, the spere of the Lorde lyfte me up, and brought me in to the East porte of the Lorders house. And behold, there were xij. men vnder the doore among wh^{ch} I sawe Jazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Sheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyn thyselfe, and a wycked counsell take they in thys cite, sayinge: truly, there is no defence at hand, let vs buyde houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesh. Therefore shalt thou prophespe vnto them, yee, prophespe shalt thou vnto them, O sonne of ma. And wth that fell the spere of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speak, thus sayeth the Lorde: On this man haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) & I knowe the ymaginacions of pouce heres. And now haue ye mustured in this cite, and spiled the stretes full of the slagge. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: The slagge men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cite, are the flesh, and thys cite is the cauldron: * But I will hyngge you out of it.

* ye. xlii. a. 3. mar. xlii. a. I haue feared the sword, & I will hyngge a sworde ouer you, sayeth the Lorde God. I will depue you out of thys cite and depue you into youre enemies hande, and will condemne you. Ye shalbe slagge in all the coastes of Israel. I will be auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thys cite shall not be youre cauldron, neither shall ye be flesh therein: but in the coastes of Israel will I punysh you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walched, ne kepte his lawes: * but haue done after p^r eu comes of the deathen, that ye coude abouste you.

¶ Howe when I preached, Sheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wth thou then utterest destroye all the remnant in Israel / And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on thys manner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynskfolke, & the whole house of Iuda, which dwell at Ierusalem, saye. Wythdawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lade is here in possession. Therefore tell the, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will sende you farre of amonge the Gentiles, and scattere you amonge the nacyns, & I will halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell the also, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will gather you agayne out of the nacyns, and hyngge you from the countreys where ye be scattered, and will geue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall comine together, And they shall take awaye all ther idols & all ther abhominacions from thence.

* And I will geue you one hert, and I will p^r a newe spere within your bowels. That stony herte will I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshy herte: that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaunces, and do them: ye maye be my people, & I your God. But loke whate heres are disposed to folowe the abhominacions and wycked lynges: those mens dedes will I hyngge vpon theyr awne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyft up theyr wynges, and the wheles wente with them, and the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of the Lorde wente up fro the myddell of the cite, and stode vpon the mount of the cite towards the east: * But the wynde toke me up, and in a visyon wyche came by the spere of God he brought me nagapnetu Caldea amonge the prisoners. ¶ Thence visyon that I had sene vanisshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had shewed me.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the bellie of the capitiue. The trostynge of the pacable, by which the badnes of heuge riches is revealed. Another parable by which the bellie of the capitiue is revealed.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, I sayinge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in the myddell of a frowarde house: * wyche haue eyes to se, and yet se not: rates haue eyes to heare, and yet heare not: for they are an obdurate house. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make theyr eeres to heere, and go forth by fayer daylyght, that they maye se. See, euen in theyr syghte shall thou go from thy place to another place: for peradventure they will confyde, & they be an vnobedient houtholde: & they were & I past made reddy to theyr wythall, that thou bearst out by fayne daye lycht that they maye seide thou thyr selfe shall go forth also at euyl in theyr syghte, as a man doth when he dyeth. wygge thou the wall, that they maye se a beate thorow it the same thyng, that thou shalt be in theyr syghte. In theyr syghte I shall I beare vpon thy shoulders, & carrye thee in the darcke. vpon thy face I shall not be the earth, for I haue made the new troken vnto the house of Israel. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the gentes & I had made ready brought I out by daye. At euyl I brake downe an hole thorow the wall wryth my hande: and when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in theyr syghte.

And in the morngynge, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, of Israel that forwarde houtholde as the the, and sape: what dost thou there? Then tell the: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Theyr punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am your thewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: fflyt shall ye also, and go into captivitye. * The chiefe that is amonge you, shall lade thes prisoners in the darcke, & get hym a waape. He shall breake downe the wall, to carrye skuffe therthorow: he shall couer his face, that he se not the grounde, with his eyes. * And I lyne wyl I spede out vpon hym, and catch him in my net, and carrye hym to Babylon, in the lade of Caldees: which he shall not se, and per shall he dye there. As for all thes helpers, & all thes holtes, that be about hym, I will scatter them towards all the wyndes, and drawe out a swearde after them. * So when I haue scattered them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the landes theyr shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

But, I will leaue a lytle noyse of them fro the swearde, hunger and pestilence: to tell all thes abhominacions amonge the heathen, where they come: & they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Afteroner, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayng: Thou sonne of man: wylth a fearfull tremblynge shall I pte thyr brab, wylth carefullnesse a forowe shall thou dypne the thy water. And vnto the people of the lade, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate your bread wylth sorowe, and dypne the power water wylth drynesse: Per, the lande wylth the fulnesse therof shall be layde waste, for the wychednesse of them that dwell there. And the cyties & now be well occupyd, shall be voyde, and the lade desolate: that ye may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Per came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayng: Thou sonne of man, what maner of bywordes is that, which ye vse in the lade of Israel, sayng: * Ugh, & I yenge that the dayes are so lache in commynge, all the dyspos are of none effecte: Tell them therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will make that byword to cease, so that it shall no more be commynly used in Israel.

But sape thes vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thyng which hath bene prophesied, shall be fulfilled. There shall no dyspos be in vayne, neither eny prophetic sayle amonge the chyldren of Israel: for it is I the Lorde, that speake it: and what I occur I the Lorde speake, it shall be performed, and not be lache in commynge.

Per, euery in your dayes, & ye forwarde houtholde shall I deuyse some thyng, and hyng it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And I worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayng: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayeth on thes maner: Ugh, so for dyspos that he hath sene, it will be manye dayes or it come to passe: It is farte of yet, the thyng that be prophesied. Therfore sape vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shall nomore be lache: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

O Israel, the pyphetes are lyke the fozes vpon the dyre felde: for they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an bege for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battell in the daye of the Lorde. Mayne thynges they se, and tell lyes, to * mayntaine their pyphes wylthall. The Lorde sape theyr hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Mayne dyspos haue ye sene, and spoken falsch pyphetes, wher ye sape: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

ynst the daughters of thy people, which pro-phete out of their aune heretes: and speake thou prophete agaynst the, and saye: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that some pylowes vnder all arme holes, ad bolsters vnder the heades both of ydge and olde.

* Jer. liii. a.
Jer. liii. b.

¶ Wo be vnto you, that some pylowes vnder all arme holes, ad bolsters vnder the heades both of ydge and olde, to catch soules with all. * For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in poure captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe, and disho-noure me to my people, for an adfull of bar-ly, and for a peece of bread: when ye sell the soules of the, that be not, and promysse lyfe to them, that lyue not: ¶ Thus ye dissemblye w my people, that beleuech your lyes.

¶ Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Be-holde, I will also vpon the pylowes, where with ye catch the soules in spenge: the wyll I take from yowre armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in spenge. Your bolsters also will I reare in yeres, and deliuer my people out of yowre hād: so that they shall come nomoze in yowre handes to be shoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. And that with your lyes ye discomfozte the ierte of the ryghteous, whom I haue not dis-fostered: Agayne: For so much * as ye coage the hande of the wyched, so that he maye not eueue from his wicked waye, and I saye: the foze shall ye spee out nomoze vantage, ne phropheye poure a wne gelynges: for I wyll de-liuer my people out of yowre hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

of þe Lorde vnto me, saye: ¶ Thou soune of mā, these men beare their vncleannes in theyr heretes, and go purpouly vpon the combyng blocke of theyr aune wychednesse: shulde I then answer at their request? ¶ Therefore speake vnto them, I saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Currey man of the house of Israel that beared bys vncle-anne. ¶ Idols in bys heret, purpoulyng to be comble in bys aune wychednesse, and commer to a prophet, to enquire eny thinge at me by him: vnto that mā wyll I the Lorde my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of bys Idols: that the house of Israel maye be shamed in their aune heretes, because they be cleue gone fro me, for their abhominaciō sakes.

¶ Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: ¶ Be conuerted, forsake your Idols, and turne your wyues from your spithpuesse, and turne your faces fro all your abhominaciōs. For euer man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger, & sojournech in Israel) whych departeth fro me, and carryeth Idols in bys heret, purpoulyng to go fly abblong in bys aune wychednesse, and commer to a prophet, for to aske counsell at me: thowz hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde geue answere, by myne aune selfe. I wyll set my face a-gaynst that man, and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yee, and a comen bywoide: and wyll eate him out of my people, that he maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

be tellyth hym a woide: then I the Lorde my selfe haue diseained that prophete, and wyll stretch forth myne hande vpon hym, to rote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punished for theyr wychednes.
Accordyng to the synne of hym that al-keth, shall the synne of the prophete be: ¶ that the house of Israel be led nomoze fro me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande shall synne agaynst me, & goeth forth in wickednesse: I will stretch out myne hande agaynst it, & I will destroye all the proudnes of their hyls, and I will breake downe upon them, to destroye man & beast in the lande. * And though Aioe, Daniel & Job, these three men were amonge them, yet shall they in their rpygationnes be deliuered but their awne soules, sayeth y Lord God. * If I bypynge noy some beastes into the lande, to waite it vp, & it be so desolate, that no man may go therein for beastes: yf these three men all were in the lande, as truly as I saye (sayeth y Lord God) they shall save neither sonnes ner daughters, but be onely deliuered their skynnes, and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

¶ Chap. xliij. Bypynge I swerde into the lade, & charge it to go thow the lade: so that I slape downe man & beast in it, & yf these three men were therein: As truly as I saye (sayeth y Lord God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ner daughters, but only be saved them skynnes. * If I sende a pestilence into the lande, & pouer out myn loye indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Aioe, Daniel & Job were therein: as truly as I saye (sayeth y Lord God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ner daughters, but save their awne soules in their rightuousnes. Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: * Much more when I sende my four troubleous plagis vpon Ierusalem: the swerde hunger, perious beastes & pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it. * Beholde they shall be a remanent saved therein, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and daughters. * Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their wape, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be comforted, as touching all the places that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se their wape and woekes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I dyd, sayeth the Lord God.

Chap. xliij.

¶ Chap. xliij. As the vnprescribable word of y hys tere is cast in to the fyre, so sayeth he that Ierusalem shall be rent.

¶ Chap. xliij. The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of the byne amonge all other trees? of the wynde byne stock amonge all other tymbre of the groane? * Women take wodd of it, to make any woerke with all: * Wymage there a mayle be made of it, to haue an thyngge vpon: * Beholde, it is cast in y fyre to be burnt, the fyre consume it both the ends of it. the myddel is burnt to ashes. * Is it meete then for any woerke? No.

¶ Chap. xliij. Hepringe then, that it was meete for no woerke, beinge whole: maye helpe maye there any thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed & burnt it. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Lyke as I cast y byne into y fyre for to be burnt, as other trees of y wodd: Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, & I set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall consume them. * The shall ye knowe, that I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst the, & make y lande waste: because they haue so ofte offended, sayeth the Lord God.

Chap. xliij.

¶ Chap. xliij. The prophete rebuketh y the abominacions of Ierusalem: both for the heresies of God towards it. Ierusalem is reproued of vnbeydenance, for her fornicacion with thome. He rebuketh the wickednes of other people in the destruction of the temple of Ierusalem. The end of the abominacions in to which the synners fell. He praye to prompeth to the repentant.

¶ Chap. xliij. Sayne, the worde of y Lord spake I vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, I haue the crite of Ierusalem in their abominacions, & saye: thus sayeth y Lord God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and kyned came out of the lade of Canaan: & thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Canaanite, thus was the maner of thy birth. In y daye of thy birth when thou wast borne, y stringe of thy nall was not cut of: y wast not bathed in water to cleane the cleane: Thou wast neither subbed w salt, ner swaddled in clowtes: No man regarded y so much, as to do any of these thinges for the, so to therue the sch favour, but y wast utterly cast out vpo y stryde, yer, despised wast y in y daye of thy birth. Then came I by the, and I sawe y troden downe in thine awne bloude, & sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be defyled in thine awne bloude, y euen I. I tell the: sayde vnto y lyue, although thou be defyled in thine awne bloude. * So I plucked y, as y blossom of the fylde: y art growe vp, & wast great: y halt gotten a maruelous pleasant denie, thy beastes are come vp, thy beare is goodly growe, where as y wast naked & bare afore.

¶ Chap. xliij. Howe when I went by the, & I looked vpo the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yee, cut the tyme to wowe the. Then I shed y my clothes ouer y, to couer thy dishonoure: yee, I made an othe vnto the, & I married my selfe with the (sayeth the Lord God) and so thou becomest myne awne. Then walked I with the water, and poured the bloude from the: I anointed the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raimentes, I made the thure of y eares lecher: I gyrded y about with white lyke I clothed the with kercheies, I decked the w costly apparell, I put rpynges vpon the spynners: a chaipie about the necke, spanglers vpon the foz hynde, & rny rpynges vpo thine eares, and se a be withall growne vpo thine head. * Thus wast thou decked with syluer & golde, & thy raiment was of fyne white sylke of noble woyle & of diuerse colours.

Thou bydest eate norfinge but spinnels, domy & oyle: maruelous goodly wast thou y beautifull, yee euen a very quene wast thou In so moch, that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the hepten, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, which I put vpo the sayeth the Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne awne beuty, & played the harlot, whē thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast comitted whozdomē, with all that wener by the, & hast fulfyllid their desyres: yee, thou hast taken thy garnitures of diuerse colours, & deckt thyne aultres therewith, where vpo I myghtest fulfyll thyne whozdomē, & of such a fashyō, as neuer was done, nre shalbe.
* Be goodly ornaments & Jewels which I gaue the of myne awne golde and syluer, halt thou taken, and made the mē's prynces therof, & commyted whozdomē withall.

Thy garnitures of diuerse colours hast thou taken, and deckt them therewith: myne oyle & incense hast thou set before them. My meate which I gaue the, as spinnels, oyle & hony: to fede the withall: that hast thou sett before them, for a sweete sauoure. And thus came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde God:
* Thou hast take thine awne sones & daugh ters, who thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vnto the, to be their meate. In this but a small whozdomē of thine: thinkest thou that thou shalst my chylidren, and geueit them ouer, to be lient vnto the: And yet in all thy abhominacions and whozdomē, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked & bare thou wast at thy myne, and troden downe in thine awne bloude. After all these thy wyked nesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

Thou hast bylyt hys places, yet at y hend of euery strete hast y bylyd y an aul ter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abho red, y hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, y multiplied thine whozdo me. * Thou hast committed fornicacyon w the Egyptians thy neyghbours, which had moch helde: and thus hast y increased thine whozdomē, to anger me.

Beholde, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer the, & dyd y minde the stoure of Iode, and deluyr the ouer in to the wyllēs of the phylidines thine enemies, which are ashar med of thy abhominable waye. * Thou hast played the whoze also with the Assyrian, be cause thou wast insatiable: yee, thou had y saye with the played the harlot, & yett had dest thou not enough. Thus hast y forther more comyted the fornicacyon fro the lan de of Canaan vnto the Caldees, & yett thy lust not satisfied. Howe abhimate is thine herte (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these woyles of an errant whoze, buyldinge thy houses at y hend of euery strete, & thy by dell houses in all places. Thou hast not bene as an other whoze, y holdeth some of a small rewards, but a wife y breatheth wellocke, & taketh other in strake of her byldinge. & yett are geuen to all other whozers, but y geueit rewards vnto all thy lours: & offered them gyftes, to come vnto y out of all places, & to comyte fornicacyō w the. It is come to passe w the in thy whozdomes contrary to the vse of other women: yee, there hath no such for nicacyon bene comitted after y, seynge that thou y offered gyftes vnto other, and no re wards is geuen the: this is a contrary thinge.

Therefore, heare the woide of the Lorde, Thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God:
For so moch as y hast sett forth thy pouthe to whozdomē, & discourred thy name, cho rowe thy whozdomē w all thy lours, and with all y holds of thy abhominacions in y bloude of thy chylidren, * who thou hast geueit them: Beholde therefore, I will gather toge ther all thy lours, vnto who thou hast ma de thy selfe comit: yee, and all them who thou sauourest, & euery one y thou hatest: I will (I saye) gather the toge ther rounde aboute the, and * will discouert thy name before the,
that they maye se all thy fylthyness.

Whozdome, I will iudge y as a byacher of wellocke and a murthrer, and recedence y thine awne bloude in wrath and gelousy.
I will geue y our in to their power, y shall bryake downe thy tūes, & be strete thy by dell houses: they shall strepe y out of thy clo thes, all thy fayre & beautifull Jewels shall they take fro y, & so let the spe naked & bare:
* yee: they shall bryng y some people vpo y, which shall stonē the, & laye y downe w their swardes. * They shall burne vpo thy hou ses, & puny the in y sight of many women.
Thus will I make thy whozdomē to cease, so y thou shalt geue out no more rewards.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousy from the, be content, & no more to be displeased? seynge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges: Beholde therefore I will bryng thine awne wayes vpo thy ne deade, sayeth the Lorde God: howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordinge to thy wi chednesse & all thy abhominacions. Behol de, all they that be comen prouered, shall vse thus prouerbe also agaynst the: soche a mother, soch a daughter.

Thou art euil thy mothers awne daugh ter, y hath cast of thy husband & thy chyl idren: yee, thou art the spyte of thy lyters, which forsoke their husbands & their chyl idren. * Your mother is a chetye, & your father an Assyrie. Thyne eldest syter is Samarita, she and her daughters that dwell

upon thy left hande.

¶ But thy ponger spker that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodom a her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abhominacions: but þu doest a lytell very small tyme, and in all thy wayes þu hast bene moze corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth þu Loide God: Sodom a thy spker to her daughters, hath not done so euell, as þu and thy daughters. Beholde, * the spynes of the spker Sodom were these: þayde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce & ydelnesse: these thynges had he & his daughters. Wherfor þu, they reached not their hande to the poore and neyþ, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges befoze me: therfoze I toke them a waye, as I pleased me. After þu hast Samaria done half of thy spynes, & see, thou hast exceded them in wickednesse. In so moch that in comparyson of all þu abhominacions which þu hast done, þu hast made thy spylers good women. Therfoze thou, which dydest condempne thy spylers beate thynne a wone thame, for thynne awne offences, that þu hast committed, inoze abhominable then they dyd, which in drad armez rpghteous, then þart, be thou. (I se) ashamed, and beate thy shamefull rebuke, scynge þu hast proued thy spylers in coparyson of the rpghtewyl.

¶ As for their captiuite, namely þu captiuite of Sodom, & her daughters: þu captiuite of Samaria & her daughters: I will bringe the agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuite amonge them: þu mayest take thynne awne cōsolation vpon þu, & be ashamed of all þu hast done, & to cōfote them. Thus thy spylers (namely) Sodom a her daughters: Samaria and her daughters, w thy selfe, & thy daughters, shall be brought agayne to poure olde estate. When þu walk in thy pryde, & befoze thy wickednesse came to lyght: thou woldest not heare speake of thy spylers Sodom, but wilt the tynic þu the Syrians with all their to wnes, & the Philistines with all that lyer rounde aboute the, brought to the shame & confusyon: þu myghtest beate thynne awne thynges & abhominacions, sayeth þu Loide.

¶ As thus sayeth the Loide God: I thulde (by right) beate with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyed the oth, and broken the couenaunt. Recurrethelke, I will remembre þu couenaunt that I made with the in thy yowth in so moch that it shall be an euill thinge couenaunt: so that þu also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shall thou recorne of me thy pryncer & ponger spylers, who I wyl make thy daughters, and that beþe thy couenaunt. * And so will I recorne my couenaunt with þu, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Loide: that thou mayest thinke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thynne awne confusyon nomoze: when I haue forgotten the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Loide God.

¶ The parable of the two Agles.

¶ The worde of þu Loide came vnto me, & sayinge: Thou sonne of man: put forth * a barche & spakhunge and a parable, vnto þu house of Israel, a sape: Thus sayeth þu Loide God: There came a great * Agle to geate wynges, yee, with a myghte longe bodye, & full of fethers of dyuerse coloures, vpo the mount of Libanus, & toke the hysle brynch fro a Cedie tree, & brake of þu toppe of his wyngge, & carped it into þlade of Canaan, & set it in a cyte of marchanters. he toke also of the leade of the lande, & planted it in a frutfull grounde, he brought it vnto geate waters, and set it as a wyllowe tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a geate bynestocke, but lowe by the grounde whose brynches turned in to it selfe, & protes of it, were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a byne, and it brought forth blossom, & spred out brynches. But there was another Agle, a great one, which had geate wynges & many fethers: and beholde, þu rootes of this byne had an hūger after him, & spred out his brynches towarde him, þu myghte wance her with the orchepd þu he had planted. Recurrethelke, it was planted vpo a good ground beþe geate waters: so þu by reason it shulde haue brought out brynches & frute, & haue bene a goodly byne. Spake þu therfoze, thus sayeth þu Loide God: Shall this byne prosper? Shall not his rootes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his greene brynches, wither & fade a waye: yee, without erber stronge arme of many people, shall it be plucked vpo by protes. Beholde, it was plantid: shall it prosper therfoze? Shall it not be dryed vpo withered, yee, euen in þu duntinge out of his blossom, as soone as þu cast wyde boweth?

¶ Agreuer, þu worde of þu Loide came vnto me sayinge: Spake to þu towarde householde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do signifye? Tell the: Beholde, þu þynge of Babylon came to Ierusalem, & toke þu kyng and his wynges, and ledde them to Babylon.

he toke of the kynges seide, and made a cōuenant wylþ hym, and toke an othe of him: The wynges of the lande toke her with him also, that the lande myght be holden in subsecpon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the cōuenant, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, & sent his Embassytors into Egypt þu myght haue hostes and moche people. Shallde that prosper? Shallde he be kept safe, that doth such thynges? Quide he escape, that breaketh hys cōuenant? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Loide God: he shall dye at Babylon, in the place where he kyng dwelleth, I made hym kyng: whose oth he hath despyed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with his greatesse multitude of people, maynteyne him in the warre: when they call vpon dyces, and set vpon him to destroye other people. For seynge he hath despyed so other, and broken the couenaunt (whereas he put gaue his hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

If Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, I will bringe myne other vpon him despyed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his awne head. * I will cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my pame. * To Babylon will I carie him, thre will I punishe him, because of the greatesse of the sinne that he made me. As for those that he fram him out of the hood, they shall layne with the swerde. * The resydue shall be scattered towarde all the wyndes. and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

G Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will also take a brynche from an hye Cedre tree, and will set it, & take yf vppermost twygge, & yet it will stande, and plant it vpon an hye hyll. Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon will I plante it: so it maye bringe forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so þat all manner of foules maye bylde in it, & make their nestes vnder þe shadow of his brynches.

And all the trees of the feilde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe þe hye tree, and set the lower tree vpon: þe hye tree dyed vpon the greute tree, and made the dye tree to flourish. * Such I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ The thirde thyng that every man shall haue his awne synne. To him that is amended, is saluacion promysed. Wherby is prophesied to the rightwell, which turneth backe into the right waye.

If The wordes of y^e Lorde came into me, on this manner: what meane ye by this comen prouerbe, ye vse in the labe of Israel. (sayinge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & þe chyldrens teth are set on edge: As truly as I lyue, sayeth y^e Lorde God, ye shall vse this by wordes nomore in Israel.

Scholdre: all sonles are myne. Lyke as y^e father is myne, so is y^e sonne myne also. * The soule þe synner, shall dye. * If a man be godly, & do the thinges þe is equal and right, he eateth not vpon the bylles: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth wth no menfuous woman: he greueth no bohyr: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne, he taketh none of her mans good by violence: * he parteth his mete wth the hongry: he closeth the naked: * he lendeth nothinge vpon vsury: he taketh nothinge ouer: he wythdraweth his hande from doynge wronge: he dealeth faithfully betwixte man & man: & walketh in my commaundementes, and keepeth my lawes, & performeth the faithfully: * This is a rightuous man, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

If he now gett a sonne, that is a much better, a sheder of bloud: yf he do one of these thynges * (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the bylles: he despyeth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore: & nedr: he robbeth a spowlyer: he geueth not y^e detter his pledge agayne, he lyseth vpon his eyes into Abols, & meyleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh more ouer. * Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloude shall vpon him.

Nowe yf this man gett a sonne also, that keepeth all his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doch forþ lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the most paynes: he lyseth not his eyes vpon y^e Abols of Israel: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he dealeth no mā: he keepeth no mans pledge: he neether spowlyer, ner robbeth any mā: he dealeth his meate wth the hōgre: he closeth y^e naked: he oppelleth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, ner any thyng ouer: he keepeth my lawes, & walketh in my commaundementes, * This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. * As for his father: because he oppressed a spowlyer bys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is dedd in his awne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shalbe not this sone beare his fathers synne? * Therefore: because y^e sonne hath done equyte & right, hath kepte all my commaundementes, & done them: therefore shall he lyue in dede. * The same soule that synneth, shall dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nether shall the father beare y^e sonnes offence. * The right oulnes of y^e rightuous shall be vpon him, & the wickednes of y^e wicked shall be vpon him (if also). * But yf vngodly wyll turne awaye fro all his synnes þe he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thinge þe is equal and right: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. * As for all his synnes þe he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his righteoulnes þe he hath done, & he shall lyue. * For haue I any pleasure in y^e death of a synner, sayeth y^e Lord God, but rather y^e he shuerre, and lyue.

Agayne: yf y^e rightuous turne awaye fro his rightuousnes, and do iniquyte, & accorde to all y^e abhominacions, & y^e wicked mā doth: shall he lyue? * All the rightuousnes þe he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in y^e faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye. * And yet ye saye: Truly y^e wyse of y^e Lord is not indifferente. * Wherefore ye poule of o. * This is not my wyse right: * Wherfore

Then came the heathen together on euery syde oute of all countrees agaynst hym, layed the nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pyttre. * So they bound him with chaynes, and brought him to the kyng of Babylon: which put him in prison, that his voyce shoulde no more be heard upon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloude, planted by the water syde: her frutes and banches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so ströge, that me might haue made staves therof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceeded the height a multitude of her banches, she was rotyd out in displeasure, and cast downe to the ground. The East wynde dyed by her feure, her stronge stalkes were broke of, withered and bent in the fyre. But now she is placed in the wylderneesse, in a drye & thurste ground. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath bent by her banches and her feure: so that the hard no bröge stalkes, to be staves for officers, this is a piteous and miserable thinge.

In the viij. yeare the x. daye of the 4. month, it happened, I receayned of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, & sat them downe by me.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me on this manner: Thou soune of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Are ye come hyther to aske any thinge at me? As truly as I live (sayeth the Lorde) I will geue you no answer. Wilt ye not reprove the (that soune of man) wilt thou not reprove them? Shew them the abhominacions of their fore fathers, & tell them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and left by myne hande vpon the side of the house of Jacob, & I wewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: yee, when I sette by myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye I left by myne hande ouer the, to bringe them out of the lande of Egypte, into a lande I had promised for the, which floweth with mylke & honny, & is a pleasant lande amonge all other. Then sayde I vnto them: * Cast awaye euery man the abhominacions that he hath before him, and desyre not your felicitie with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and wolde not followe me: to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of his ydes, and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to pour myne indignacion ouer them, so to satisfie my wrath vpon them: yee, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shoulde not be vnglorious before y brethren, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I wewed my selfe vnto them. * I wolde byrninge them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe whi I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wylderneesse: I gaue them them my commandmentes, & shewed them my lawes, * which whoso keepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy daies, to be a token betwixt me & them, & thereby to knowe, that I am the Lorde, which balowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in y^e wyldernesse, they wolde not walke in my commandmentes, they haue cast away my lawes (which whoso keepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth daies haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignacion vpon the, & to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the which I had carryed them away. But I tooke vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I wolde not brynge them in to the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and honny, & is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walched not in my commandmentes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their ydoles. Nevertheless, myne eye spared them, so I wolde not utterly slaye the, and consume them in the wyldernesse. Wherefore, I saye vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of y^e yowre fowre fathers, kepenot their ordinaunces, and despye not yowr felues with their ydoles, for I am the Lorde yowre God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbothes: for they are a token betwixt me & you, y^e ye maye knowe howe I am the Lorde yowre God. Not withstandinge, their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walched not in my statutes they kepte not my lawes to fullfill the (which he I both shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth daies. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, & to katefye my wrath vnto the in the wyldernesse. Nevertheless, I wythdrew my hate for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the heathen, before whos I had broughte the forth. I yfte vpon myne hande ouer the also in the wyldernesse, I I wolde keate them amonge the heathen, & strowe them amonge the nacions, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commandmentes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and yfte vpon their eyes to their fathers ydoles. Wherefore I gaue the also commandmentes not good, & lawes thowse the whych they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed the in their atone giftes: * wher I appointed for my selfe all their fyrr bozme, to make the desolate: y^e they myght knowe, howe I am the Lorde: Therefore (O thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God) Belyde all thys, yowre fowre fathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to geue the, when they saue euery ype hill & all the thicke trees: they made there their offeringes, & yuoked me with their oblacions, makinge swete sauours there, and pouered out their brynchofferinges. Then I asked the what is y^e hill altare y^e go to it? And therfore is it called y^e ype place vnto this daye. Wherefore, I speake vnto y^e house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vncleins as yowre fowre fathers & commytte whodome also with their abhominacions. In all yowre ydoles, where vnto ye brynge yowr oblacions, & and to whose honoure ye burne yowre chyldren: ye, despye yowr felues, euen vnto this daye: howe haue ye in the come, and aske any quell vpon at me? O ye house of Israel: As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God) ye get no answer of me: and as for the thynge that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we will be as the heathen, & do as other people in the lande, woe and stone will we worshyppe.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I myselfe will cule you by a mighty ype hande, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacion pouered out ouer you: and will brynge you out of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are scatred, and gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme & with indignacion pouered out vpon you: and will brynge you in to the wyldernesse of the people, & there I will reason with you face to face. Lyke as I punished yowre fowre fathers in the wyldernesse, so will I punyssh you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I will brynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder y^e bonde of the couenunt. The forerhers also and the transgressours will I take from amonge you, & brynge them out of the lande of yowre habitacon: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in to it: y^e ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

So to nowe then, sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel: * Cherpe one of you folowe yowr ydoles, and seue them spryng pererful to obeye me. And my holy name shall ye nomey vnhalowe with yowr offeringes and ydoles. For vpon my holy hill, euen vnto the ype hill of Israel sayeth y^e Lorde God, shall all the house of Israel and all that is in the labe, worshyppe me: & and in the same place will I sauaure the, and there will I requize yowr seane offeringes and the fryllynges of yowr oblacions, with all yowre holy thynge.

I will accepte yowre sweete sauour, wher I brynge you from the nacions, and gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye are scatred: that I maye be halowed in yow before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that that I am the Lord, which have brought you into the land of Israel: yee, into the same land, that I swore to give unto your forefathers. Where shall ye call to remembrance your wives & all your iniquities, when ye have bene despoiled: * and ye shall judge your felices wothp to be destroyed, for all your wickedness, ye have done. And ye shall knowe, & I am y Lord: wch I entreate you after my name, not after your wicked wapes, nor according to your corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel, sayeth y Lord. Wherefore, the worde of the Lord came unto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saye to the wod toward the south: Heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will laynde a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quench his flame, but all that loke th from the south to the north, shall bren therein: & all fleshe shall fe, that y the Lord have kyndled it, so that no man maye quench it. Then sayde I: O Lord, they will saye of me: * Euen, they are but fables, that he telleth.

Chapter xxi.

Wherefore the word of y Lord came unto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saye to the wod toward the south: Heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will laynde a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quench his flame, but all that loke th from the south to the north, shall bren therein: & all fleshe shall fe, that y the Lord have kyndled it, so that no man maye quench it. Then sayde I: O Lord, they will saye of me: * Euen, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The worde of y Lord came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward Jerusalem, & speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesye agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to y lds of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I will upon the, & will drawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghtynesse & the wychednesse then y I will rote out of y both the ryghtynesse & the wychednesse, therefore shall my swearde goe out of his sheath agaynst all fleshe fro y north to y south: all fleshe maye knowe howe y the Lord have drawe my swearde out of y sheath, & it shall not be put in againe.

Wherefore (sayeth y Lord sonne of mā) y thy lynes cracke withall, ye mourne bitterly for thel their percell. And yf they saye, wherefore mourneest thou? Then tell the: for the adpynges that cometh, at the whychall heres shall meile, all handes shall be lessen downe, all stomakes shall faunte, & all lynes shall waere feble. Beholde, it cometh & shall be fullylde, sayeth the Lord God.

Againye, the worde of the Lord came unto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, prophesye, and heale. Thus sayeth the Lord God: speake. The swearde, the swearde is wherewith I will scownde. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & I scownde that it maye be hyght. It shall weeten make my people, I gylt y crye.

of my sonne: it is gone forth the destructione all trees. Ye hath putt his swearde to the dyching, & I good holde maye be taken of it. The swearde is sharpened & hyght, that it maye be gotten in to the hande of the man slayer.

Euen y thou sonne of mā, & howe, for this swearde shall smyte my people, & all the cultres in Israel: my people shall be feared & thowse this swearde. Smite the face thou wothp thy gyde, for it is gone forth to make a repall. And what a repall shall be, wch eue my scypter shall be rephoude: y shall not be superi the Lord God. Prophecy y sonne of mā, & smyte thyme habes together: make the swearde two edged, ye make it the edged, that man slayer swearde, y swearde of the greete slaughter, wlych shall smyte the: euen in their ptephambies: to make them abashed & fayne at the heres, & in all gades to make some of them fall. I have geul that fearfull swearde. Whome byght and thape is it, howe well byght & mete for the slaughter. Set the same place alone, ether vnd the ryght hande or on the lefte, whither so eue thy face turneth. I will smyte my habes together also & set fyre my wothfull indignation: Euen y the Lord haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, make y two lictres, y the swearde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Both thes lictres shall goe out of one kynges lade. And chole y place, at the heade of the strete chole out a corner. Make y a strete, y the swearde maye come to warde Babath of the Ammonites, & to the stronger ctye of Jerusalem. For the kyng of Babylon shall combe in the turnynge of the wape, at the head of the two lictres: * to aske colicell at the sothe sayers, castinge the lottes w his arrowes, to aske counsell in the Idols, and to loke in the lyner. But yf the sayinge shall popte to y ryght lye vpo Jerusalem, y he maye see men of warre, to smyte it w a greute noyse, to crye out Alarim, to lere batell rammes agaynst the gates, to graue by dyches, & to make bulwarkes.

And euen thes, as for the sothe sayinge, they shall holde it but for wante. And euen thes as those to whome they haue often sworne. For withstandinge he shall remembre theis wychednesse, so that by ryght they must be taken & wounne. Therefore sayeth the Lord God. For so much as ye poure felices thewe your offence, and haue opened youre wickednesse, so that in all your workes men maye fe your tymes: therefore as ye come to remembrance, and ye shall be taken by violence.

Thou shamefull wyched gyde of Israel whole daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lord God: take a wape the gawand, & put of the crowne, and so is it a wape: the humble

Chapter.

Discouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, & sayde: thou sonne of man, write thou not rouse thy bloude: thus saye they: She woe them their abominacions, and tell them: Thus I saye the Lorde God: O thou cpte, that dwellest bloudy in the myddell of it, that the tyme maye come also: & makest the Idoles to defyle the wythall. Thou hast made thy selfe greyley, in thy bloude & thou hast shed: and defyled the in the Idoles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dapes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy peeres to come. Therefore will I make the to be confounded amonge the heathen, & to be defyled in all the lades, whether they be nye of farre from the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so loue a name, & art full of myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man hys power, to shed bloude in the. * In the haue they defyled father & mother, in they haue they oppressed the stranger, in the haue they defyled the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast defyled my Sanctuary, and vnhallowed my Sabbath. Hurters are there in the, that shed bloude, & eat vpon the hylls, and in the they vse abominacyon.

In they haue they discovered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed women in their sicknesse. Euery man hath deale shamefully with his neighbours wyfe, & abominably defyled hys daughter in me. In the hath euery man forced his awne sister, euery his fathers daughter: yee, & gyftes haue bene receaued in the, to the bloude: * Thou hast taken vniuers and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcyon, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I haue synnen my handes vpon thy counteneyce, that thou hast shed, and vpon the bloude whiche hath bene shed in the. In the here able to endure it, & may thy handes defende the synners, in the tyme & I shall byynge vpon the: Euen I the Lorde that speake it, will byynge it also to passe. * I will scatter the amonge the heathen, & strowe the aboute in the landes, & will cause thy synnes to cease out of the: yee, and thou shalt be thyne awne euertenance & not myne in the syght of the heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to dyssol. All they shall be as synners, tyme, yon, & leat & synners they become dyssol. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so moche as ye all are turned in to dyssol, beholde: I will byynge you together vnto Iherusalem, lyke an synner, as synners, tyme and leade are yne together in the furnace, and the fyre blowe them vnder to melt them. Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath & indignacyon. I will byynge you together, and handle the fyre of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therein.

Like as the synner is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therein: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lorde haue powered my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vncleane lande, which is not rayned vpon in the dape of thy cruel wrath: the prophets that are in the, are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roat ynge Lychon, synner by his power. They receiue riches and good, & make many wydowes in the. They pressen bakers my lawe, and defyle my Sanctuary. * They put no difference betwene the holpe & vnholpe, neither discern betwene the cleane & vncleane: they turne their eyes from my Sabbathes, & I am vnhallowed amonge them. They rulers in the are lyke a roat ynge wolues, to shed bloude, and to destroye soules, for their awne counteneyce. * As for the prophets, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vniuers, and prophesie lies vnto the, sayinge: the Lorde God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken. ¶ The xxiiij. Chapter.

¶ Of the destruction that is to come, of the Adolaters of Samaria and Ierusalem, vnder the name of whor-ers & wholiba. In comparison of Samaria be Ieru-salem: & Ierusalem is a whorser, & the destruction of Ierusalem is prophesied. The abuse of both the whorers is foune out. Wher destruction.

The voyce of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of mā, the re were two women: y had one mother. These (whē they were yonge) beganne to playe & harlottes in Egypt. There were they: brekes broked, & pappes of they: maydenhead did & Egyptians bestrope. The eldest of them was called Wholab & her yonger syster Wholiba.
These two were my wyues, & bare sonnes & daughters. Theye names were Samaria, & Ierusalem: Wholiba was Ierusalem, & Wholab was Samaria. Wholiba beganne to go a who-ring, whē I had taken her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers & Aſſirians & her neighbouris which had to do w her: euen & princes & lordes & were deckt i colly araye fayre ponge men, lusty ryders of hores.

¶ Thus sheweth her whordome, the cleued vnto all the yonge men of Aſſiria. Yee, she was made vpon the, & defyled her selfe w all theye Idols. Neither recalled she fro & fornication, & she vied w the Egypciens: for in her youth she laye w her: theye broked the brekes of her maydenhead, & poured theye whordome vpon her. Wherfore, * I despised her: so the handes of her louers, eue the Aſſirians, whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, & take her sonnes & daughters, & sette her w & sword: An euil name gat she of all people, and theye punished her.
¶ Her syster Wholiba sawe this, and destrope her selfe w inordinate loue, more then she, & exceeded her syster in whordome ¶ she loued & Aſſirians (which also laye w her) namely, & princes & greates lordes, & were clothed w al manner of gorgeous apparell all lusty hofme & fayre ponge perfonnes.

¶ Then I sawe, that theye both were despy-ced a lyke. But the Ieraled Ipl i whordo-me, for when she sawe me paynted vpon the wall, & yingges of the Caldees sett forth w fresch countenances, w fayre gyddes about the & goodly bonettes vpon theye heades, loayn-ge all yke pynted (after the manner of the Babyloniens & Caldees in theye a wne lande) where theye be hoine) immediately, as soone as she sawe the, she bent in loue vpon them, and sente messengers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babyloniens came to her, theye laye with her and despyled her with theye whordome, and so was, the polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from the, * her whordome and shame was discovered and sente: then my petre forsoke her, lyke as my bette was gone from her syster also. Neuertheless, she vied her whor-dome euer the longer the more, and remembered the dayes of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot i the lande of Egypt. * She brent in lust vpon them, whose fleche was lyke the flech of Aſſes, and theye fede lyke the fede of hores. Thus thou hast reuered fynfullnes of the youth, when thy louers broked thy pappes, and married thy brekes in Egypte.

¶ Therefore (O Wholiba) thus sayeth the Lord God: I will raple vp thy louers (w whom thou hast satyrfyed thy lust) againt the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely the Babyloniens, and all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye me & tyrautes, w all the Aſſirians: all yonge & fayre louers: princes and lordes, knyghtes and generales, which be all good hofme. These shall come vpon the with hoies, charrettes, and a greates multitude of people: which shal be harnessed aboute the on euery syde, w brekplates, hylbes & helmettes. I will punish the before them, yee, theye them selues shall puny the, accordinge to thei a wne iud-gement. I will put my gelyous vpon the, so that theye shal deale cruelly with the. Theye shall cut of thy nose and thyme eares, and the remnant shall fall shew the sweate.
Theye shall carry awaye thy sonnes and daughters, and the residue shal be bent in the fyre. Theye shall strepe the out of thy clothes, and carry thy colly Ierusalem awaye with them.

¶ Thus sayeth I make an ende of thy splthynesse and whordome, which thou hast brought oute of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalt turne thyme eyes nomore after them, and cast thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth I, I orde beholde I will deliuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest, yee, euen into the han-des of them, with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust, wherewith shal deale cruelly with the. All thy labourer shall theye take with them, and leane the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthye whordome shall come to lyght. All these thynges shall happē vnto the, because of thy whordome which thou hast vied amonge the Gentyles with whole Idols whom thou hast despyled thy self. Thou hast walched in the waye of thy syster, therefore wilt I geue & her cap-pe in thy hande.

the Lord came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take a waue of pleasure of thyne eyes vnto a plague: yet shalt thou neither mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy cheere therfore: I mayest mourne by thy self alone, but wile no deadly lamentaciō. Holde on thy benet, and put on thy shoes vpo thy feete, couer not thy face, & eat no mourners bread. And I spake vnto þ people by times in þ mourning, & at euē my wyfe dyed: then vpo þ next morowe, I dyd as I was commaunded. And þ people sayd vnto me, wilt þ not tell vs what this signifieth toward vs, for this þ doest for our sake. I answered them, þ woide of þ Lord came vnto me sayng: Tell þ house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God: beholde, I will suspende my sanctuary: euen the glory of your power, þ pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorow the sword.

As þe as I haue done, so shall ye do also: ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpo your heades, & shoes vpo your feete. þ shall neither mourne nor wepe, but, i your synnes ye shall be forodfull, & one replete with another. Thus Ezechiel is poue shew token. For loke as he hath done, so (whē this cometh) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, þ I am þ Lord God. But beholde, Thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr ioye & honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr lyses: namely, theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto þ, for to shew this. In þ daye shall thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, þ thou mayest speake, and be no more dōm. Yee, and thou shalt be chey: shew troth that they maye knowe, howe that I am þ Lord.

¶ The xxv. Chapter.

¶ The woide of the Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which were of the salt of Jerusalem. Agard moab and syer, Agard Jherusa, Agard the dygryptus.

The woide of the Lord came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the Ammonytes, prophete vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the woide of þ Lord God. Thus saith þ Lord God: For so much as thou speakest ouer my sanctuary, I ha, I trowe it be no more suspended: & ouer the land of Israel, I trowe it be now desolat, yee, & ouer þ house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led a waue yfsoners. Behold, I will deliuer the to the people of þ east: þ they maye haue þ in possession: thele shall let theyr cattle and houses in the. They shall eate thy feute, & dygnke vpon thy milke. As for Ra-bath, I will make of it a hal for camels, & of Ammon a shepfold: and þe shall knowe that I am the Lord.

For thus saith þ Lord God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, & stamped with thy feete, yee, reioysed i thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despit: beholde, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer the also, & deliuer the, to be yfpled of the heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people, and cause the to be destroyed ouer of all landes: yee, I will make the to be laped with, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lord.

Thus saith the Lord God: For so much as þ Moab & Seir do saye: As for þ poule of Iuda, it is but yhe as all other Cyties be: Therfore beholde, I will open þ syde of Moab, & take a waue theyr strength, theyr cyties & cheste coastes of theyr lāde, which are þ pleasures of þ cōtre. As namely, Berthe simoth, Basaimon & Coriataim: the se wall I ope vnto the of the east, þ they maye fall vpo þ Ammonites: & will greeit the in possession: to þ the Ammonites shall no more be had in retribuciō amonge þ heathen. But thus will I punysh Moab also, that they maye know, how þ I am the Lord.

Wherfore, thus saith þ Lord God: Because that þ Edom hath aueged and enled hym selfe vpon the house of Iuda, & haue done great offence & aueged þ selfe vpo the therfore, thus saith the Lord: I will reach out myne hāde vpon Edom, & take a waue man & beast out of it. I from Thēma vnto Dedā will I make it desolat, theyr shall be slayne w the sword. ¶ Therow my people of Israel will I ouge me agayn: vpo Ed theyr shall hāde him, accordig to my wrath and indygnacion, so that theyr shall knowe my vengeance, saith the Lord God.

Thus saith the Lord God: For so much as the Philistines haue done this: namely, taken vengeance with despitfull contempts, and of an olde euill will set them selues to destroye. Therfore, thus saith þ Lord God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer þ Philistynes, & destroye þ destroyer, and cause all the remnant of the se coast, to perishe. A great degeance vpon I take vpo the, and punysh them cruell: þ they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord, which haue aueged me of them.

* because that Tyre hath spoken vnto Ierusalem: I ha, now I rowe the porters of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for now Tyre is destroyed I shall be filled. Per. therefore, sayeth the Lord God: Beholde I Tyre. I will vnto Tyre. I will bryge a great multitude of people agaynst Tyre, which will the see aspyth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yee, as the dryng place, where the fyshers däge vnto the nettes by Tyre. Eze. I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God. The Streets shall spolie her: her daughters vnto Tyre shall perish in the sword, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I will bryge hither Nabuchodonosor, which is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges, fro Tyre vnto Tyre: with his hostes, charrettes, horsemen, and with a great multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the land, shall he slaye with the sword: but agaynst the, he shall make bullworkes, and graue wyndches aboute Tyre, and lyft vp his hynde agaynst the. His spynges and batelraimes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons he shall breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of his charrettes, and wheels when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an open crite. With his horses of his horse feet, shall he treade downe all thy streets.

He shall slaye the people with the sword, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shall walke awaye thy riches, and spolie thy marchandise. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymber, and foundacions shall they cast in the water.

* Jer. xlii. b.

All kynges of the see shall come downe from the, leaues regall: they shall lape awaye the, roads, and put of the, costly clothynge. Yee, with trembling shall they be clothed, they shall lyt vpon the ground: they shall be afrayed at thy loden fall, & be a bashed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the. * Thou noble crite, that hast bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men were in feare, how arte thou now so vntroly destroyed? Now at Tyre of thy fall I inhabytours of the Iles, yee, and the Iles them selues, shall stande in feare at thy ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: whē I make the in desolate crite: as other crites be, that no mā dwel in, and whē I bringe the depe vpon Tyre, that greates waters maye couer the. Then will I cast the downe vnto the, that defende into the pyre: vnto a people that hath bene longe dead, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wilderness, with them which goe downe to the, graues, so that no mā shall dwell moze in the. and Welch were thy marchauntes, which broughte the me, and ornaments of metall for thy occupiege. They of þ house of Tho-garina broughte vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules. They of Deban were thy marchauntes: and manp other Iles that occupied with the, broughte the weathers. Elephat bones & penceokes for a present. The Strias occupied with þ, because of thy diuerse woorkes, and increased thy marchaundies, with Somaragdes, with scarlet, with noble woorkie, with whyte lyphen cloth, with sylke, and with cry stall.

Ande the lande of Israel occupied w the & broughte vnto thy markettes, wheat, of Minith and panning, balme, honp, oyle, & trpacle. Damascus also used marchaundises w the, in the best wyne of Iherlon & w will: because thy occupiege was so greate, ad thy wares so many. Dan, Zauan & Henall ha ue broughte vnto thy markettes, p yonredy made, with Cassia & Calam, accorde to thyne occuppunge. Dedan occupied with the in fayne tapetelpe woorkie and culppins.
Arabia & al the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba and Kema

The xxviii. Chapter.

The woordes of God agaynst the kyng of Tyre for þys pyete. Daniel The prophet is moued to write for þys of Tyre. The woordes of the Lord agaynst Tyre. The Lord promyseth that he wil maket wyth the children of Israel.

The woordes of þ Lord came vnto me sayng: thou sonne of ma, tell the prince of Tyre: Thy sayeth the Lord God, because thou hast a proude hert and hast sayde: I am a God. I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and per standest i thy-ne a wyne conceate, that thou arte God: Be-holde, þ thynekest thy selfe i wyse then Daniel, that there is no secretes hys from the. With thy wysdome and thy vnderstandyng, thou hast gotten the great welthyngnes, and gathered treasure of pluer ad golde. With thy greate wysdome ad occu-ppunge, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate rychele, thy herte is proude.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: so so much as thou hast lptt vp thyne hert as though thou were God: Beholde, I will bynyge ennemys vpo the, euen the tpaunt-res of þ heathē: thes shall dwale out their swardes vpon thy beyte and wysdome, & shal besyle thy gloyp. They shall cast the do-wne to þ pitte, so that thou shalt byr in the myddest of the see, as they that be slayne.
Let se, yf thou wilt saye them (before them that slape þ) I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God, in the bādes of the that slape the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the handes of the ennemys for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherefore, the woordes of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of ma, make a lamentable complaynte ouer þ kyng of Tyre, ad tell hym: Thus sayeth the Lord God: thou art a scale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome & excellēte betwy. Thou hast brue in the pleasant garden of God: thou art decate with al maner of pcyous stones: with Ruby, Topas, Cry stall, Iacynth, Wir,

The prophery

Moreouer, it happened i the cleuenth year, the fyrst daye of the thyrde moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egypte, and to all hys people. Wilhom art þ lyke in thy greatnesse: As holbe, Asur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mount of Libanus with sayre byanches: so thyke, that he gaue shadowes and shor out very hye. Hys toppe reached vnto þ cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe let hym vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of hym rane there floudes of water. He sent out his lytle spures vnto all the trees of the felde. Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thowout the myltitude of waters þ he sent from him, he omytyned many longe byanches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his byanches, vnder his bowes ge-died all the beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Sayre & vntofull was he in his grettnesse & in the length of hys byanches, for hys rote stode besyde great waters. No Cedre tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasant garde of God, there was no fyre tre lyke hys byanches, þ play-ne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.
All the trees in þ garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his betwyt, so sayre and goodly had I made hym w the multitude of hys byanches. In so moche that all the trees in þ pleasant garde of God had crumpe at hym. Therefore, thus sayeth þ Lorde God: for so moche as he hath lftt vp him selfe so hye, and stretched hys toppes in to þ cloudes, and leunge his hert is proude in his hyghnesse. I wyll deluere hym into þ handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, which shall rote him out. Accordynge to his wychednesse wyll I cast hi awaye, þ cyncture shall be trode hym, and the myghty men of the beathen shall so feare him that his byanches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in all valleyes: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thowout the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, ad forsake him.
When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall lye vpon hym, and all wyld beastes of the felde shall go aboute: & amonge his byanches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall attayne to his hyghnesse, nor reach his toppes vnto þ cloudes, nether shall eny tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: In the daye which he goeth downe to the graue I will cause a lamentacion to be made, I will couer the depe vpon him, I will staich his floudes, ad the great waters shall be strayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, ad all the trees of the felde shall be synner. I will make the heathen make at the sounde of his fall, when I cast him downe to þ hell with them that de-scende into the pyete. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and all they that are planted vps the waters, shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slay-ne with the swerde, which dwelt a fore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To who shall thou be lphened, that art so glorious and great, among the trees of Eden: Per art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge þ trees of Edē) where thou must lye amonge vntersleped, w them þ be slayne w þ swerde. Euen thus is it w Pharao & all his people, sayeth the Lorde God.

Chapter.

¶ The prophete is commaunded to beynge Pharao the kynge of Egypte. The prophete sayeth that Pharaon shall come vnto Egypte thowout the kynge of Babylon.

In the cleuenth year, þ fyrst daye of the twelueyth moneth, the worde of þ Lorde came vnto me sayinge: thou sonne of ma, take vp a lamentacion vps Pharaon king of Egypte, & saye vnto him: thou art reputed as a lyon of the heare, & as a wal-fow l þ scer: Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest þ waters with thy fete and stapest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lord God: * I wyll spede my net ouer the, namely, a greute myltitude of people: these shall byue þ to my payne, for I wyll cast the vpon the lande, and let the lye vps the felde, that all þ foules of the ayre maye lytt vpon the. I will geue all the beastes of the felde ynough of þ. Thy flesh wyll I cast vpon the hyles, and fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lade with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, & rpyures that be full of thy bloude. When þ art put out, I will couer þ heauen, and make his starres bynne. * I wyll spede a cloude ouer the sunne, ad the mone that not geue her light. All þ lightnes of heauē will I put out ouer þ. Thygnesse vpon thy lade, sayeth the Lord God.
I will trouble the herdes of many people, when I byng thy destruccio among þ heathen: & coltreces, whom þ knowest not. Per, I will make many people w theyr kynge so afraped thowout the, þ theyr heare shall lade vp, when I shalke my swerd at theyr fetes. Sodenly shall they be alstonyed, eue-ry man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

E For thus saith the Lord God, the king of Babylons sworde shal come vpon the, with the swordes of the worthyes wyll. I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghtye amonge the Gentyles shal walke þ proud pompe of Egypte, & byng downe all her people. All the castell also of Egypte will I destroye, & they shall come nomore vpon þ waters: so that neither mas fore nor beastes clawe, shall stee the eny more. The will I make their waters depe, & cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, saith the Lord God. When I make þ lande of Egypte desolate, and when the counter with all that is therein, shall be layde waste, & when I smyte all them which dwell in it, that they may knowe, that I am þ Lord. This is þ mourning, that þ daughters of the heathen shal make: Pee, a fozord & lamentacion shal they take vpon Egypte, and all her people, saith the Lord God.

In the .xv. yere, the .xv. daie of the moneth, came the woide of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon þ people of Egypte, & call the downe, pee, them I saie, & the myghtye people of þ heathen also. euen with the * that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe into the graue. downe (how saye so euer þ be) & lape the with þ vncircumcised. Amonge those þ be slayne with þ swerde, shall they lye. To the swerde is the all redy deliuered: therfore plucke downe to þ grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghtie worthyes shal speake to him out of þ hell: & to his helperc, þ be gone downe & lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

E Allur is there also with hys company, & their graues roude aboute, which were slayne and fell all with the swerde, whose graues lye besyde him in þ lowe pytte. hys comens are buried rounde aboute hys graue, all together wounded and slayne with the swerde, which me afore tyme broughte fere into the lande of the lpyunge.

* There is Elam also with all hys people, and their graues roude aboute: which all beyng wounded & slayne with þ swerde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder þ earth, which neuertheless somtyme broughte fere into the lande of the lpyunge: for the which they beate their thame, with þ other that be gone downe to the graue.

These buriall is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are roude aboute all them, whyche vncircumcised, & with the that be slayne thorough þ swerde: for seing that in tynes past they made the lande of the lpyunge at rayed they must now beare thei a wne thame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Meslech also and Tubal, and their people, & their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swerde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lpyunge at rayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge þ worthyes, & vncircumcised & paynes which with their weapens are gone downe to hell whose swerde are layed vnder their heades, whose wyrdednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought fere into the lande of the lpyunge Pee, amonge the vncircumcised halt thou be destroyed, & slepe with them, that perished thorough the swerde.

There is the lande of * Edom with her lpynges and princes also, which with they strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swerde, pee, amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreover, there be all þ pynges of the north, with all the Sidonias, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strength they are come to confusio, and lye there vncircumcised, among those that be slayne with þ swerde: and beare their a wne thame, with the that be gone downe to þ pytte. Now when Pharaos seyth this, he shall be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the swerde: both Pharaos and all his hooll, saith the Lord God. For I haue geuen my fere in the lande of the lpyunge. But Pharaos and all his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swerde saith the Lorde God.

¶ The .xxiiiij. Chapter.

¶ He setteth out the effice of a curse that proceedeth the Gospel. He strengtheueth them that dyspayre, and holdeneth them with the pynnes of mercy. The woide of þ Lord against þ reynauit of þ people, & agaynst the mockers of the woices of the prophete.

Acame vnto me: sayinge. Thou sonne of man, speke to þ children of thy people, and tell the: When I sende a swerde vpon a lande, þ the people of the lande take a ma of their countre, & let hym to be their * watchman, the same man, when he seyth þ swerde come vpon the lande: I shall blowe the trumpet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trumpet & wyll not be warned, and the swerde come: and take him at wape: his bloude shall be vpon his a wne head: for he herde þ sound of the trumpet, & wolde not take heede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But þe who will erreane warninge, he shall saue his lyfe.

The Prophecie

W Agayne, pf the watchman ſe ſwearde come, and ſhe we ſe it not with the ſtrope, ſo that the people is not warned: pf theſe ſwearde come then, & take euery man from among the: the ſame ſhall be taken awaye in his owne ſpyne, but his bloude wyll requyre of the watchmans hande.

* 2re. 11. c.

* And now (O thou ſonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſrael: that where as thou heareſt euery thinge out of my mouth, thou mayeſt warne the on my behalfe. If I ſaye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou ſhalt ſurely dye, & thou geueſt him not warninge, that he maye be warre of his vngodly waye: then ſhall the wycked dye in his owne ſpyne, but his bloude wyll requyre of thy hande. Reuerſelyes, pf thou warne the wycked of his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, the ſhal he dye becauſe of his ſpyne, but thou ſhalt deliuer the ſoule.

C Therefore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto þe houſe of Iſrael. Ye ſaye thus: Woe offences and ſpynnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how ſhulde we then be reſtoied vnto lyfe? Tell them: *

* 2re. 11. c.

* As truly as I lye ſaith the Lord God, I haue no pleaſure in þe death of the wycked, but moche rather þe wycked turne fro his waye, & lyue. Turne thou, turne thou fro vngodly wayes, O ye of the houſe of Iſrael. O wyckedſe wyll ye dye:

* 2re. 11. c.

* O thou ſonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The righteouſnes of the ryghteous ſhal not ſaue him, whan ſocuer he turneth awaye unfaithfully. Agayne, the wyckedneſſe of the wycked ſhall not hurt him, whan ſocuer he conuerteth from his vngodlyneſſe.

And the ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue him lyfe, whan ſocuer he ſpyneth. If I ſaye vnto the ryghteous, that he ſhall ſurely lyue, and ſo he truſt to his owne ryghteouſneſſe, and do ſynne, then ſhall his ryghteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon, but in the wyckedneſſe that he hath done he ſhal dye. *

* 2re. 11. c.

* Agayne, pf I ſaye vnto the wycked: thou ſhalt ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from his ſpynnes, and do þe thinge that is lawfull and right: In ſo much that the ſame wycked man getteth þe pledge agayne, reſtoereth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walcheth in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wronge. Then ſhall he ſurely lyue, and not dye. Yee, the ſpynnes that he hath done, ſhall neuer be thought vpon. For in ſo much as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull & ryght, he ſhall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people ſaye: Truly the waye of þe Lord is not ryght, but they lye, where as their a true waye is rather wyght.

Then þe ryghteous turneth fro his ryghte teouſnes and doth the thinge that is wycked he ſhall dye therfore. But pf the wycked turne from his wyckedneſſe, doinge the thinge þe is lawfull and right, he ſhall lyue therfore. Yet ye ſaye: * the waye of the Lord is not equal. O ye houſe of Iſrael * I will iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

* 2re. 11. c.

In the xii. yere, the .viij. daye of þe tenth moneth of oure captiuitie, it happened, that one which was ſled out of Babel, came vnto me, and ſayd: the cite is deſtroyed. Now þe hande of þe Lord had bene vpon me the euenyng afore this man (which was cleped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, but I ſpake no word, for he came to me: yee, he opened my mouth, ſo þe I was nomore domme. Then came the word of þe Lord vnto me, & ſayd. Thou ſonne of man, theſe þe dwell in þe waſted lãde of Iſrael, ſaye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in poſſeſſion: now are we many & the lande is geuen vs to poſſeſſe alſo. And therfore tell them. ¶ Thus ſayeth the Lord: * In the bloud haue ye eaten, poure eyes haue ye lpfte vp to Idoles, & haue ſhed blood: ſhall ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion?

* 2re. 11. c.

* 2re. 11. c.

Ye leane vpon your ſtrength, ye worke the abhominations, euery one deſireth his neyghbours wife: and ſhall ye the poſſeſſe the lande? ſaye þe theſe wordes vnto them. ¶ Thus ſaith the Lord God. As truly as I lye alſo ye þe dwell in thys wyckedneſſe, ſhall ſlape with þe ſwearde: what ſocuer is vpon the ſclde, will I geue vnto the deaſtes to be deuoured: thoſe that be in ſtrong holdes & denes, ſhall dye of the peſtilence. ¶ For I will make the lande deſolate and waſte, & the pompe of her ſtrength ſhal come to an ende. ¶ The mountaynes in Iſrael ſhall be to waſte that no man ſhall trauaile thereby.

* 2re. 11. c.

* Then ſhall they leue to knowe, that I am the Lord, when I make the lande waſte & deſolate, becauſe of al their abhominations, that they haue wrought. And thou ſonne of man, the childre of thy people that talke of the, by the waſtes and in the doores of their houſes, ſayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what wordes is gone forth from the Lord. Theſe come vnto the, after þe manner of a greate people: yee, as who ſayth they were my people, they lye downe befoze thee, and heare thy wordes, but they do not therafter: * ſo in their mouths they make a feſte of them, and they bette goeth after theye a vaine couetous lurre. And as a balet that hath a ſweete tune, and is pleaſant to lyngs, ſo ſhall þe be vnto them: thy wordes ſhal they heare, but they will not do therafter. ¶ Wha this cometh to paſſe, ſo lo, it cometh in dede: then ſhall they knowe, þe theye hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Againe my shepbes and shepherdes that despoyle the flock of chylde, I seale there a newe. The Lord sealeth that he wyll by the dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He is the master of covenent of the flocke. He is my shepbes the true shepbes chylde, and with hym peace.

Ad the woide of ꝑ Lord came unto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, prophete agayn the shepherdes of Israel, prophete and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord God. * Wo be vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede ꝑ flockes?

Ye haue eate by the fete, ye haue clothed you with the wool: ꝑ best fedde haue ye shapen, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vp: ꝑ sicke haue ye not healed: ꝑ broken haue ye not bounde together, ꝑ out castes haue ye not brought agayne: ꝑ lost haue ye not sought, but * churlyshly & cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they scattered here & there without a shepberde: ye, all ꝑ beastes of the feld deuoure the, and they go astray.

Why thepe go wandring vpon all mountaynes and vnder euery hyll. Yee, they be scattered abrode in all feltes, and there is no man, that careth for the, or seeketh after the. Therefore, O ye shepherdes, heare the woide of the Lord. Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: As truly as I lyue, for so much as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the feld, haunging no shepberde: and seeinge that my shepberdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely, and not my shepe. Therefore, heare the woide of the Lord (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: Beholde, I my selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and requite my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from feyring of my shepe: yee, the shepherdes shall fede the selues nomore. For I wyll deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayeth the Lord God: * Beholde, I wyll take to my shepe my selfe, and take them. Like as a shepberde among ꝑ flocke seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abroade, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, & gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scattered in the cloudy and darcke daye. I wyll bringe them out from all people, and gather the together out of all lades. I wyll bringe them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. Thus my shepe must be sayne to cate the thinge, that ye haue treade downe w your fete, and to drinke, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therefore, thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seure the fatt shepe from the leane: for so much as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the spores & shoulbers, and runne vpon them with your hornes, so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shal nomore be spoyled: yee, I wyll discern one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one onely shepberde, euen as my seruant * Dauid, he shall fede the: and he shall be their shepberde. I the Lord wil be their God, and my seruant Dauid shall be their prince: Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

The Prophecye

The xxxv. Chapter.

¶ The declaration that shall come on the hill Arie. that is on þe thimians, because they troubled the people of the Iude.

In þe mount, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying, Thou son of man, turne thy face towarde the mount * Serp, prophesye vpon it, & saye vnto it. Thus sayeth þe Lord God: Beholde, (þe mount Serp) I will vpon the, I will reach out myne hande ouer the, yee, waite and desolate wil I make the.
The cities will I breake downe, & þe shall lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, how þe I am the Lord. * For so much as thou hear-est, an olde enemye agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast dwelne the chyldren of Israel vpon the heerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayeth þe Lord God, I will prepare the vnto bloude, yee, þe bloude shall flowe vpon the: * feinge þe I saye wyntre for bloude, therefore shall blou-de persecute þe. Thus will I make þe mount desolate and waite, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man goo thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes will I fyll with his slagne men: thy hills, valleyes and ruynes, shall lye full of them, that are slagne with þe sword. I will make þe perpetuall wilderness, so that thy cities shall not retorne to their former estate þe maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord.

And because þe hast sayde: what, & both these nations and both these landes must be myne, I will haue the in possession * where as the Lord was there. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I will haue the accordinge to thy wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly w them, that I maye be knowne among them, how I haue punished þe. Yee, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue herde all thy despyte ful wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: As they are made waite, and geue vs to denounce. Thus with your mou-thes ye haue made your bonst agaynst me, ye, and multiplied your proude wordes a-gaynst me, which I haue herde altogether.
Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lord God to the tope of all the world: wil I make þe wate. * And lyke as þe (Mount Serp) wilt glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so will I do vnto the also, þe thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ The promise of berurance from the Gentiles unto Israel. And the desire that the Gentiles shall haue to be a tribute to the mercy of God, not vnto their desires. And the desire that the Gentiles shall haue to be in his commaundement.

In thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon þe mountaynes of Israel, and speake:
* heare þe word of the Lord. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth þe Lord God, Because your enemye hath sayde vnto you: A, ha, the euerlastinge places are now become ours, prophesye therefore, & speake: thus sayeth the Lord God. Whereye ye be waite and troble downe, an euerlyde, and become a possession vnto the residue of þe Gentiles, which haue brought you into myng mouthes and vnto an euill name amonge the people. Therefore, heare þe word of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hills, valleyes and dales, to þe voyde wilderness and desolate cities, which are spoiled, & had in derision on euerlyde, amonge the residue of the heathen.
Yee, eue thus sayeth the Lord God. In the daye of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyer, agaynst þe residue of the Gentiles, & agaynst all * Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioyced fro the whole heart with a despitefull stomache, to waite it, and to spoyle it.

Prophesye therefore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes & hills to valleyes and dales, thus sayeth the Lord God. Behold, thus haue I deuised in my gelousy a terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffered reioyce of the heathen, therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I haue thowne, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shall beare their confusion the selues. And as for you (Mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out your braches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is hard by, that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, y ye maye be tyld and lowne.

I will sende you much people, which shall be all of the house of Israel, the cities shall be inhabited, & the decayed places shall be repaired agayne, I wil poude you with much people and cattell, which shall increase and bringe frute, I will restore you also to your olde estate & thede you more kyndnes the euer ye had before: whereby ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Yee, prolye will I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, & thou shalt be their inheritance, to þe thou shalt haue no men, neither destroye thy people any more, sayeth the Lord God. And I will not suffre the, for to beare thine awne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare þe reproche of the nations, ne cast out

cast out thyn a dwne people any more, saith the Lord God.

¶ Moreover, the worde of the Lord came unto me, saying. ¶ Thou sonne of mā, when the house of Israel dwelt upon their a dwne grōnde, they defiled the selues w thēre a dwne wayes & pimaginations: so p in my sight their waye was lyke the uncleynesse of a mistress womā. ¶ And herfoze, I poured my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. ¶ Becausē of the bloude p they had shed in p lānde, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defiled the selues. I feared the also amōge the heathen, so p they were strawed aboute in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes & after theire a dwne inuencions, so vpd I punished them.

¶ Now, when they were gone vnto the heathen, & come in amonge the, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, & must go out of their a dwne lād? ¶ The spared I my holy name, which p house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. ¶ Therefore tell p house of Israel: Thus saith p Lord God: I do not thus for your sakes (O house of Israel): but for my holy names sake, whych pe dishonoured amonge the heathen, when pe came to them. ¶ Therefore, I will halowe my greute name agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is euell spoken of: for pe your selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles that knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, saith the Lord God.

¶ As for you, I will take you from amonge the heathē, and gather you together out of all countres, and byynge you agayne into your a dwne lānde. ¶ ¶ Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yee, from all your vncleynesse and from all your Idols shall I cleanse you. ¶ A new herte also will I geue you, and a new spere will I put into you. As for that stony herte, I will take it out of your body, & geue you a fleshy herte. I will geue my spere amōge you, & cause you to walke in my commaundmēts to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

¶ And so ye shall dwell in the land, that I gaue to your fozefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you out of all your vncleynesse. I will call for the come, and will increate it: & let you haue no longer. I will multiplye the frutes of the trees and the increafe of p felde for you, so p ye shall haue no more reppose of hōger, amonge the heathen. ¶ Then that pe remembre your a dwne wicked wayes, & your pimaginations, which were not good: so that ye shall thinke p ye were wroth to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacions.

¶ But I will not do thus for your sakes (saith the Lord God) be ye sure of it. ¶ Therefore, O ye house of Israel, I be ashamed of your synnes. ¶ Moreover, thus saith p Lord God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, and will repaire p places that be decayed. ¶ The desolate lānde shall be builded agayne, which afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all them that wete by. ¶ Then that it be sayde: this waste lānde is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the wynde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now strong, & defended agayne. ¶ Then p residue of p heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am p Lord, which repaire that was broken downe, and plante agayne, p was made waste. ¶ Euen I y Lord haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

¶ Thus saith the Lord God: I will yet once be founde agayne of p house of Israel, and do this for them: ¶ I shall increate them as a flocke of mē. Lyke as the holy flocke & the flocke of Ierusalem are in p hys solempne feastes: so shall also the wilde waste cyties be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord.

¶ The prophetieth the bringynge agayne of the people bringe in captiuite. He wyllyth the byren of the ten tribes with the two.

¶ The hande of the Lord came vpon me, and caried me out in the spere of the felde, and let me downe in a place of the felde, that laye full of bones, and be led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and maruelous bye also. ¶ Then sayd he vnto me. ¶ Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? ¶ I answered O Lord God, thou knowest. ¶ And he sayde vnto me. ¶ Prophecy thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. ¶ Pe dye bones, heare the worde of p Lord. ¶ Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Beholde, I will put breath into you, that ye maye liue: I will geue you synowes, and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: and so geue you ¶ breath, that ye maye lyue, & knowe, that I am the Lord.

¶ So I propheted, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophetyng, there came a noyse & a great moeyon, so p the bones came euery one to another. ¶ A dwne wch I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, & ad the grewe vpon them: and aboute they were conered with skynne, but there was no breath in them. ¶ Then sayde he vnto me. ¶ Thou sonne of man, prophete thou towarde p wynde: prophete: and speake to p wynde. ¶ Thus

Sapeth the Lord God. Come (O thou wyte) from the four wyndes, & blowe vpon the flayne that they may be refloved to lyfe. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me: then came the beryl into them, and they receaued lyfe, and stood vpon vpon the fete, a maruelous grente foyle.

Howcouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dried vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therefore prophesie thou, and speake vnto them: thus saith the Lord God. Beholde, I will open your granes, (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, & brynge you into the lande of Israel againe. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your granes, and brynge you out of them. My spere also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you againe in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke & wyte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyl- dren of Israel his companions. Then take another stycke, and wyte vpon it: vnto Ioseph the flock of Ephraim, & to all the house- hold of Israel his companions. And then, take both these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one people thereof. Now yf the chyl- dren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not thewe vs, what thou meynest by this? Then geue them this answer: thus saith the Lord God: beholde, * I will take the flock of Ioseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim and of the tribes of Israel his fel- lows, and will put them to the flock of Iuda, and make them one flock, and they shall be one in my hande. And yf two stickes where vpon thou wyte it, shall thou haue in thy- ne hand, that they maye be, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus saith the Lord God: beholde, I will take awaye the chyldren of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone: and will gather them together on cue- ry isle, and brynge them againe into thei- rowne lande: yee, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples twofold, neither be deuided into two kingdoms: they shall all be of one felowship no more with their abhominacions, Idoles, & all their vncleane doings. I will helpe the out of all their dwellinge places, wherein they haue synned: and will to cleane them, that they shall be my people, & I their God.

Sayd my seruante shall be their kyng, & they shall haue one shepheard onely. They shall walke in my lawes, & my commaun- dementes shall they both keepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruante, where as youe fa- ther also haue dwelt. Yee, euery in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, & their chyld- ders chyl- dren dwell for euermore, & my ser- uant Dauid shall be their euermeking pyn- ce. Howcouer, I will make Iuda a dwel- linge place w them, which shall be vnto them an euer- lastinge councynant. I will seele them also, & multiplye them, my Sanctuary will I set a- monge them for euermore. * My dwellinge shall be with them: yee, I will be their God, & they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lord am the ho- ly maker of Israel: when my Sanctuary shall be amonge them for euermore.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

Of the prophecies that Agog and Agag shall come with an appointed hole into the lande of promys. Their entree. The rebreth of the coming of Agog was beforre prophesied a litle before. The rebreth of Agog.

Ad the worde of the Lord came I vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, turne the face of thy vnto- ward: so the lande of Agog which is yf chefe prince at Egipt and Tybal: I prophecie agaynst hym, & saye. Thus saith the Lord God. * O Agog yf chefe prince of Egipt and Tybal: behol- de, I will vpon the, & will turne the aboute and put a byrt in thy chawges: I will brynge the forth and all thine host, both horse and hoisemen, which be all weapened of the best fashion: a great people, & handle altogether speares, shildes, & swordes: the Arics, Ho- rians and with them the Libians, which all beate shildes and helmettes: Gonier and all his hostes: the house of Agogoma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes, yee, and much people with the.

Therefore prepare y, let thy selfe in araye with all thy people, that ne come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in yf latter yeares thou shalt come into the lande that hath bene destroyed with the swordes, & now is replenished againe with dwel- ling people vpon yf mountaynes of Israel, which haue longe ypen walke. Yee, they be brought out of the nations, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vplik a stormy wyther, to couer the lande, & as it were a darck cloude, thou wilt all thine hostes, and a great multitu- de of people with the.

Howcouer, thus saith the Lord God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt pynagyn mys- chiefe, and saye: I will vp to ponder playne lande, seinge they lyt at ease, & dwell so sa- fely: for help: for they dwell all without any walles they haue neither barres nor doores) to spoyle the, to robbe the, to lape haue vpon thee so well inhabited thy dwellles: against that people, þis gathered together from amonge the heathen, which haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the middest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Arabia with all their woortheis saue vnto thee: At thou come to robbe: hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle: to take syluer and golde: to carry away cattell and good, and to haue a grente praye?

¶ Therefore, O thou sonne of man, þ shalt prophesie, and say vnto Gog. Thus saith the Lord God. In þ daye thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwell in safte: and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes, thou & much people with the which epe vpon hostes, wherof there is a grente multitude and an innumerable sort. Yee, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. They shall come to passe in platter dayes: I will bringe the vp into my lande, þ the heathen maye knowe me, whē I get me honour vpon the (O Gog) before their eyes.

¶ Thus saith the Lord God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruantes þ prophetes of Israel, which prophesied in thole dayes and yeres, that I shoulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog cometh vp into the land of Israel (saith the Lord God) that my indignation go forth in my wrath. For in my grouwly and hote displeasure I haue deuyled* that there shalbe a grente trouble in the lande of Israel at þ tyme. The very fishes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

¶ The hills also shalbe turned vp side downe, the stayres of stone shal fall, and all walles shal synche to the grounde. I will raise a sworde vpon them in all my mountaynes saith the Lord God: so that euery mans sworde shal be vpon another. With prestence and bloude will I punte him: I wyll my rayne and dafle stones, fyre and byrmstone will I cause to raine vpon him and all his heape, yee, and vpon all that grente people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, & knowe amonge the heathen: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lord.

¶ The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ The vision of the chequyng of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his beere. The prophecy that Gog & his company shalbe deuoured of deathe and beastes, wherof þ house of Israel is waited. And byrninge Ageneb red captiuitie is promysed.

¶ Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophesie agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus saith the Lord God: Beholde, I will sende thee to the north partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy wode, I will smyte it out of thy left haue, and cast thynne arbores out of thy ryght haue. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is w the mult fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I gene the vnto foules and wilde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there mult thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lord haue spoken it, saith the Lord God.

¶ Into Magog, and among those that spt so carelesse in the fles: will I send a fyre, & they shal knowe, that I am the Lord. I will make also þ name of my holinesse to be knowne among my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euil spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it cometh, and shalbe fulfilled: saith the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spok. They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the wearpes, and burne them: they beas and spercs, bowes and arrowes, bylles & clubben: leue yeres that they be burninge therof, so that they shal ris byge no sticke left þ felde, neether haue neede to be downe cny out of þ wode. For they shal haue wea p's ynowe to burne. They shal robbe those that robbed them, & spoyle those that spoyled them saith the Lord God. At the same tyme will I gene vnto Gog, a place to be buried in Israel, eue the valley, where thow men go from the east to the see warder. Those þ trouaule thereby, shall stoppe theyr noses for stench. There shall Gog & all his people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Euen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burynges of the that they maye cleanse the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande shall burie them. It shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, saith þ Lord God. They shal ordeyne me also to be dead buryers, eue goryng those to the lande, & appoynte them ceterayne places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, þ the lande maye be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they see, & that leue monethes longe. Now those þ go thow þ lande, where they is a mans bone, they shal set vp a toke by it, & by deeb buryers haue buried it also, in þ valley of the people of Gog. And þ name of the cite shal be called, hamonah: (þ is a multitude) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

¶ And thou sonne of man: thus saith the Lord

The Prophecy

Lord God. Speake vnto all the foules and every byrde, yee, and to all the wilde beastes of the skie. heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: cut a greete slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Iſraell: cathe the flesh of the dooſtyes, & drinke the bloud of the princes of the lande: of the dooſtyes, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen: yee be all slayne ne Balaan. Eat the fat your belly full, and drinke bloude, tyll ye be dyen of the slaughter, wherby I haue slayne vnto you. fill you at my table with hoyses and stronge hoysmen: with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lord God.

* Apo. xij. b.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hand whiche I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Iſraell maye knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Iſraell were led into captiuitie: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyde my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that they might all be slaine with the sword. Accordyng to their wickednes & vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I increased them, and hyde my face from them.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Nowe will I bringe agayne the captiues of Iacob: & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Iſraell, and begetous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me shall be taken awaye: & so safely that they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayed. And whē I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, whē I haue gathered the together out of their enemies landes, & am prayd in them before many heathen: then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God which suffered the to be led into captiuitie amonge heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne into their awne lode, and not left one of them ponder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from the: but will pouce out my spere vpon the house of Iſraell, sayeth the Lord God.

Chapter. xl.

The remouyng of the cyties and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the xxv. yeare of oure captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yeare, the .x. daye of the moneth: that is the .xiii. yeare, after that the cyte was synen downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Iſraell brought he me in the visyons of God: & set me downe vpon a marvellous hye mountayne, wher vpon there was a byrlding (as it had bene of a cyte) toward the north.

Herbyer he caried me, and beholde, there was a ma, whose similitude was like baste, which had a thebe of flax in his hande, & a meterode also. he stode in the doze, and sayd vnto me: in arche well with thine eyes, heken to with thine eares, and saſten it in thine hert, whatſoeuer I shall thebe the, for to that intent that they: myght be shewed þe therfore art þe brought hither. And whatſoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certeyne þe house of Iſraell therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on þe out syde rounde aboute the house: the meterode that he had in his hande, was like cubytes long & a spaine. So he measured the bredth of the byrlding, which was a meterode, and the hepyth also a meterode. The came he vnto the east doze, & wrote vp the steares, & measured the polles of þe doze, wherof euery one was a meterode thicke. Euery chābre was a meterode lōge & brode: betwene the chābres were fyue cubytes. The polle of þe doze within the porche, was one meterode. he measured also the porche of the ynnner doze, which conteyned a meterode. Then measured he the entreye of the doze, that conteyned cyght cubytes, & his pylers two cubytes: and this entreye stode inward.

The chābres of the doze eastward, were thre on euery syde: a lyke byode and longe. The pilers also that stode of both the sydes were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x. cubytes, & the hepyth of the doze .xiii. cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambers six cubytes wyde of cyther syde. he measured the doze from the pyche of one chambrie to another, whose wydenesse was xxv. cubytes, & one doze stode agaynst another. he made pilers also. i.e. cubites hye, rounde about þe court doze. Beside þe inward parte vnto the fore entre of the ynnner doze, were .l. cubytes. The chambers and their pylers within, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes. So had the fore entrees also, whose wyndowes were rounde about within. And vpon the pylers ther stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore court where as were chambers & pained woorkes, made in the fore court rounde aboute. xxx. chambries vpon one pained woork. Nowe the pained woork was a longe besyde the dozes & þe lower pained woork. After this he measured the bredth fro the lower doze, vnto the ynnner court of the outsyde, which had an .C. cubytes vpon the east: & the north noyth parte. And the doze in the vtermoste court toward the north, measured he after the lēgh and bēdeth: hys thre chambres also on ether syde with his pylers and foyntes: which had euen the measure of the first doze. His heeght was .l. cubites, the bēdeth .xxv. cubites, hys wyndowes & porches with hys date trees, had euen the measure as the doze toward the east: there were .viij. stēppes to go vp vpon, and ther pochte before them. Nowe the doze of the pynnermer court stode stēppē ouer agaynst the doze, & was toward the north east. And one doze to another he measured. & cubytes.

¶ After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a doze toward the south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these had the first measure, and with their porches they had wyndowes rounde about, like the first wyndowes. The heeght was .l. cubites, the bēdeth .xxv. with stēppes to go vpon: hys pochte stode before with hys pylers and date trees on ether syde. And the doze of the pynnermer court stode toward the south, and he measured from one doze to another an .c. cubites. So he brought me into the pynnermer court, thowre the doze of the south syde, which he measured: and it had the measure as of the first. In the maner, hys chambers, pylers and foyntes, had euen the fore sayde measure also. And he had with hys porches rounde about wyndowes of fifty cubites heeght, and .xxv. cubytes broad. The porches rounde about were .xxv. cubites lōge, and .v. cubites broad: and his pochte reached vnto the vtermost court, vpon his pylers, there were date trees, and eppēt stēppes to go vpon.

¶ He brought me also into the pynmost court vnto the east syde, and measured the doze, according to the measure as of the first. His chambers, pylers and porches had euen the same measure, as the first had: and with hys porches, he had wyndowes rounde about. The heeght was .l. cubites, the bēdeth .xxv. cubites: hys pochte reached vnto the vtermost court: his pylers also had date trees on ether syde, & .viij. stēppes to go vpon. And he brought me to the north doze & measured it: which also had the fore sayde measure. His chambers, pylers & porches had wyndowes rounde about: whose heeght was .l. cubites, and the bēdeth .xxv. hys pylers stode toward the vtermost court, and vnto them both were date trees, and .viij. stēppes to go vpon. Ther stode a chambrise also, whose entrance was at the doze pylers, and there the burnt offerings were washed.

¶ In the doze pochte, there stode on ether syde two tables for the laughtinges: to slepe the burnt offerings, syn offeringes and trespass offeringes therevnto. And on the outside as men go forth to the north doze, ther stode two tables, foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, that is .viij. tables: wher vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewe stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite and a halfe longe and broad, and one cubite hie: wher vpon were layed the vessels and ornaments, which were vnto the burnt and sayne offerings: whā they were slaughted. And within, there were holes foure fingers broad, fastened rounde about, to hang flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed & offeringe deshe. On the out syde of the innermer doze were the syngers chambers in the inward court besyde the north doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, besyde the east doze northward.

¶ And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytatyon: and this toward the north, * is the prestes that waite vpon the altire: which be the sonnes of Zadach, that do seruite before the Lorde in stede of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore court, which had in lēgh an .c. cubites, and a smoth in bēdeth by the four corners. Now the altire stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entre of the house, and measured the walles by the fter doze: which were .v. cubites longe on ether syde. The thychness also of the doze on ether syde was .xx. cubites, the bēdeth .xl. cubites, and vpon stēppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pylers on ether syde one.

¶ The disposition and hew of buylding agayne the temple, & of the other thinges therin belonging.

¶ After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, which were of both sydes .xl. cubites thicke, according to the widenes of the tabernacle. The bēdeth of the doze was .x. cubites, & the walles of the doze on ether syde .v. cubites. He measured the length therof, which cōtēyned .xl. cubites, & the bēdeth .xx. When went he in & measured the doze postes: which were two cubites thicke: but the doze it self was .xl. cubites, and the bēdeth of the doze was .viij. cubites. He measured the length and bēdeth therof, which were euerie one .xx. cubites, before the temple.

¶ And he sayde vnto me: this is the holiest of all, he measured also the wall of the house, which was .vi. cubites. The chambers that stode rounde about the house, were euerie one .iij. cubites wyde: and one stode hard vpon another, wherof ther were .xxij. ther stode postes beneath by the walles rounde about the house, to beare the vp: but in the wall of the house, they were not fastened. ¶ The syde chamchambers were, & hyer & wyder, & had steppes thowme them rounde about the house.

Thus was it wyder about, & fro the lowest men myght go to the highest by & mydd chambres. I sawe also & the house was hyer hye rounde aboute. & he founden upon the syde chibres was a meterodde, & iij. vi. cubites broad. & the thichnes of the syde wall without, contened v. cubites, and so vpd the out wall of the chambers in the house.

Between the chambers was the wyde-nes. x. cubites rounde about the house. & the chambre doers stode ouer agaynst the out-wall, the one doer was toward y north, the other toward the south: and the thichnes of the out wall was v. cubites rounde about frowe the bylding that was separated to-warde the west, was x. cubites wyde: the wall of the bylding was v. cubites thicke rounde about, and the length foure score cubites & ten. So he measured the house which was an. C. cubites longe, and the separated bylding with the wall were an. C. cubites longe also. & the wydenes before the house, and of it that was separated toward the east, was an. C. cubites.

And he measured the length of the byl-ding before and behynde with the chambers vpon both the sydes: and it contyned an. C. cubites. & the innermost temple, the porch of the foze court, the syde postes, thei the had syde wyndowes and pylers rounde about oueragaynst the postes, fro the grounde vp to the wyndowes. & the wyndowes the scieles were spled ouer with bozdes: and thus was it about y doze vnto the ynnmost house: and without also. & the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was spled ouer with great bozdes. & there were che-rubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixte to cherubyns.

One cherub had two faces, the face of a malokyng asyde toward the date tree, & a lions face on the other syde. & thus was it made rounde about in all the house. & the cherubyns and date trees were made from the grounde vp about the doze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The byssokes of the temple were foursquared, and the inqpon of the sanctuare was as eue as it appened vnto me also in y visio. & The table was of wodde. iij. cubites hye and ij. cubites longe: hye coyners, the length & the waller were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: & this is the table, that shall stande before the Lorde. & the temple and the holiest of all had epher of them two dozes: and euery doze had ij. syle wyckettes which were folde in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple, there were made cherubyns and date trees, like as vpon the waller: and a grente thicke ballie of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. Al so both the sydes of the waller of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauping beames and balles, lyke as the house had.

Ch. xliij. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the priests, and the holy rebenges.

Then carped he me out into y foze court toward the north, & bzo-ught me into the chambre & stode oueragaynst the backbyldinge nozt ward, which had the length of the north. & the wydenes contened. l. cubi-tes: oueragaynst the. xx. cubites of the ynn-mer court, and agaynst the paure walke that was in the court, besyde all thek the, ther stode pillers, one oueragaynst another:
And before this chambre there was a walkyng place of. x. cubites wyde, and withyn was a waye of one cubite wyde ad thei doers toward the north. & has the best chib-res were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of the byldyng: for they bare chambrz vpon chambrz, and stode they together one vpon another, not hauping pillers lyke the foze court: thefoze were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddel to rehen from the grounde vwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chabres toward the ynnmost court vpd the foze syde of the chambers, was l. cubites longe: for the length of the ynnmost chambers in the foze court was l. cubites also: but the length therof before the temple was an. C. cubites.
These chambers had vnder them an intrin-ce of the east syde, wher by a man myght go in to them out of the foze court, thowoe the thicke wall of the foze court toward y east, ryght oueragaynst the separated bylding.
Besfoze the same byldyng vpon this syde, there were chambers also which had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambrz on the north syde of the same length and wydenes.

The ynntrance, sayth & dozes were C. also of the same manner. & the, euen lyke as the other chambrz dozes were: so were the also of the south syde. And before the waye to-warde the syngers stepped on the east syde, there stode a doze to go inat. & then sayde he vnto me: & the chibres toward the north the south which stode before the backe byl-dyng: those be holy habytatpons, wher in the prestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, must eate y most holy offeringes: and there must they lape y most holy offeringes, near offernges, synne offernges, and trespace offernges: for it is an holy place. And the prestes come therein, they shall not go in to the foze court: but (sayng they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministration, cyon, and put on other garments, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe w^ebe he had measured all the pinner-D me^e house, he brought me forth thow^e the east poynt, and mensured the same rounde about. he mensured the east syde with p^r meterob, which rounde about conteyned. v. c. meteroddes: And the north syde measured he which conteyned rounde about euē so much.
The other two sydes also toward the south and the west, which he measured, conteyned ether of them. v. c. meteroddes. So he measured all the four sydes, where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. c. meteroddes lōge, and as broad also which separated the holy from the unholy.

¶ The xliij. Chapter.

¶ He ledde the way of God going into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He went forth the poynt of the chimney of the altar, for which they were consumed and brought to naught. He is almightie and to call them againe to repentance.

So he brought me to the doze p^r the D nerth toward the east. Behold, then came the glory of the God of Israel fled out of p^r east, whole voyce was lyke a greene noyse of waters, and the earth was lychtened with his glory. his syght to loke vpon was * lyke the syght, that I sawe when I went in, what tyme as p^r egypte Quid haue bene destroyed: * and like the visyon p^r I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the glory of the Lord came into the house, thow^e the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me into the pinnerme court: and beholde, the house was full of the glory of the Lord.

I hearde one speaking vnto me out of the D house: and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, * this towne is my sente, & the place of my footsteypes, where as I wil dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall nomoze desyle my holy name: neither they, ner their kynages thow^e they thow^e home, thow^e they their hye places, & thow^e rowe the deed bodies of their kynages: which haue builded their thye sholdres i manner hard vpon my thye sholdres, & their postes almost at my postes: & a wall betwyxte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name wth their abominations, p^r they haue contempted. Wherefore, I haue destroyed them in my wthath. But now they that put a wape their whorhome & the deed bodies of their kynages out of my syght, p^r I may dwell amonge the for euermore. ¶ Therefore, O thou sonne of mā, shewe thou the howholde of Israel a tēple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednes, & measure the felus an exāple therat.

And when they be ashamed of all they workes, then shewe them the fourme & fa-vyon of the temple, the coming in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcō ther-of: p^r all the vles & ordinaunces of it, that they maye kepe and fullfill all the sayppons and customes therof.

This is the descripcō of p^r house. A house, D vpon the mount rounde about all the corners, it shalbe p^r holiest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcō and sayppon of the house. This is the measure of the altar, after the true cubite: which is a spāne longer then another cubite, his botome in the middelt was a cu-bite longe and wyde, and the ledge that w^e rounde about it, was a spāne broad. This is the heygth of the altar. From the ground to the lower steypes, the length is two cubi-tes: and the byedth one cubite: and from the lower steypes to the hygher, is foure cu-bites, and the byedth but one cubite.

* The altar was .iiij. cubites hye, and from the altar vpwarde stode .iiij. hornes, and it was .xij. cubites lōge and .xij. cubites broad, vpon the four corners: the courcing of the altar was .xij. cubites lōge & broad vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that went rounde about had halfe a cubite, and p^r botome therof rounde about one cubite: hys steypes stode toward the east. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus is y^eth the Lord God: these are the ordinaunces and lawes of the altar: in the dapr, whan it is made to offer burntofferings, and to spren-chle bloude therevpon. To the prestes, to the leuites that be of the seide of * Shadoch, and terade before me to do me keruice, sayeth the Lord God. Into these gene thou a ponge bullocke for a spnoffering: & take the bloude of hym, and sprenchle his foure hornes with all: and the foure corners of the altar couering, with the ledge that goeth rounde about, her wth shalt thou clemte it, and reconcle it.
* Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the spnoffering, and burne him in a seuerall place wth the sanctuary.

The next dape, take a goatbucke, wout blemish for a spnoffering, to reconcle the altar wth hall, lyke as it was reconcle wth the bullocke. Nowe whan thou hast made it cleane, then offre a ponge bullocke * wthout blemish, and a ramme out of the Roche wthout blemish also. Offer the befoze the Lord: and let p^r presse cast & salt therup, and reue them so vnto the Lord for a burntoffering.
Seuen dayes shalt thou lyngne eury dape a goatbuck. A ponge bullocke and a ramme of the Roche, both wthout blemish, shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcle and clemte the altar, and offre vpon it. Wth these dayes are cxyj, then vpon the eight dape and so forth, the prestes shall offre their burntofferings and beateofferings vpon the altar: so will I be mercyfull vnto you, sayeth the Lord God.

The propherye

The xliij. Chapter.

¶ He sheweth what booke of the temple is that. He is commaunded to shew the people with their offence. He be circumcised in here and in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the service of the temple: who to be refused, for whome what prece he would haue admitted into the holy place, and also theyr offence.

After this, he brought me againe to the outward booke of the sanctuary on the east syde, and that was thus. He sayd þ Lord vnto me: ¶ This booke shalbe thyll que: & not opened for any man to go thowowe it: but only for þ Lord God of Israel: yee, he shall go thowowe it, els shall it be thus thyll. The prince hym self shall come thowowe it, that he maye eat bread before the Lord. At the porch shall he come in, and there shall he go out againe. Then brought he me to the booke vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde, * the glory of the Lord fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: ¶ Þ some of man, fasten this to thyne herte: behold, and take diligent hede to all þ I will saye vnto the, concerning all the ordynances of the Lord, & all his lawes: poutie well with thyne herte the conynge in of the house and the goyng forth of the sanctuary: & tell that obsequious householde of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue now don yrough with all your abominacions, seing that ye haue brought in to my sanctuary strangers, hauping vncircumcised breddes and fleshe, where thowowe my sanctuary is bespyed, when ye offer me bread, farr, and bloude.

Thus with all your abominacions ye haue broken my conuenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordynances of my sanctuary: but seke keepers of my sanctuary, euen after your a- wne mynde. newe moone. This is nowe the burnt offering, & the pynte shall byng vnto þe Lozde vpon the sabboth: fyre lambes without blemysch, & a ram without blemysch, & an ephab for a meate offering, with the ram. & for the lābes, he maye geue as many meate offerings to them as he will: and an hyn of oyle to an ephab. In the daye of the newe moone, it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemysch, fyre lābes and a ram also without blemysch. With the bullocke he shall geue an ephab, & with the ram an ephab also for a meate offering: but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an ephab.

¶ When the pynte cometh, he shall go vnder the doze porch, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lozde in the hys solymne feaste, as many as come in by the north doze to do worship, shall go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at þe north doze. There shall none goo out at the doze, where he came in, but shall go egypte forth ouer on the other syde, and the pynte shall go in and out amonge them.

¶ Upon the solymne and hys feaste dayes this shalbe the meate offering. An ephab to a bullocke and an ephab to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he will: but euer an hyn of oyle to an ephab. Nowe when the pynte byngyth a burnt offering, & an healt offering with a fre wyl vnto the Lozde, þe east doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and healt offerings, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goth forth, the doze shalbe shut after him agayne. He shall dayly byng vnto the Lozde a lābe of a yere olde without blemysch for a burnt offering: this shall be do euery mozing.

¶ Moreover, thus sayeth the Lozde God: If the pynte geue a gyfte vnto any of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heretage perperuall, that he maye possesse it. But yf he wyl geue one of hys seruantes, some of hys heretage, it shalbe hys to the 3rd yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto the 3rd pynte: for hys heretage shalbe hys sonnes onely. ¶ The pynte also shall take none of the peoples enheretance, ner put them from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroade, but that euery man inape haue hys a wile.

¶ And he brought me thowwe the intrasse at the syde of the doze to the habitation of the sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes and skode towarde the north, and behold, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the prestes shall dygt the trespase and synnofferings, and bake meate offerings, & þey nee not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhallowe the people. So he brought me into the betmost court, rounde about all the foure corners. Scholde, in euery corner of the court, there was spt a lytic court. Yee in all the foure corners of þe court, there was made a lytic court of .xl. cubites lōge, & .xxx. cubites broade: these foure lytic courts were of one like measure: and there went a rydge wall rounde about them all foure, vnder the which there were barthes made rounde about. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the hechin where the ministers of the house shall dygt the synne offerings of the people.

¶ The vison of the waters that came out of the temple. The castra of the lande of promise, and þe byssion thereof by thyng.

¶ After this, he brought me agayne before the doze of the house: and behold, there gushyd ouer waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde, for the house skode towarde the east, that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to þe auker southwarde. Then caried he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the betmost doze that turneth eastwarde. ¶ Scholde, there came forth the water vnder the right syde. Now what the man that had the meter obde in hys hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a .xl. cubites, and then he brought me thowwe the water, eue to the angles: so he measured pet a thousande, and brought me thowwe the water agayne vnto the lūners: pet measured he a thousande, and brought me thowwe the water vnto the lynes. ¶ After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a puer, that I myght not wade thowwe it. The water was so depe, that it was nedeful to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: halt thou fene thyng, & thou some of man: and with that, he brought me to the ryuer bank agayne.

C By this ryuer vpon both the sides of the Hoze, there shall growe all maner of frute-full trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perishe: but euer be rypp at thez monethes: for thez water runneth oute of thez fynelarye. Hys frute is good to eate, and his leafe profitabill for medycine. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let thys be the border, wherein ye shall deuyde the lande vnto the xii. tribes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: * of the which lande I swowe vnto yd fathers, that it shoulde fall to poure enherytance.

This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayne see, as men go to arabada: namely hemath, Berotba, Sabaim from the borders of Damascus and hemath vnto hazar Tichon, and fyeth vpon the coastes of Hauacan. Thus the borders fro the see south, shall be hazar Euan the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of hemath, that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Hauacan and Damascus, from Saleab and the lande of Israel by Jordan and so south, fro the see coast, that lyeth eastward: and this is the east parte.

The southsyde is, from Tamar south to the * waters of styfe vnto Cadis the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greatesee fro the borders therof, tyll a in come vnto hemath: thys is the west parte.

* Thys lande shall ye parte among you, according to the tribes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heritage for you, * and for the strangeringes that dwell among you, and begettyl children. For ye shall take them among the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of youre owne howsholde and contry, and they shall haue heritage w you among the chyldren of Israel.

Loke in what frybe the strangeringe dwellecth, in the same frybe shall ye geue hym hys heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

C The xviij. Chapter.

The lottes of the xvi. tribes. The partes of the possession of the priests and of the temple, of the leuites, of the ciite, of the pyince are rekened. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the ciite.

These are the names of the tribes that lyen vpon the northsyde, by the waie of Hecion, tyll thou comest vnto hy-math and hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north helyde hemath: wun shall haue hys porcyon from the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of wun from the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Aser from the east parte vnto the west shall Sephtaly haue his porcyon.

Vpon the borders of Sephtaly from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasse haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Manasse from the east fyde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue hys porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto the west, shall Ruben haue hys porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Iuda haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Iuda fro the east parte vnto the west, ye shall set alpe one porcyon of xxv. M. meteroddes longe and wyde, like as an another porcyon fro the east fyde vnto the west, wherein the sanctuary shall stande.

* As for the porcyon that ye shall separate, out for the Lorde, it shall be xxv. M. longe & x. M. wyde. Which separated holly porcyon shall belonge vnto the: namely to the priestes, toward the north, xxv. M. and toward the west, x. M. wyde, toward the east, x. M. wyde also, & toward the south, xxv. M. longe, wherein the sanctuary of the Lord shall stande. Per, this same place shall be the priestes, that are of the children of * Sadach and he kept my holly ordynance: which went not astraye in the erreure of the children of Israel, lyke as the leuites are gone astraye: and thys separated yere that they haue of lande, shall be the most holly, harde vnto the borders of the leuites. And next vnto fyethes shall the leuites haue, xxv. M. longe, and x. M. wyde. Thys shall be on every syde, xxv. M. longe, and x. M. wyde. Of this porcyon they shall sell nothing, ne make any permutacion therof, lest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other, v. M. after the vieth fyeth by the xxv. M. shall be com: it shall belonge to the ciite and to the suburbs for habitacions, and the ciite shall stande in the myddel therof. Let this be the mesure: toward the north parte, v. C. x. iij. M. toward the south parte, v. C. x. iij. M. toward the east parte, v. C. x. iij. M. toward the west parte, v. C. and iij. M.

The suburbs harde vpon the ciite, shall haue toward the north, l. and ij. C. toward the south, l. and ij. C. toward the east, l. and ij. C. toward the west also, l. and ij. C. for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the separated holly ground: namely, x. M. toward the east, and x. ¶ The ende of the Prophecie of Ezechiel.

The booke of the prophete Daniel.

The first Chapter.

¶ The prophete sheweth the captiuitie of Iehochim kynge of Iuda. of the tounes that were in captiuitie, the kynge commaunded to chace whiche of them shoulde be taught the learninge and language of the Chaldees. They are named the kynge's seruautes, and are taken from the meate of the henge of Babylon.

In the thyrde yere of p^reny. A. ne of Iehochim king of Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon vnto Ierusalem, & beseged it: * and the Lorde deliuered Iehochim the kynge of Iuda into hys hande, with certayne ornaments of the house of God, which he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughe them into hys goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphanaz the chefe chamberlaine, that he shoulde bypunge hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel, that were come of the kynges seide and of princes, yonge twynnynges without euylmygh, but sayre and welltaughe, instructed in all wysedome, cunninge and vnderstandynge: which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake & haldereth.

Vnto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of his awne meate, and of the wyne, which he dranke hym selfe, so to nurysh them the yere: that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldren of Iuda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias. Vnto these, the chefe chamberlaine gaue other names, and called Daniel, Belshazzar: Ananias, Sadrach, Misael, Mischac: and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a popyt with hym selfe, * that he wolde not be defyled thowethe kynges meate, nee the wyne which he dronke. And this he desired of the chefe chamberlaine, lest he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlaine that he sayde vnto him: I am asprayed of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meate and drinke: lest he sye your faces to be worse lpykyn then the other schylardes of your age, and so pe Daniel make me lose my head vnto the kynge.

¶ Then Daniel answered Belshazzar, whom the chefe chamberlaine had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayd: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs haue porage to eate, & water to drinke: then loke vpon oure faces, & theys that eate of the kinges meate. And as thou seest, so deale to deale with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, & proued them. x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, they faced were better looking and faster, then all the ponge springaldes, which dyd eate of synners meate.

Thus Belshazzar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue now these foure springaldes cōnyng and lernyng in all scripture and wysdom: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of all wysons and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred, that the kynge had appointed to hyng in these yong springaldes vnto hym: the chiefe chamberlaine brought the before Nabuchodonosor, and the kynge communed with them. But among them all were founde none soche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge which in all wysdom and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of them, founde them ten tymes better, then all the sothsayers and charmers, & were in all his realme. And Daniel abode vntill, vnto the first yere of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyeth of the both the dreame and the interpretacyon thereof. Ther answer that they cannot shew it. The kynge commaundeth all the wylde men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyeth tyme to soluite the questyon. The kyng: openeth the mynster vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, & sheweth hym how dreame and the interpretacyon thereof. Of the celestiall charge and gouernour of Chyren.

In the seconde yere of the raigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, & where shew his spete was vered, and his slepe wake from hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call to gether all the sothsayers, charmers, witches and cilders, for to shewe the kynge his dreame. So they came, and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto the: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spete was so troubled therwith, that I haue cleue forgotten, what I dreamed. vpon this the Chalders answered the kynge & in the Syriack speache: O kynge, God haue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruantes the dreame, and we shal thewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chalders theyr answer and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon thereof, ye shal dye, and your houses shalbe pyled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meapunge thereof, ye shal haue of me gyftes, & rewardes and greate honour: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, saying: I perceaue of a trouth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se, that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore ye wyl not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne a wylfulde word, wane wordes, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shall I knowe, yf ye can shewe me, what it meaneth. vpon this, the Chalders gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no mā vpon earth, that can tell the thyng, which the kynge speaketh of: yee, there is neither kynge, prince nor lord, that euer asked soche thynges at a sothsayer, charmer or Chalde: for it is a very harde matter, yf the kynge requyeth. Neither is there any, that can certifie the kynge thereof, excepte the goddes: whole dwyllenge is not amonge the creatures.

For the which cause the kynge was wroth with greate indignation, and commaunded to destroye all the wylde men at Babylon: & the proclamation went forth, and the wylde men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kinges steward, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth already to kill such as were wylde at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch bringe them yf thynges be byte. Why hath the kynge proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. vpon this, wente Daniel vnto, and besyde the kynge, that he myght haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, & then came he home agayne & shewed the thyng vnto Ananias, Misael & Azarias his companions: yf they shulde beseeche the God of heauyn for grace in this secret, that Daniel & his fellows with other soche as were wylde in Babylon, perished not. The was yf mystry shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniel prayed the God of heauyn. Daniel also cried loude, & sayde: O that the name of God nyght be payed for euer and euer, for wysdom and strength are his hwyne: & he chaungeth the tymes and ages: & he putteth downe kynnges, he setteth vp kynnges: & he geueth wysdom vnto yf wylse, & vnderstandyng to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secrettes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darkenesse: & for the lyght dwelleth with hym. I thank the, & praye yf (O thou God of my fathers) yf thou hast sent me wysdom & strength, & hast shewed me yf thyng, that we besyde of the, for thou hast opened the kynnges matter vnto me.

vpon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had ordered to destroye the wylde at Babylon: he went vnto him, & sayde: destroye not soche as are wylde in Babylon, but bringe me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel into the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue founde a man amonge the prisoners of Iuda, that shall haue the kyngde the interpretacion. ¶ He answered the kyng, & sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. At thou be that castt shewe me the dycame, whiche I haue seene, & the interpretacion therof: Daniel answered the kyng to his face, & sayde: As for thyse secretes, for the which the kyng maketh inquisicion: it is neither the wysse, the soocerer, the charmer nor the deuill counsaier, that can certifye the kyng of it. * Only God in heauen can open secrettes, and hee it is, that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

* daniel. i. c.

¶ By dycame, & that which thou hast seene in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this: Waking thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come hereafter. So he that is y opener of mysteries, telled the, what is for to come. As for me, this secretes is not shewed me, for eny wyldome that I haue, more then eny other tpyng: but only y I myght shewe y kyngde the interpretacio, and that he myght knowe y thoughtes of his awne harte. ¶ Thou kyngde sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was marvellous greate, and hys vylage grimme. The Image heade was of fyne golde, hys brest & armed of siluer, his body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* daniel. ii. c.

* ¶ This thou sawest tpyl, the tyme y, with out eny handes, there was heruen of, a stone which smote the Image vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to powder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peeces: and became lyke the chaffe of come, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the sonner floores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a grente moystapne, which fulfyllith the whole earth: This is the dycame. And now we wylle we the before the kyng, what it meaneth.

* daniel. ii. c.

* ¶ Kyngde, thou art a kyngde of kynges: for the God of heauē hath geue the a kyngdome, ryche, strength and maiesty: y hath deliuered the all thynges, that are amonge the children of men: the bestes of the felde, & the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer the all. ¶ Thou art that golden head. After y there shall arise another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thynne. ¶ The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, & haue dominacion in all lades. ¶ The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: yee, euen as yron breaketh eny thyng downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

¶ Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whiche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it for so moche as thou hast seene the yron mixte with the claye.

¶ The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifyeth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partly stronge and partly weakke. And where as thou sawest yron mixte with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the fete of symple people, & yet not cōtayne one with another, lyke as yron wyl not be souldered with a potherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall y God of heauen set vp an euerlasting kyngdome which shall not perishe, & his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yee, the same shall breake & destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

¶ And where as thou sawest, that without eny handes there was cut out of y a mounte a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, y earth, the syluer and golde in peeces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. ¶ This is a true dycame, and the interpretacion of it is sure.

* daniel. ii. c.

¶ Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, & bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offre meat offerings and sweete oboures vnto hym. ¶ The kyng answered Daniel, and sayde: yee, of a trouth youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secrettes: seyinge thou canst discouer this mystere. So the kyng made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

* daniel. ii. c.

* ¶ He made him ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated y kyng for Shadrach, Meshach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remayned still in the court by the kyngde.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The kyngde setteth by a golden Image, which he commaunded to be worshipped. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednago are crucified, because they despised the kynges commaundment. They are brought vnto the fenge and commaunded to be cast into a burninge. They refuse to do it and are put into a burninge oven. By beleefe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God alote the sight of the myracle.

¶ Nabuchodonosor the kyngde caused a golden Image to be made, wherby was ix. cubytes hys, and hys cubytes thyrche. ¶ This he made to be set vp in the felde of Bura in the land of Babylon & sent oute to gather together the dykes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the dytches and shewes: with all the rulers of the land: that they myght come to y dedicacyō of the Image which Nabuchodonosor

nosoz the hyngne had let vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debtyes and chieues with all rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycarynge of the Image, that Nabuchodonosoz the hyngne had let vp.

Nowe whē the y^e shode before the Image, which Nabuchodonosoz let vp, y^e hel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kyndredes and tungen, to you be it sayde: that whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shalbe blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fall downe and worshyppe y^e golde Image, that Nabuchodonosoz the hyngne hath let vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge oven. Therefore, when all the folke herde the noyse of y^e trompettes that were blown, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies & all kynde of Melody, then all y^e people, kyndredes and nacyns fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golde Image, that Nabuchodonosoz the hyngne had let vp.

Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldees, that wenye euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the hyngne Nabuchodonosoz: O hyng, God laue thy lyfe for euer, Thou beynge hyngne hast geuen a commaundement, that all men whē they heare y^e noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selues toward the golden Image: whoso then fell not downe & worshipped not that, he shulde be cast into an hote burnynge oven. Nowe are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast let ouer the officers of the lande of Babylon: namely, Shadrach: Mischach and Abednago. These men (O hyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yee, they wil not serue thy goddes, ner bowe them selues to y^e golden Image, that thou hast let vp.

Then Nabuchodonosoz in a cruell wyath and dyspleasure, commaunded, that Shadrach Mischach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before y^e hyngne. Then Nabuchodonosoz spake vnto them, & sayde: What? O Shadrach Mischach and Abednago, whyll not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe poure selues to the golden Image, that I haue let vp. Well, becomy herafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshyppe the Image which I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not, ye shall be cast immediately into an hote burnynge oven. Let se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you out of my handes: Shadrach, Mischach and Abednago answered the hyngne, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosoz, we ought not to consente unto the in this matter, for why? oure God whō we serue, * is able to kepe vs fro the hote burnynge oven. (O hyngne) and can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet shalt thou knowe (O hyng) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerēce to y^e Image, which thou hast let vp. Then was Nabuchodonosoz full of indignacye, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Shadrach, Mischach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded, that the oven shuld be made seue tynges hotter, then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in his hoste, for to bynde Shadrach, Mischach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge oven.

So these men were bounde in their cotes hosen, thers wth their other garnyments, & cast into the hote burnynge oven: for the hynges commaundement was so strayer, and the ouf was exceeding hote. As for the me that put in Shadrach, Mischach & Abednago, y^e flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three me Shadrach, Mischach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge oven, byngne faste boilde. The Nabuchodonosoz y^e kyng maruelled, and shode vp in all hast: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: why not ye call these three me bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the king: Yee, O hyngne, he answered, and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure me going lowe in the myddell of the fyr, and not byngne scorpye: and the fourth is as lyke y^e sone of God to loke vnto.

Vpon this went Nabuchodonosoz vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge oven: he spake also, and sayde: O Shadrach, Mischach and Abednago, ye seruantes of the hye God, go forth, & come hyther. And so Shadrach, Mischach & Abednago went out of the fire. Then the dukes, lordes & nobles, & the kynges counsell came together to se these me, & vpo whō the fyr had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In somoch y^e very here off their bryd was not burnt, & theyr clothes vchaunged: yee, there was no smell of fier felt vpo them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosoz, and sayde, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Mischach and Abednago: * which hath sent his angell, & defended his seruantes, & put the fyr to rest in him: that haue altered the kynges commaundement: and leoperde theyr bodies the vpo: rather then they wolde serue o^r worshyppe any other God, excepte their awie God only.

Therefore I wil and commaunde, that all people, kyndredes and tungen, which speake any blasphemie agaynst y^e God of Shadrach, Mischach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shalbe pypled: Because, * there is no God that maye save, as theys. So the hyngne promoued promoted Sidrach, Misach, & Abdenago, in the lande of Babylon.

The fifth Chapter.

¶ Sidrach, Misach, & Abdenago inter: uereth it. Sidrachodonosor is out of his realme, and eateh with beasts. He confesseth the power of God, and is rethorn into his kingdome.

* Dan. iij. c.

* Sidrachodonosor hynged vnto all people, kured, and cungeth that dwyl vpon the whole earth: peare be multiplied amog you. I thought it good to thewe the tokens and maruelous workes: y the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O, howe great are his tokens, and howe myghtie are his wonders: * his kingdome is an euerlasting kingdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Sidrachodonosor beynge at rest in myne house, and floshyng in my palace, sawe a drame, which made me afraied: y the thou-ghes that I had vpon my bedd, with the visions of myne head, troubled me. ¶ Then sente I out a commission, that all they which were of wyldome at Babilon shulde be brou-ghte before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the drame. So there came the forthspers, chamers, Galbers and commers of deuels: to whom I tolde the drame, but what it betokned, they coude not thewe me: tyll at y last, there came one Daniel (other wyse called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath the spere of y holy goddess in him, to whom I tolde the drame, sayng: O Balthazar, thou prince of Sotheapers: for so muche as I knowe, that thou hast the spere of the holy Goddess and no secrete is hye from the, tell me therfore, what the vy-sion of my drame: that I haue sente maye signifie. I sawe a visyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre: vpon the grounde, which was very hye, greate and myghtie: the beggyn reached vnto the heauen, and the byed extended to all the endes of the earth: hye leaues were fayre, he had very muche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The beastes of the feild had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes thereof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a visyon vpon my bed: behold, a watcher of the holy one came downe fro heauen, & cryed myghtie, sayng. He we downe y tree, beake of his boughes, & shake of his leaues, and scatere his frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye fro vnder him, and the foules from his boughes.
Further thes, I sawe the grounde of hye rote styll in the earth, & bynde him vpon the play-ne felde, with cheynes of yron and sle. With the be we of heauen shall he be wet, & he shall haue hye parte in the beves of the grounde with other wyld beasts.

¶ That mans herte of hye shall be take from hym, and a beastes herte shall be geuen hym, tyll seuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This drame of the watcher, is a comma-ment ground and fought out in the coun-cell of him, that is most holy: to learne me for to understande, that the best hath power ouer the hyngdomes of men, & geneth vnto to whom it lyeth him, and bringeth the deceit out of men ouer them. ¶ This is the drame, that I hyng Sidrachodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifith: for so muche as all y wyse men of my kingdome are not able to thewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spere of the holy Goddess is in the.

¶ Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) tolde his pence by the space of an houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake, & sayde: O Balthazar, lett nether the drame nor the interpretacyon thereof fear the. Balthazar answered, laug: O my Lorde, this drame happed to thine enemies, and the interpretacyon to thine aduersaries.
As for the tree that thou sawest which was so greate & myghtie, whole byeght reached vnto the heauen, and hye byed vnto all the world: whose leaues were fayre, and y frute much: vnder the which the beastes of y felde had thei habitacyon and vpon whose boughes the foules of the ayre byd st.

¶ Euen thou (O hyng) art the tre, greate and stronge. Thy greates increace, & reacheth vnto the heauē, so doth thy power to y endes of the earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, y came downe from heauē, and sayde: be we downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron & sle: he shall be wet with the be we of heauē, and his parte shall be with y beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym: ¶ This (O hyng) is the interpretacyon, pce, it is the very pence of hym, that is hye of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the hyng.

¶ Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beastes of y felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an ox.
¶ Thou must be wet with y dewe of the heauen: pce, seuen yeres shall come, & go vpon the, tyll thou knowe, * y the best hath vnto the hyngdomes of men, & geneth vnto to whom he lyeth. ¶ Joyner, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shulde be left styll in the grounde: it beokeneth, y the kingdome that remaine whole vnto the, after thou hast lerne to knowe, that y power commeth from heauen. Wherefore, O hyng, be content with my coucell, that thou mayest redeme thy synnes with almospice: * and thy ne offences with mercy to poore people: for thys shall be an helpe of thine erreure.

All the

All these thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

F So after xii. monethes, the kyng walked up and downe in the palace of the kingdome of Babylon, and sayde. This is the greates ctye of Babylon, which I my selfe) with my power and strength) haue made a kynges court, for the honour of my magistye. Whyle these wordes were yet in þs kynges mouth there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spokē: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mys company: thy dwellinge shall be with the bestes of þs felde, so þ thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, tyll thine yeres become and gone ouer the. euen vntyll thou knowest, that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he may geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him. The depef same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor, so þ he was cast out of mys company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll hys beares were as great as Eagles feathers, and hys nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

G When thys tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauē, and myne vnderstandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the hyghst, I magnified and prayd him that lyueth for euermore, & whose power endureth alwaye, and hys kyngdome from one generacyon to another: in comparyson of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

H he handleth accordyng to his will, amōg the powers of heauen & amonge the inhabitants of the earth: and there is none ymage respyle his hande, or laye: what dost thou? At þ same tyme was myne vnderstandinge gyven me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kyngdome, to my bight, and to myne awne shap agayne. My great estates and Princes loughe vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater wordshyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauē: for all his wordes are true, and hys wayes epyght. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bypunge them downe.

¶ The v. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor of Babylon, abusinge the vessels of the temple, seethen haue wofulnes in the wall. The forbesworne caities of the kynges, cannot expode the wynges. Daniel to callid, which reserchit, and in respect he is as an oxe, he bypunge flayme. Daniel is: vnto in his coloure.

Kyng Belshazzar made a great banquet to his thousand Lordes: with all these thousande he made great feere, and when he was drunken with wyne commaunded to bring hym the golden and syluer vessels * which hys father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kyng & his Lordes with his queene and concubynes myght drinke thereout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his Lordes with his queene and concubynes drinke out of them. They drinke wyne, and playd they Idoles of golde, syluer, copper yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared 13 syngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wutpunge, ryght ouer agaynst the candlelycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ropes of his body shoke, and hys kynces smote one agaynst þ other. * wherfore the kyng cried myghtely, that they shuld bypunge hym the charmers. Calders and conuurers of deuils. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this wuting, & shewe me the playne meaninge thereof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrd part of my kyngdome.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude never reade þ wuting, nece shewe the kyng what it signified. ¶ He was the kyng sore afraied, in so much, þ hys coloure changed, and his Lordes were sore bered. ¶ So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng & his Lordes, þ queene went vp herselfe into the banquet house, and spake vnto the kyng, sayinge: O hyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. ¶ For why: there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sperte of the holy goddes within him, & as it was sene in thy fathers dayes, he hath vnderstandinge and wyldome lyke þ goddes. ¶ The kyng Nabuchodonosor the father made this man chiefe of the soothsayers, charmers, Calders and reabers of destines: because that soche an abundance sperte, knowledge & wyldome (to repounde bycames, to open secrettes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee, euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde. Art thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyng brought out of Ierusalem? I haue heard speake of the, that thou hast the sperte of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandinge, and that there hath bene greates wyldome founde in the.

Chbe. pl. Chapter.

¶ Daniel is made ruler over the Kingdom. The Image gratification of an arte against Daniel. The proclamacion of the acte, whereof Daniel is accused into the Kenge as strangefournour. He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundment of the Kenge. He is delivered by fapth in God. Danieles confourer are put into the Lyons to betoyn in comber. Danielus by the pporiacion of a beccre, magnified the God of Daniel.

It pleased Dar^{ty} to set ouer his lung-dome an .C. and .xx. lordes, whyche shulde be in all his kyngdome about.
Aboue these he set the Wyynes of whom Daniel was one; that the Lordes myght ge-ue accompryse vnto them, and the kynge to be vnderfresch.

But Daniel exceeded all these Princes and Lordes, for the Spirit of God was plenteous in him: so that the kynge was mynded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the Princes and Lordes sought to pryke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kynge do-mine: yet coulde they fynde none occasion ne faulte vpon hym. For wher he was so faith-full, that there was no blame ne dishonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we will get no quarrell agaynst thyng Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hyss God. Upon this, wrote the pynners Lordes together vnto the kinge, & sayde thus vnto hym: kynge Darings, G God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the grate estates of the rrealme: as the Prynces, Dukes, & Hen-tours and Iudges, are determed to put out a commandement of the bynne, & to make a sure Statute: namely, þat whoso despayre any peticion, ether of any God or man (within this .xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, & bynne: the same person may be call into the Lyons denne. Wherefore, O bynne, con-fyrme thou this statute, and make a wyrryng: that the thing which the Prynces and Iudges haue orderyed be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wyrtynge, and co-fyrmed it. Howe when Daniel vnderstode þ the wyrtynge was made, he wente into hys houfe: and y windowes of his wall towarde Jerusalem stode ope. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticion, and prayed bys God, Ike as bes manner was to do afore tyme.

Then theſe men made ſearchē, and founde Daniel keepinge hys pꝛiſon. & wꝛappinge unto hys God. So they came to the kynge, & ſpoke befoꝛe him concerninge his commandement, ſayinge: O kynge, haſt thou not ſub-ſcribed the ſtatute, wꝛithin xxx. dayes who ſo requyꝛeth his pꝛiſon of any God oꝛ man, but onely of thy ſelfe, O kynge: he ſhalbe caſt into the berne of the Lyons? The kynge anſwered.

swered, and sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that maye not be broken.

D Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the prisoners of Iuda & kynge, regardeth neither he, ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his petition vnto the kynge a daye. When the kynge hearde these wordes, he was sore grieved, and wolde haue exiled Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto y^e sunne went downe, so p^rsent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceyving the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) y^e the lawe of the Medes & Perses is, that y^e commandement & statute which the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then y^e king had them bycought Daniel, and they call hym into the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, eue he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layd vpon the hole of y^e denne: this the kynge sealed with his owne ringe, and with the signet of his vncles: that the kynge's commandement concerninge Daniel, shoulde not be broken.

So the kynge wente into his palace, and ate no meate y^e nyght neither was there any inmytelly brought in before hym, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the mornynge at the beake of the daye, y^e kynge arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yee, the kynge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaut of the lyvinge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge. O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * y^e God hath sent his angel, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For wy^r myne vngyltyllnes is founde out before hym. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceedinge glad, & commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurt was founde vpon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, y^e kynge commaunded to lynch them, and to cast the in the Lyons denne: them, the y^e chyldren and the y^e wyues. * So the Lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all the bones a sonder, so eue they came at the grounde.

* After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people, kyntredes, and luges, that dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplied with you. y^e commandement is, in all my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in a we of Daniels God.

* For he is the lyvinge God, which aby^r * Dan. xliij. & bertheuer: his kyngdome shall not faile, and his poweris euermastynge. * This he that dwelleth, and laureth: he doth wonders and maruelous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

Chapter.

As hit is of sig. beate is in the name Daniel. The blyss is interpreted of sig. lyngdome of the world of the power to increase of Antichrist. Of the euerting of the house of Chylit.

In y^e first yere of Baltazar king of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his head vpon his bedde. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake and sayde: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde the four wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and four grate beasts came vpon the see, one vnlke another.

The first was as a Lyon, and yet had he 4 leges wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his feete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans heart.

Beholde, y^e secōde beast was lyke a bea^rte, & stode vpon the one fyte. Among his teeth in his mouth he had iij. grate long teeth, & it was sayde vnto him. Arise, cate vp, moch flesh. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leopard, this had wynges as a foule, & eate foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had great pson teeth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the erthe vnder his feete. It was fater vnlke the other bestes that were before it: for it had x. c. hornes, wherof I tolke good beede.

And beholde, there came y^e among the, another lytell hoine, before whō there were chere of the first hornes plucked awaye. Beholde, this hoine had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakynge presumption thynghes.

* I looked vll the sentes were prepared, and tyll y^e olde aged sat him downe. His clotheinge was as whete as snowe, and the beares of his head lyke the pure woll. His troue was lyke the fyre flame, and his wheelies as the burning fyre. There drey forth a fyre stream, and went out from hym. * A thousand tymes a thousande serued him. * x. tymes sent thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes omyted. Then tolke I beede there vnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which the hoine spake. I beholde,

The Prophecy

I behelde, tyll the beaſte was ſlayne, and his body deſtroyed, * geuen our to be wyent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beaſtes alſo it was taken awaye, but they lyues were prolonged for a tyme and ſeaſon. I ſawe in a viſyon by nyght, and behold, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the ſonne of a man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him. Then gaue he him * power & diguſte regall, that all people, trybes and ſtires ſhoulde ſerue him. * his power is an euillkinging power, which ſhall neuer be put downe: & his kyngdome endureth incorrupte. My herte was vexed, * I Daniel had a troubled ſpyte wiſthin me, & the wiſdom of my head made me aſtayed: tyll

I gat me vnto * one of them that ſate by, to knowe yf truely, concerning all theſe thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderſtande the interpretation of the thynges.

¶ Theſe foure great beaſtes, are foure kynges which ſhall aryſe out of the earth. Theſe ſhall take in the kyngdome of the ſapnetes of the moſt myght, and poſſeſſe it ſpall moze & moze for a longe ſeaſon. After theſe I requyred diligently to knowe the truely, concerning the fourth beaſt, which was ſo farre vniſhe y other beaſtes, and ſo horrible: whole teeth were of yron, and his napes of braſſe: which deuoured and deſtroyed, and ſtamped the reſyde vnder his feet. I deſpyed, alſo to knowe the truely, as touching the * ten hoznes that he had vpon his heade, and theſe other which came vp afterwarde, before whoſe face there fell downe the, which hozne had eyes and a mouth that ſpake preſumptuous thinges, and looked with a grimmyr viſage then theſe fellows. I behelde, and the ſame hozne made battayll agaynſt the ſapnetes, yee and ſo gat the victory of them, vntill the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was geuen to the cheſt ſyntes: and tyll the tyme that the ſapnetes had the kyngdome in poſſeſſion, he gaue me theſe anſwere. That fourth beaſt ſhalbe y fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it ſhalbe moze then all other kyngdomes, it ſhall deuoure, treade downe, and deſtroye all other landes.

¶ The ten hoznes, are ten kynges, y ſhall aryſe out of y kyngdome, after whom there ſhall ſtande y another, which ſhalbe greater then the fyrſt. He ſhall ſubdue theſe kynges, & ſhall ſpeake wordes agaynſt y myght of all: he ſhall deſtroye the ſapnetes of the moſt myght, * and the myghte, y he make chaunge tymes and lawes. ¶ He ſhalbe geue vnder his power, & vntill a tyme, two tymes, & halfe a tyme.

¶ But the iudgement ſhalbe kepte, ſo that his power ſhalbe take from him, for he ſhall be deſtroyed, and perſh at the laſt. As for y kyngdome, power and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it ſhalbe geue to the holy people of the moſt myght, * whole kyngdome is euillkinging: yee, all powers ſhall leſue and obeye hym. ¶ Thus farre extendeth the wordes. ſeuertheles, I Daniel was to beſed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged * but the wordes I kepte ſtill in my herte.

¶ The goate had a maruelous weethen hozne betwixte his eyes, & came vnto the ramme, that had the two hoznes: wher I had ſene afore by the crier ſpake and ranne fearfully vpon him with his myght. I ſawe him brayne nye vnto the ramme, bringe very ſearce vpon hym: yee, he gaue hym ſuche a ſtroke, that he brake his two hoznes. ¶ After that y ramme ſo much ſtrength as to ſtande beſore him: but he caſt hym downe, troade hym vnder his feet: & no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of his power.

¶ The goate waxed exceedingly greafe, and wher he was at the ſtrongeſt, his greafe, hozne was broken alſo. ¶ Then grewe there other foure ſochlyke in the lande, toward the iiii. wyndes of the heauen. Yee, out of one of the leſt of theſe hoznes, there came y yet another hozne, which waxed maruelous greafe: towarde the ſouth, towarde the eaſt, and to warde the ſayde pleaſant lande. ¶ It grewe vp to the hoof of heauen, wher of it dyd caſt ſome downe to the grounde, and of the ſtars alſo, and trode them vnder feet.

D And thus I hearde one of the sainctes speake, which thus saide vnto one that asked this question, howe longe shall this vision of the daye sacrifice and of the waunge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote: And he answered him: vnto þe euerynges & the morninge, euen two thousand and three hundredth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be cleayed agayne.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this vision: and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the riuert of Tisap, which crept, and sayd: O Daniel, make this man vnderstande the visio. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me, O thou sonne of man, marche well, for in the last tyme shall this visio be fulfilled. Now as he was speake vnto me, I wroch saynte, so þe I syncke downe to the groude. But he toke holde vpon me, and seer me vp agayne, sayinge: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in þe last watch: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the hyng of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the hyng of Syche lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall hyng. But where as it brake, and foure other coles vp in the breaste: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp 4 foure hyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these hyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall arise a hyng of an vngodly cast, which shalbe wyle in darke speakehynges.

He shalbe myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroie aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospre: he shall laye the stronge and holy people. And thozow he craftynesse, fulshed shall prospre in his hande, his deite shalbe proude, and many one shall be put to death in his weithynesse. He shall lade vp agaynlyt the wynges of wynges, * but he shalbe destroyed withoute doute. And thus visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as þe euerynges and the morninge. * Therfore wyte thou vþ this sight, for it wylbe longe oꝝ it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel deerp saynte, so that I laye speche certayne dayes: but when I awoke vp, I wente aboute the hynges busynesse, and inquired at the visyon, neuer theles no man knewe of it.

¶ The .ix. Chapter.

¶ Daniel desired to haue that performe of god which he had promysed concerninge the returne of the people from theyr banishment in babilon. A true confusyon. Daniel praye is heard. * O Loꝝde, thou greute and fearfull god, * thou that keepst couenaunt and mercy wryth them, which loue the, and do thy commaundmentes. * We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe: yee, we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgements.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the 25 prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and princes, to oure forefathers, and to all the people of the lãde. * O Loꝝd, righteously belongeth vnto the, vnto vs wretchynesse nothyng: but open shame: as it is come to passe thes daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yee, vnto all Israel, whether they be farre oꝝ nye: thozow we out all lãdes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offenders, that they had done agaynlyt the.

¶ Yee, O Loꝝde, vnto vs, to oure kynges & princes, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, * that haue offended the belongeth ope shame. But vnto the, O Loꝝde oure god, prayeth mercy and forgiveness. As for vs, we are gone backe from hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Loꝝde oure god, to walke in his lawes, * which he layed before vs by his seruantes the prophetes: yee, * all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not hercheued vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore, the curse & othe * that is wryten in the lawe of Moyses the seruant of god (agaynlyt wds we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. * And he hath performed his word, wherby he spake agaynlyt vs, a agaynlyt oure iudges that iudged vs: to bynyng vpon vs such a greate plage, as neuer was vnder beauru, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. ¶ Where appereth howe Daniel a man clothed in men, whych sheweth hym to be a frend.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wyle called Balthazar) a matter, yet, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto this.
He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the visyō was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of the weles, so that I had no lust to eate bread: for flesh and wyne there came none wrythin my mouth: No, I byd not oure anoynte my self, tyll the wyle this weles were out.

Vpon the xxiij. daye of the first moneth, I was by the grente floure, called Tygris
* I lyft by myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, a man clothed in lyn, whose loynes were gyrded by with fyne golde of Arab: his body was lyke the Chyrolite stone, bys face (to loke vpon) was lyke hyghenynge, bys eyes as the flame of fyre, bys armes and fete were lyke fawze glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

* I Daniel alone sawe this visyō: * the men that were wryth me, sawe it not: but a grente fearfulness fell vpon them, to the hed awaye, and byd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this grent vision, so longe tyll there remayned homore strength wrythin me: yet, I lost my colour clene, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of bys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And behold, an hande touched me, whych set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayng vnto me. * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I now sent. *

And when he had sayde these wordes, I fode vp rebyng. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for wher thou shalt be ched my lippes one veyr lyke vnto a man.

Then opened I my mouth, and ſayde vnto yet a myghty kyng, that ſhall rule weth greate dominion, and do what hym liſt. *

And as ſoone as hyſ kyngdome cometh vp, it ſhall be deſtroyed, and deuoyd towarde the four wyndes of the heaumen. They that come after hym, ſhall not haue ſuche power agayne into hyſ awne lande. Wherefore hyſ ſonnes ſhall be diſpleaſed, & ſhall gather toge ther a myghty greate hoode of people: and one of them ſhall come, and go thozow lye a wnter ſlowde: then ſhall he returne, and go forth weth deſpyng and boastyng vnto his awne lande.

Then the kyng of the ſouth ſhall be a

The booke of the Prophete Oeas.

The first Chapter.

The first chapter of the prophet Oeas. Oeas be-cometh an heretick by his wife, signified by the letters of the prophet. And the instruction is the great of the prophet, in the prophet.

his is the word of the Lord that came unto Oeas the sonne of Beer * in the dayes of Oeas, Joabab, ^{scilicet. freng.} Iudas and Ieremias kinges of Iuda: and in the tyme of Ieroboam sonne of Ioas king of Israel.

At first, when the Lord spake unto Oeas he sayde unto hym: * Go thy waye, sake an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the lande hath committed grete whoredome agaynst the Lord. So he wen-te, & toke Somer the daughter of Belaiam: wherby conceived, and brought forth a sonne.
 And the Lord sayde unto hym: call his name Ieremias, for * I will chastyge the bloude of Ieremias upon the house of Je-ha, & will bringe the kingdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Ieremias.

So he conceived yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde unto hym: call her name Lozubahamah: that is, not opstaying mercy: * for I will have no ptye upon the house of Israel, but forget them and put the cleane out of remembrance. * Heereby delete, I will have mercy upon the house of Juda, and will save the, even thowse the Lord dereth: God. But I will not delpoure them thowse eny bowe, swerde, battell, bowe or hostmen.

Nowe, whē he had weaned Lozubahamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne.
 Then sayde he: call his name, Loamī. for wherby are not my people, therefore will not I be poure God. And though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the see, wherby can merbe be measured nec tolde: yet in the place wherē it is sayde unto the * ye be not my people: even there shall it be shewreposed of them: * they be the chyldren of the lpyngng God. * Then shall the chyldren of Iuda and the chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne and chose them selues one head, and then departe out of the lande: for grete shall be the vayne of Israel.

The ii. Chapter.

The people is called to be separated.

All poure brethren, that they are my people: and poure sytreme, that they have opstayed mercy. * For poure mother, pe shall chide by her,

to be eny people, unto that same tyme.
 Then shall the people be delpoured, yet, all thole that be sounde wyrtten in the boke. * And ny of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shall awake: some to the everlastyng lyfe, some to perpetuall shame & reproche. * The wyse (such as have taught other) shall glyster, as the wynginge of heauen: and thole have instructed the multitude unto gobyne-se, shall be as flarres, wynde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut up these wodes, and seale the boke till the last tyme: * And ny shall go aboute here and there, and then shall knowledge increase. So I Daniel loked, & beholde, there stode * (as it were) other two: one upon thys syde of the water, the other upon pander syde. And one of the sayd unto hym, which was clothed in lpyen and stode aboute upon the waters of the founte. how lge shall it be to the ende of these wo-derous woordes?

* Then herde I the man with the lpyen clothes, which stode aboute upon the waters of the founte: whē he helde up by * epyth and left hande unto heauen, and swaie by hym wherby lpyeth for ever: that it shall tary for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: * whē the power of the holy people is cleane scatred abroad, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not.
 D Then sayde I: O my Lord, what shall happen after that? he answered: Go thy waye Daniel, for these woordes shall be closed up & sealed, till the last tyme: and many shall be cyfied, clenid & reped. * (as it were in tyme) But the vngobyll shall lpye wplydly * and thole wicked (as many of them as they be) shall have no vnderstadyng. As for such as have vnderstadyng, they shall regard it. And fro the tyme forth the daye of offpryng shall be put downe & the abhominable desolacion sett up, there shall be * 4. C. C. C. dayes. * O well is hym, that waerth, & cometh to the thousande. iiij. C. and xxx. dayes.

So thou thy waye nowe tyll it be ended: take thy rest, and byde thy lot, till the dayes haue an ende.

Of the loue of God towarde the people.

Then sayeth the Lorde to me: * So yet I
* Jer. vi. 4. they waye & wote an abouteuous woma, wth thy neyghboure loueth, as the Lorde doth the chyldren of Israel: how be it they haue receyued to strange goddes, & a loue the wyne kanner. * So I gat her

* Thus the chyldren of Israel shall saye a great while without kynge and prince, without offering and aulter, without prestes & reuelacion. But afterwarde shall the chyldren of Israel conuerse, and seke the Lorde the God, and * woud they synge: in the latter dayes they shall worshippe the Lorde, &

Therefore I comblet thou in the daye tyme * & the prophet to the in ynght. I will byng thy mother to piece, and wyfe: * my people * Jer. vi. 4. peris, because they haue no knowlege. Seeinge then thou hast refused vnderstanding, therefore I will refuse the also: so that thou shalt namore be my people. And for so moche as thou hast forgotte the lawe of thy God, I
* Jer. vi. 4. will will also forget the childe. & he more they increased in the multitude, & more they syned against me, therefore will I chage the; because into shame. * & they ease by the synes of my people, and copage them in theyr wickednesse. * & thus the pest is become lyke the people. Wherefore I will punish them for these wicked wayes, and reward the according to their awne ymaginacions. * They shall ease, & not have ynough. They have had whozdom, therefore shall they not know where: and why they have forsaken the Lorde and not regarded hym.

Whozdome, wyne & bronchelles taketh the beste awaye. * & by people as he counsell at their stockes, these thasse must tell the. For an whozdyne mynde hath delcrued them so that they comitte fornicacion agaynst theyr God. * & they make sacrificers upon the hye mountaynes, & burne their incense upon the hills, yee, among the oaks, grouces & bushes, for there are good thowdones. * Therefore, your daughters are become harlots, and your spouses have broken theyr wedlocke. I will not punish your daughters for beinge despyed, & your wyves & betaine whozres: * because the fathers the selues have medled w harlots, & offered w unhylfices: but the people I will not understode must be punished.

Though thou Israelst disposed to playe the harlot, yet thou shalt not thou have offended, O Juda: thou shalt not have runne to Gilgal: ner haue gone vp to Bethuuen, ner haue sworne, the Lord thy God. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel, let him go. Their bronchennes hath put the backe, & brought them to whozdom. Their rulers toun rewards, bynges, (saye they) to their awne shame. And whyn shall take holde of theyr fathers, and they shall be confounded in theyr offeringes.

¶ Against the whoredoms and rulers of Israel.

Why prelates: hence this, take heede, O thou householde of Israel: geue care, O thou kingly house, if it were your pette to be Judgement done, but you are become a snare vnto Egyptus, and a spard net vnto the mount of Chabor. They shall sacrificers by beapes, and turne farr fro the Lord, & I haue bene a rebuker of the all. * I know Ephraim well ynough, & Israel is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: & Israel is despyed. They are not mynded to turne vnto theyr God, for they haue an whozdy heart, so that they cannot knowe the Lord. * But the payre of Israel will be rewarded him in theyr daye, yee, both Israel & Ephraim shall fall for theyr wickednesse, and Juda w the also. * & they shall come with theyr shepe and bullockes: to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from the. As for the Lorde, they haue refused him, and brought vp Baalbe children: a moneth therefore shall deuoute them with theyr popes, slowe with the thawines at Gibeon, and w the trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethel vpon the pyllye of Ben Jamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layed waste, therefore byd I faithfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Juda become lyke them: that remoue the landmarkers, therefore will I poure out my wrath vpon the lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why: they folowe the doctrynes of vngodly men. Therefore will I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyler.

When Ephraim saue his synelles, and Juda his dyceale, * Ephraim wrote vnto Asur, and sent vnto hyng Jacob: yet comde not be helpe you, ne sale you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a Lyon, and as a Lyons whelpes to the house of Juda. Euen, I will spoyle them, & go my waye. I will take the wyth me, and no man shall releat the. I will go, and retorne to my place, till they know ledge that they haue synned and seke me.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ Against on causyn a man to retorne to God. The mychones of the whored.

In theyr aduersite they shall crye se: I me, & saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: for he hath synen vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall hynde vs: by payne: after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rale vs vp, so that we shall lye in hyr pyghe. Then shall we haue vnderstandinge, & endenoure oure selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go forth as the spyrng of the daye, & come vnto vs: as the crenynge and moynynge rayne vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, howe shall I intreate the? Myng poune is lyke a moynynge cloude, & lyke a dewe & goeth early awaye. Therefore haue I cut downe the whoredomes, and let the be synne for my wordes sake: so that the punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasure in louynge kynedelle: and not in offynge: yet in the knowledge of God, more the in burnt sacrificer. But euil lyke as: And byd, so haue they broken my couenent, and let me be asought. * Israel is a cite of wicked dayes of malpous people & bloudy dows. And as theues armed wayer for him that passeth by the waye: such is the counsell of the prelates wyth whyn one agreed couell murder euelpy luche as hepe the waye: & they dare do all unprikable mychones. * Therefore thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, & Israel is despyled: yea and thou Iuda hepest an harlot for thy selfe, when I returne the captivitye of my people.

C The viij. Chapter.

W Of the heues and wantonnes of the people.
I vnderstande to make Israel whole, then þy vnglaciousnesse of Ephraim and the wyckednes of Samaria commeth to lpyde: then go they aboute wþ lyes: therefore I theake robbeth within: & about the spoyler despoyleth. They cōfesse not in their betres that I remember all their wickednes.
Howe ther awne inuentours haue befor the whych. I le well pough. * They make the hpynges and the pynges, to haue pleasure in they: wyckednes and lyes. All these burne in aduour, as it were an ouen that the baker heareth, when he hath left kneadinge, till the doue be leuened. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure hpynges and pynges, for they begynne to be wode dyonche thowme wyne: they be familiarit with such as dis-cease them. They with the ymaginacion of their herte are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all pyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mornyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their awne iudges, all theye hpynges are fallen: yet is there none of the pcalter bypome. * Therefore must Ephraim be vnto amonge the heathen: Ephraim is become lyke a cake, þy noma tucneth, straungers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he waceth full of grap heares, yet wyl he not knowe it * and þy wyde of Israel is call downe before theye face, yet wyl they not turne to þy Lord theye God, neer seke hym for all theye.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is beggled, and hath no herte. * How call they vps the Egyccyans, now go they to the Assyrians: but wyle they be gone here and there, I shall speide my net ouer them, & drawe the downe wþ the foules of the ayre: accordinge as they haue bene warned, so wyl I punishe the. * Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me. They must be despoiled, for they haue set me at naught. * I am he that haue re-demed the, and yet they deslembeth wþ me.

They call not vpon me wth theye hertes, but lye doulpyng vpon theye beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate & drynke, and me wyl they not obeie. I haue sauged them, and defended theye asme, yet do they ymagin my chere against me. They turne the selues, but not to the most hygh, & are become as a broken bowe. I hie princes shal be slayne wth the sworde, for the malice of theye tungen, soche scoornes shall they haue in the lande of Egypt.

C The viij. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of theye pcalter.

S Et the borne to thy mouth, and blowe: twyflyp (as an eagle) shall the enemye come against the boule of the Lorde: for they haue broke my * cōuenant, & * Rom. 7.14 traffessed my lawe. Israel shal be doue (sayde vnto me: I act my God, we knowe þ: but he hath refused the thyng þ is good, therefore shall the enemye folowe wþ bym. * They haue ordebed hpynges, but not thowme me: they haue made pynges, & I must not knowe of it. * Of their syluer & golde haue they made them Images, to bynge them selues to be-struccpon. * Theye cast, O Samaria, shal be taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacyō is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe wyl it be, or they can be clesed. For the calfe came fro Israel, the worke man made it, therefore sa it be no God, but enef I pceaseth shall pcalte of Samaria be broke. * They haue towne wynde, therefore shall they reape a scoyme.
There seke shall bene no cozme, there shall no meate be made of theye increafe: though they crape, yet shall straungers deuoure it by.
Israel shall perishe, the Cities shall intera-te him as a fonic vessel. Hence they wyl by to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wylde alle in the deserte.

Ephraim grauely rewardes to get lousers and though they hye them amonge the hethen, yet now wyl I gather the by. They shall begynne to be weered wth the burthen of hpynges and pynges. Ephraim hath made many altiers to do wyckednes, þy altiers: I saye he had to hisinne. Though I knowe the my lawe neuer to moch, they counte it but straunge doctrine. Where as they do sacrificy, offeringe the fleshe and eatinge it: the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre theye wickednes, & punishe their synnes. * Israel turneth agayne into Egypt, they haue forgotten him þ made them, they buylbe synre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cyties: * therefore wyl I sende a fyre into theye cyties, and it shall consume their places.

C The ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

D O not thou triumphe, O Israel, make no doalyng ouer thy poule thynges as do the heathen, for thou hast committed ad-uourty agaynst the God: whos the rewar-des hast thou lousd, now shal all the come-flos. * Therefore shall they nomore enioie the come flos and wyne plesse, and theye swete wyne shall fayle them. They wyl not dwell in the Lordes lande * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt, and eateth uncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians: They poure out no wyne for a drinck offeringe vnto the Lorde

the Lorde, neither geue they hym their flayne offrynges: but they be vnto them as mou-ners meates, wherein all they that eate the, are defyled. For I heard that they haue such B lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solemne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde?
Lo, they shall get the awaye for the destruccyon: Egypt shall receaue them, and Egypt shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe they: pleasaunt goodes, and burres shall be in their inbernacles. Ye ye sure (O Ieruel) the tyme of visytacyon is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande. And then shall Irael knowe that they were deceyued by a pro-phete folowynge him, and in a traunsey: for the multitude of thyme iniquyte God shall multiple enemyes agaynst the. Ephraim hath made him self a watchman of my God, a pro-phete: y^e is become a snare to bo hurte in euery strete, and abhominacyon in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, & haue destruyed them selues, lyke as they dyd afore tyme at Gabaan: therefore they: wyckednes shall be remembred, and their spynnes punyshed.

Job. xli. a.
Lam. i. c.
Lam. ii. c.

I founde Irael lyke grapes in the wyldernes, and saue their fathers as the fyrst fruytes in the toppe of the pygge tre. But they are gone to Baal Beoz, & runne awaye fro me to y^e shamefull Idoll: & are become as abhominable as their louers. Ephraim syteth by a byrde, so shall their glory also:
In so much, that they shall neither begett children nor beare chylidren. And though they byngne by eny, yet wyl I make them chyldes among men. Yee, wo shall come to the, when I depart from them. Ephraim (as me thynke) is playd in welthynges, lyke as Tyus, but now we must the byngne her a wile chylidren fro to the manslapce.

Isa. viii. a.

The Lorde thou shalt geue the: what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfructeuall wombe & drye belles. All their wyckednes is done at y^e Gilgal, there do I abhorre the.
For the vngreatfullnes of their a wile inucyons, I wyl byngne them out of my house. I wyl lone them no more, for all their pynces are vnfructeuall. Ephraim is bewen downe, their rote is dryed vp, so y^e they shall byngne no more frute, yee, and though they byngne for thyng, yet wyl I slaye euery the best beloved frute of their body. My God shall cast them awaye, for they haue not bene obedient vnto him, therefore shall they go astraye among the heathen.

Job. xli. a.

Of the Chapter.

Of the Chapter and howe Irael.

Irael was a goodly & byrne, but he hath brought forth vnprofitable frute: yee, y^e more frute he had, the more wyltes he made: the more good I dyd to their lande, the more fridnesse I shewed they to their pynges. They here is deceyued, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their pynges, he shall destroye they: nether.
Then shall they saye: we haue no hyngne, for why? we haue not feared y^e Lorde. And what shall then the hyngne do vs? They comen together, and sweare wyne othes: they be conferat together, therefore groweth their punishment, as the weeds in the sowowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue wo: I shypped the calfe of Bethaue: therefore shall the people mourne ouer them, yee, & the prestes also, that in they: welthynges receiued wyth them: and why? it shall passe awaye fro them. It shall be brought to the Assirian, for a present vnto hyngne Iacob. Ephraim shall receaue full punyishment. Irael shall be confounded for hys awne pynges, Samaria is his hyngne shall vayne the awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Auen where Irael do synne, shall be cast downe: they: and thowes shall growe vnto they: nether. Then shall they saie to the mountaynes: coner vs, and to the hilles: fall vpon vs.

* 2. n. r. r. d. c.
Apo. i. c. c.

Irael, thou hast synned as y^e Saba dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: shuld not the batall then come vpon the wycked chylidren, as well as vpon the Sabautes?
I wyl chaste them, euery after myne awne despye, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punyche them for their great wyckednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a come y^e is vnto ro go to plowe, therefore I loued hym, and felt vpon his sayenche.
I boue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Ia-cob playd y^e husbandman: Sowe vnto ryghteousnes, and reape the frutes of weldeing: plowe by your frethe lande, for it is tyme to seake the Lorde: tyme shall come, and in y^e righteousnesse vpon you. And you haue plowed vngodlynes: ye haue reaped iniquyte, you haue eaten the frute of byes. Sepinge thou puttest thy confydence in thyme awne wayes, and leauest to the multitude of thy worthes: there shall growe a sedycyon amonge thy people. All thy stragecyes shall be layd waste, euery as Samaria was destroyed with his familyers, thowse him that was auenged of Ierbel, in the daye of batall, where the mother perished with her chyldren. Euen so shall it goe with you (O Bethell) because of your malicious wyckednesse. Lyke as the moynge goeth awaye, so shall the hyngne of Irael passe.

The prophecye

¶ The xij. Chapter.

¶ Against the inhabitants of Israel.

When Israel was younge, I loved him: * as I called my sonne oute of the labe of Egypt. But I more they were called, I more they wold darke, * offering unto Idols of Baal, & censynge Images. ¶ I reuocd Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, I woulde haue helpe them. I led the with cordes of friendshyppe, and with bandes of loue. I was euen be, I playd the yocke vpon their neckes. ¶ I gaue their tober my self that they shoulde not go agayne into Egypt. And now is I sure thes hynge. For they woulde not turne vntome. Therefore shall the swardec begynne in their cyties, the stone I they haue layd vpon, shall be destroyed and casten. ¶ Because of their awne pynagynacions. And my people shall sonde in a doute whether to saue them, for when the prophete called them to the molt helth, not one yet woulde gyue him his gloze.

¶ What greete thynges haue I ginen the, O Ephraim, howe farsely haue I defended the. O Israel, I haue I dealt with the as with * Adama, for haue I created I lyke Seboim, so, my heart is other wise mynded. Yee, my mercy is to seruent: therefore haue I not turned me to despoile Ephraim in my worshipfull displeasure. For I am God and no man. I am euen that help one in the middelt of the, though I came not within the cytie.

C The Lorde conceith lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe hym: yee, * as a lyon conceith he, I they maye be straped lyke the chyldren of the see: I they maye be scattered a waye from Egypt, as me lincere by dyck: a straped a waye (as doves vnto be) fro the Assyrians lande: and that because I woulde haue them tarp at home, sayeth I Lorde. But Ephraim goeth aboute me with lygs, and I house of Israel dissembleth. Only Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true help thynges.

¶ Against the wyse tract of thy people.

Ephraim is fed with wyse, and foloweth after I cast wynde: he is cuer increasynge lygs and dekeucion. They be cōsiderate with the Assyrians, * their oyle is carped into Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde the Iuda, and wyl punyche Jacob. After thes awne wayes and actiōdyng to thes awne inuyciōns, shall be recōpense the. * he toke his brother by the heile, whē he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in hys strength he wrestled with God. he * strove with the angell, and gatt the victorye: to I he paynde a deyled hym. * he founde him at Scipell, and there he talketh with vs.

¶ Yee, the Lorde God of hooftes, euen the Lorde him selfe remembred hem. ¶ Then came to the God, hepe mercy and requite, & hope still in the God. But part lyke I misdeade I bath a false weyght in his hande, he bath a pleasure to occyde extorcyt. ¶ And altheth thus: * Wylly, I am rich, I haue good ynough: In all my woekes shall not one lawre be founde I haue offended. ¶ Yet am I the Lorde the God, euen as when I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and stett I in the tentes, and as in the byrthe of the dayes.

I haue spoken thowme the prophetes, & the wold directe vylpys and declared my selfe by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is I abhominacyō, they are fallen to wantre. At Silgal they haue layne oken: as many denpes of stones as they had in thes labe forowes, so many altars haue they made. * Jacob fled I to I labe of Siria, & Israel serued for a wife, & for a wife he keppe thes.

¶ By a prophete I Lorde brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophete he pestered the. But Ephraim hath pouked him to displeasure thowme his abhominacions, therefore shall his bloude be poured vpon him selfe, and the Lorde bys God shall rewarde hym bys blasphemys.

¶ The xij. Chapter.

¶ Against the abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the betthen trebled: and he was exalted amoge the Ieleptres, but he is gone backe to Baal, therefore must he be dyde. ¶ And now they synne more and more: * of thes spluer, they make the molten images, after the pynagynacions of their awne byzynes pils, very ydols, and yet all is nothinge but the woike of the craftelman: Not wylthandynge they pryche of I came to such as thes sacrilecth: who so wyllye I calures, offeth perfectlye. Therefore, they shall be as I morninge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth a waye and lyke as dust that I whoyle wynde taketh a waye, fro the dore, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymneye.

I am the Lorde God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shouldest knowe no God but me onely, and that thou shouldest haue * no shauoure but only me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernesse I dyde lande. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they waxed proude, & forgot me: therefore wylly I be vnto the as a lps and as a leoparde in I waye to I Assyrians, I wyl come vpon the as the beare, I as robbed of her welshes, & I wyl beate I as the beere bette of thes. There wylly I denouce the as a lyon: yet I wyl be beastes shall reare the.

¶ O Israel, thine iniquite hath deyled I but in me only is thy helpe. Where are thy hynges nowe, that shoulde helpe the in all thy cyties? Yee, and thy iudges, of whom thou tree of the felde shall wyther a waie. Thus the mercy chaire of the chyliden of men, shall come to confusyon.

Epyde you, and make youre more. O ye prestes, moune yemynstres of the auter: goo your waie in, and slepe in sack cloth. O ye officers of my God: for the meat & drink-offerynges shall be taken a waie fro the house of your God. Proclaime a fastinge, call the congregacion, gather the elders: * and all the inhabitants of the lande together into the house of the Loyde your God, and crie vnto I Loyde: alas, alas for this daye. And why: the daye of the Loyde is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghtye. I shall not the meates be taken a waie before oure eyes, * the myth also and ioye from the house of our God: I the febe shall perthe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the flores shall be broken downe, for fayne shall be destroyed. What a syghynge make the kyne / the bullocks are very euell lpyngre, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished a waie.

I Loyde, to the wylde I crie: for the fye hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernes, and the same hath bent vp all the trees of the felde. Yee, the wylde beastes crie also vnto the: for the water riuers are dreyd vp, and the fye hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernes.

Chapter. ij.

I the propheseth the commynge and crutche of theyr strengre. To cryshatoun to mouethem to conuete.

I Lowe out the tropecte in syon, and crie vpon my holp hyll, that all forche as dwell in flande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Loyde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yee, and a stamp daye, lyke as I moynynge sygetheth out vpon I hylls. Namely, a grate and myghtye people: soch as haue not bene senece the beginninge, nether shall be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consuming fye, and behynde him a burninge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very waste wyldernes, and there is no man, that shall escape hym: They are to lye vpon lyke barbed boies, & runne lyke hoymen. They shalpe vp vpon the hylls, as it were the sounde of charretts: as the flame of fye that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people crye to the batayll.

I The folke shall asfayed hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot: This shall runne lyke graunted, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Every man in his gonge shall hepe hym a waie, and not goo out of his path. There shall not one hyue another, but eche shall kepe his awne waie. They shall breake in at the wndowes, & not be warte: They shall come into the cytie, & runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and styppe in at the wndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before hym, & heuens shall moue. * The sunne & the moone shall be darkened, and the starres shall withdawe the fye. The Loyd shall crie hym vnto before his booke, for his booke is grete, stronge, and myghtye to fulfyll hym commaundement. They is what grete and maruelous fearfull daye of the Loyde. * And who is able to abyde it?

I Lowe the fye to fye I Loyde. * Turne you vnto me with all your detres, with fastinge, wepyng and mourninge, crie vnto herthes, and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto I Loyd your God, * for he is gracions and mercifull, longe sufferinge, & of great chaspyon: and redy to pardone wythendres. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and foygne, and after his chaspenyng, he shall lett your increase remayne, for meat and drink-offerynges vnto I Loyd your God: * Blowe out with the tropecte in syon, proclaime a fastyng, call the congregacion, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, byngre the chyliden & sulhynges together. Let the bypogrome go forth of his chabre, and the bypde out of his cloist. Let the prestes serue the Loyde before I porch and the auter, wepyng and sayinge: be fauonrable, I Loyde, be fauonrable vnto thy people: let not thyn heritage be brought to such confusyon, lest I heathen be lordes thereof. * Wherefore shalpe they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowre thy God.

I Then shall the Loyde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare hym people: yee, the Loyde shall answere, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I will sende you come, wyne & oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I will nomore geue you ouer to be reposed amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall bypue him farre from you: and shute him out into a dyke & waste lande, his face toward the east, and his hynder partes toward the west. The synche of him shall go vp, and his synthe corrupcyon shall fall vpon him selfe, because he hath dreit so proudly. He are not (O lande) but be glad and reioice, for the Loyde will do great thynges. He not ye asfayed nether (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare their fure: the fyggetrees and bynepardes shall geue the p increase.

I Be glad then (O ye chyliden of syon) & and reioice in the Loyde your God, for he hath hath geuen you a teacher of ryghte conſcience:

* he it is that ſhall ſende you downe ſhowers of rayne, early and late in the fyrſt month: ſo that the garners ſhall be full of corne, and the preſſes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the peaces that the greſshoper, locuſt, blaſtynge, and caterpyller (my greate hoolſt, which I ſent amonge you) haue eaten vpon, I ſhall reſtoze them to you agayne. ſo ye ſhall haue ynough to eate, & be ſatiffyed: and wyſe the name of the Lorde your God, that ſo maruelouſly hath deale wth you.

And my people ſhall neuer be confounded any moze. Ye ſhall well knowe, that I am in myddell of Iſrael, and that I am your God: yee, and that there is none other, and my people ſhall no moze be brought to conſolation.

* Aſter this, will I poure out my ſpyete vpon all fleſh: and your ſonnes and your daughters ſhall ſpyech: your olde men ſhall dreame & dreames, and your yonge men ſhall ſe viſyons. yee, in thoſe dayes I will poure out my ſpyete vpon ſeruantes and maydens. I will ſhewe wonders in heauē aboue and tokens in the earth beneath: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of ſmoke. The ſunne ſhall be turned into darckenes, and the moone into bloude: beſoſe the greate & notable daye of the Lord come. And the tyme ſhall come, that * whoſoener called on the name of the Lorde, ſhall be ſaued. For vpon the mounte Syon and at Ieruſalem, there ſhall be a ſaluacyon. lyke as yf the Lorde hath promyſed yee, and amonge the other remanys, whom the Lorde ſhall call.

Ch. iij. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God againſt the enemyes of his people.

Take heede: in thoſe dayes and at the ſame tyme, when I turne agayne the captiuitie of Iuda and Ieruſalem: I ſhall gather all people together, and bynne them in the valley of Joſaphat: and there will I reaſon with the: becauſe of my people and beſetage of Iſrael: who they haue ſcattered about in the nacyons: and parted in lāde: yee, they haue caſt lottes for my people, the yonge me haue thet in the hozel houſe, ſolde yf damels for wyne, that they myght haue to dryncke.

* Thou Tyrus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philiftines: what haue ye to do w me? Will ye deſpe me? well, yf ye will neede deſpe me. I ſhall recompence you, euen vpon your heades, & yf ryght woſtely: for ye haue taken a wape my ſilver and golde, my ſaype and goodly Jewels, and brought the into your goddes houſes. Theſe philidians of Iuda and Ieruſalem haue ye ſolde vnto yf Gethes, yf ye myght bynne them ſarre from the borders of their a wite countres.

Beholde theſe folke, I will capte them out of the place, where ye haue ſolde them, * and will rewarde you euen vnto your dead. Pour ſonnes and your daughters will I ſell thowze the handes of the chyldre of Iaba, and ſo they ſhall geue them forth to ſell, vnto the of Shaba, a people of a ſarre countre: for the Lorde him ſelfe hath ſayde it. Cpe oute theſe chynges amonge the Goutples, proclaime warre, wake vp the gyauntes, let the diuine nre, let them come vp all y lufky warryones of the. * Make you ſweardes of your ſwordes, and ſprares of your ſpyeles ſpyes. Let the weake man ſape: I am ſtronge. Muſtre you, & come, all ye heathen rode about: gather you together, there ſhall yf Lorde lape all the gyauntes to the grounde. Let yf people aſpe, & get the to the valley of Joſaphat for there will I ſpe, & iudge all heathen ſoide about. * Lape to your ſpyes, for yf ſhar uſt is ryte: come, get you downe: the wyne preſſes full, yee, yf wynepreſſes runne ouer, for their wickednes is waten greate.

In the valley appoynted, there ſhall many people: for the daye of the Lord is nre in the valley appoynted. Be lūme & moone ſhall be darckened, & the ſtarres ſhall withdraue their lpght. * The Lorde ſhall roare out of Syon, and cpe out of Ieruſalem, that the heouens and the earth ſhall quake withall. But the Lorde ſhall be a defence vnto yf a wne people, and a refuge for the chyldren of Iſrael. Thus ſhall ye knowe, that I the Lorde your God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon. Then ſhall Ieruſalem be holp, & there ſhall no ſtraungers go thowze hrt any moze.

* Then ſhall the mountaynes droye ſwete wyne, and the hylls ſhall flowe with mylke. All the euers of Iuda ſhall haue water ynough, and out of the Lordes boule there ſhall flowe a ſpyng, to water the vale of ſchorim: but Egypte ſhall be layed walle, & and Edom ſhall be deſolate: becauſe they haue deale ſo cruelly wth yf chyldren of Iuda, and dōd innocent bloude in thep lande. Agayne, Iuda ſhall be inhabited for euer: moze, & Ieruſalem ſhall be generacyō to generacyō: for I will not leaue ſpeir bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde ſhall dwell in Syon.

And he sayde: * The Lorde shall roare oute of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Ierusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a myserable case, & the toppes of Carmel dryed vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy and foure wickednes of * Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue thowped Salan with pson slayes. But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake &

13 barres of Damascus, and rote oute the inheriter from the felde of Auen, And him that holdeth the scepter, out of the plentiful house: so that the people shalbe drynen out of sapie Siria, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy and foure wickednes of * Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captiue, and haue dryed them into the lande of Edom. Therefore will I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza, wherch shall deuoure her houses. I will rote oute the that dwell at Asdod and him that holdeth the scepter of Aikal, and streche out myne hade ouer Hieraron, that the remnant of the Philistines shall perpeche, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy & foure wickednes of the chyldren of * Ammon,

I will not spare them: because they cryed by the women grate woth chyld in Galaad, to make the borders of their landes the wider. Therefore, I will hynde a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a greate crye, in the daye of battail, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that their kynge shall go into captiuitie & his pynces together, sayeth the Lorde.

The .ij. Chapter.

¶ Against Amon, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy and foure wickednes of * Moab, I will not spare hym: because he bent the bones of the kynge of Edom to ashes. Therefore, will I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Cariath: so that Moab shall perpeche with noyse and the founde of a stowme. I will rote oute the ludge from amonge them, & slaye all his pynces with him, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy and foure wickednes of * Iuda, I will not spare him: because he hath cast a fyre lawe of the Lorde, and not kepte his commaundementes: for why? he they wolde nedes be diseaued with the lyes that they foresaithers folowed. Therefore, will I sende a fyre into Iuda, which shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thy and foure wickednes of Israel, I will not spare him: because he hath solde the righteous for money, & the poore for thows. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of the earth, & croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, they lye beyde euery alter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of theyr goddes they drynche the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the * Amozite before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the oke: notwithstandinge I destroyed his fruite from aboue and his rote from vnder.

Prophete Jonas.

The fyrſt Chapter.

¶ Of the ſpyde of Ionaſ when he was ſente to preache. A tempeſt ariſeth, and caſteth hym in the ſee ſo he was ſoberdence.

The worde of the Lord came vnto * Jonas þe ſonne of Amſthap, ſaying: * Iſrele, & get þe to ſiſtine that * greates cyte, and iuda the vnto the, howe that * theyr dyckednes is come vpon me. And Jonas made hym ready to ſet vnto Charſis from the preſence of the Lord, and gat hym downe to Toppa: where he founde a ſhypp ready for to go vnto Charſis. So he payde hys fare, & wente a boorde, that he myght go with them vnto Charſis, from the preſence of þe Lord. But the Lord hurled a greates wynde into the ſee, and there was a myghty tempeſt in the ſee, ſo that the ſhypp was in ioyperdy of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were aſtrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the ſhypp, they caſt into þe ſee, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he layed hym downe & ſlōdred.

So the maſter of the ſhypp came to him and ſayde vnto him: why ſlōdredſt thou: call vpon thy God: þe God of happily wyll thynke vpon vs, that we perſh not. And they ſayde one to another: come, let vs caſt lottes: that we maye knowe, for whole cauſe we are thus troubled. * And ſo they caſt lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then ſayd they vnto him: tel vs, for whole cauſe are we thus troubled: what is thyne occupacyō: whence comſt thou: and wher goeſt thou: what coſtlyr man art thou. And of what nacyō: he answered them: I am an Ebreue, and I feare the Lord God of heauen, whych made both the ſee, & drye lande. Then were the men exceedingly aſtrayde, & ſayde vnto hym: why dydeſt þo: (for they knewe, that he was ſerued from the preſence of the Lord, becauſe he had tolde theſe) & ſayd moxour vnto hi: What ſhall we do vnto the, that the ſee maye ceaſe fro troubleynge vs: (for the ſee wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me, & caſt me into the ſee, ſo ſhall it lett you bein reſt: for I wote, it is for my ſake, that this great tempeſt is come vpon you.

Then theſeſſe, the men aſſayed wth rowynge, to byynge the ſhypp to lande: but it wolde not be, becauſe the ſee wrought ſo: & was ſo troublous agaynſt them. Therefore they cryed vnto þe Lord, & ſayde: * O Lord let vs not perſh for thy mans death, neither laye thou innocent bloude vnto our charge: for thou, O Lord, hast done, euē as thy pleasure was.

So thou took Jonas, and cast hym into the see, and the see leste ragynge. And þe me feared the Lorde exceedingly, doinge many feyr and makinge wotes vnto the Lorde.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas

But the Lorde prepared a greate fyre, to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in þe belly of þe fyre, three dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde þys God, out of the fishes belly, and sayd. In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of þe belly of hell I cryed, & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see, & thei loude copated me about: yee, all thy waues and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awayne out of thy syght: but I will yet agayne lobe towarde thy holy temple.

The water scomped me, euen to þe very soule: the depe lape aboute me, & the wydes were wyape aboute myne head. I went downe to the botome of the pylles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted wþin me, I thought vpon the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the, euen to thy holy temple. They that hold of wayne vanities, will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesge uppinge, & will paye that I haue vowed: for thy saluacyon comyneth of the Lord. And the Lord spake vnto the fysh, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

¶ Jonas is sent agayne to Ninine. The repenssaunce of the kyng of Ninine.

When came the word of the Lord vnto Jonas agayne, sayenge. vp, and gett the to Ninine: that great cite, & preach vnto them þe prechynge which I bade the. So Jonas arose, & wente to Ninine at the Lordes commaundement. Ninine was a greate cite vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, & entred into the cite: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed, sayenge. There are yet xl. dayes ad then shall Ninine be ouertþowen. And the people of Ninine beleued God, and proclaimed fastynge, and arayed the selues in sack cloth, as well the greate as the small of the. And the epylges came vnto the kyng of Ninine which arose out of þys seate, and byd þys apparell of and put on sack cloth, and laye hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed & commaunded in Ninine, by the auctorite of the kynge and þys Lorde, sayenge. se that neither man or beest, oze theye talke ought at all: ad þe pether neyther fede ner dryke water: but put on sack cloth both man & beest: and crye myghte vnto God: yee, se that euery man turne feþ his euell waye, and from the wyckednesse, that he hath in hande.

Who can tell, God maye turne, & repent, and cease from his ferece wyath, that he do petyth not. And when God sawe theye woked how theye turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euill, which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and byd it not.

¶ The iiij. Chapter.

¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was soze dyscontent & angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde. O Lorde, was not thyss my sayinge? I praye the when I was yet in my countrie: herfore I basted rather to fle vnto Tharsis, for I knowe wel ynough that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassyon, longe sufferinge, and of great kynndnes and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And now O Lord, take my lyfe fro me: I beseeche þe for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou to agrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the crite, and latt downe on the east syde therof: and there made hym a booth, ad sat vnder it in the shadowe, till he myghte. What shulde chaunce vnto the crite.

And the Lord God prepared a wyde vyne, whych sprang vpon ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his head, to deuyce hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedingly glad of the wyde vyne.

But vpon the nexte mornynge agaynst the spryng of þe daye. The Lord ordered a worme, whych smote the wyde vyne, so that it withered awayne. And when þe sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent east wynde: & þe sunne bett ouer þe head of Jonas, that he paynted agayne, & wyshed vnto his soule, that he myght dye, ad sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou to agrie for þe wyde vyne? And he sayd: yee, very angrie am I, eue vnto the deeth. And þe Lord sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wyde vyne, wheron þe bestowdest no labour: ner made it growe whych sprang vpon one nyght & perished in another: And shuldest not I then haue compassion vpon Ninine that greate cite, wherin there are aboue an. C. & xx. thousand per sonnes, that knowe not the petyth god and from the leste, beydys more catell?

Propete Michas.

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of thys Idolatrye.

Thys is the worde of the Lorde, þ came vnto Michas þ Moabite, i the dayes of* Iothan* Ahas ad* Iehzekiah kynges of Iuda: whych was the word hym vpon Samaria & Ierusalem. * heare al ye people, marke this well w earth and all that therein is. Pee, þ Lorde God hym selfe be wytnesse amonge you enen the Lord frs his holy temple. For whych* beholde, þ Lorde shall go out of his place, & come downe, & tene vpon the hye thynge of the earth. The mostaynes shall columbe vnder him, & the valleyes shall cleue asunder: lyke as wares consumeth at the fyre, as the waters runne downwarde. And all thys shall be for the wyckednesse of Iacob, and the synnes of the house of Irael.

But what is the wyckednesse of Iacob/Is not* Samaria: whychare the hye places of Iuda: Is not* Ierusalem? Therefore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones i the felde, to laye aboute the vyneparde: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and disuert her foundations. All her Images shall be broken downe, & all her garmentes shall be vrent in the fyre: pee, all her Idols will I destroye: for whych* they are gathered out of þ hye of an whoze, & to an whozes hye shall they be turned agayne. Wherefore I will mourne & make lamentaciō, bare & naked will I go: I will mourne lyke the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for they wounde is past remedy: And whych* it is come into Iuda, & hath touched the porte of my people at Ierusalem already. * Wepe not, lest they at Seth pccaeine it.

Thou at Bataphza, welter thy selfe in þ dust & ashes. Thou þ dwellest at Sephy, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe: and whych* her neighbourhood shall take frs her what she hath The rebelyous spirit hopeþ, þ it shall not be so well: but for all þ, the plague shall come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Ieru-salem. The greate noyse of þ charrettes shall fearc the, that dwell at * Lachys, which is an occasyon of the synne of the daughter of Syon, for in the came vþ the wyckednesse of Irael. Pee, we sent her courtesiers into the lands of Seth.

The houses of Iysa shall dysceane þ syn-ges of Irael. And as for þ (Thou þ dwel-lest at Bataphza) I shall bring a possessor vpon þ, & the plague of Irael shall reach vnto to Doolas. Make the balde, & haue the, because of thy tender chyldeyn: Make the clea-ne balde as an Argie, for thy shall be carped nesse vþs theyr dedes, to perforce me it i þ cleare daye: for thy power is agaynst God. When they couet to haue lande, * they take it by dyolence, they robbe men of theyr houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house & euery man for his herpytage. Therefore th^o sayeth the Lorde: Beholde * agaynst thys

It shall not fall vpon thys people, we shall not come so to confusyon, sayeth the house of Iacob. Is þ spere of the Lorde so cleane awaye: or is he so mild? Treuth it is, my woodes are frendly vnto the þ pure ryght: but my people doth the contrary, therefore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both rote and cloke from the symple.

Pe haue turned your selues to fyght, the meinen of my people haue þe out from their good houses, & taken awaye my excellent gyftes from theyr chylde. Vp get you hence, for here shall þe haue no rest.

Because of theyr Idolatrye they are corrupte, & shall miserably perishe. If I were a them that they myght spt byþþynge a bollyng, & be drunken. O þ were a Propete for thys people, But I will gather the i dede, O Iacob, & bypne perrmanant of Irael all together. I shall carpe them out withau-ther, as a flocke in the folde, and as þ cattell in theyr stables, that they maye be dyspouered of othermē. Who so vuenth þ gyppie, he shall go before. They shall breake vþ þ porte, & go in & out at it. The Ryngs shall go before them, and the Lorde shall be vpon the head of them.

The iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the synners of Berynce, and falsly Propetes.

O iii. Heare,

The prophecye

And I sayde: praye, O ye heaues of the house of Jacob, & ye leaders of house of Israel: * Shulde not ye knowe, what there lawfull and right: * But ye hate the good, and lone the euill: ye plucke of meynes & mynnes, and the flesh from the chyldren: ye cate the flesh of my people, and slay of the chyldren: ye beate the chyldren, ye choppe them in peeces as it were in a cauldron, & as flesh in a pot. Now the tyme shall come, * that whē they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare the, vnt hyde hys face from them, because that thowen they: a wne Imagynacions they haue deale to wyckedly.

And as concerning the prophetes that dyceane my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them. * Wildest they haue eny thynge to byte vpon, then they preach that all shall be well: but for a maiu part not lone they in to thyr mouthes, they preach of wotter agaynst hym.

* Therefore poure vylson shall be turned to nyght, & poure prophesyinge to darcknesse. C The Sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, & the daye shall be darcke vnto the. Then shall the wyson seers be ashamed, & the soothsayers confounded: yee, they shall sayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. * As for me, I am full of strength, & of sperte of the Lorde, full of iudgement & boldnesse: to the house of Jacob they wyckednes, and the house of Israel they synne.

D Where the rulers of the house of Jacob, & ye iudges of house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thynge that is lawfull, & wycked alse: ye thynge that is streight, & ye that buyde vpon syon with bloude, and Jerusalem w doynge wounges. * O ye iudges, ye geneuence for gyftes: O ye prelates, ye teach for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye prophesy for money. Yet will they be taken as those y holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lord among vs? Truly, there can no misfortune happen vs. * Therefore shall syon (for poure sakes) be plowed yke a felde. * Jerusalem shall become a heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye woadde.

C The. iiii. Chapter.

Of the caliginge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

All * in the latter dayes it will come to passe, that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be set vpon hye: then eny mountaynes or hyles: yee, the people shall prease vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentiles shall haile them thereby, saying: Come, * let vs go vpon to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teach vs hys waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. * For the lawe shall come out of syon, & the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heathen: & refoirme the people of farre countrees: so that of theyr swordes they shall make plowshares, & lythes of theyr speares.

* One people shall not lyft vp a sword agaynst another, yee, they shall nomore learne to fyghte: but euery man shall lye vnder his vineyard, & vnder his figge tre, & no mā to feare him awayne: for y mouth of y Lord of hostes hath spokē it. Therefore, where as all the people haue walched euery man in y name of hys owne God, we wyll walke in the name of oure God for euer & euer. * At the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, will I gather vpon the lame ad the out castes, & such as I haue chaunced: & wyll geue place vnto y lame, & ad make of the out castes a grent people: * and the Lorde hym selfe shall be theyr kynge vpon the mount syon, from thys tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the. O y tower of * Cher, thou stronge holde of the daughter syon vnto the shall it come: & the lordship ad kyngdome of the daughter Jerusalem. Willy then art thou now to beure? Is there no kyng in the: are thy counsellers awayne that thou art to payned, as a womā in her troupe: let it knowe. (O thou daughter syon) be loy, let it geue the as a wyfe laboring wth chylde: for now must thou get the out of the cye, and dwell vpon the playnesfelde: yee, vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be beleuered, * and there the Lorde shall lowe the from the hande of thye enemies.

D Now also are there many people gathered together agaynst the, sayig: what, syon is circled, we shall se oure lust vpon her. But they knowe not * the thoughtes of y Lorde, they vnderstande not his counsell, that shall gather them together as the sheeres in the barne. Therefore get the vp, O thou daughter syon, and thowse out the come: for I will make thy home prion, & thy clawes shall be, that thou mayest grynde many people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lorde, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

C The. v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

After y shalt thou be robbed thy sel- fe, & y robbers daughter: they shall laye sege agaynst vs, & synne y iudge of Israel w a rodde vpon the cheeke. * And y Berlees Ephrata, art lyte amonge y thow fates of Iuda, Out of y shall come vnto me, whiche shall be y gouernour in Israel: who se out goynge hath bene fro the beginning, & fro euerlastynge. In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, but till the tyme that the which shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnant of his brethren be conuerted vnto þe children of Israel. He shall fæde fast, & geue fode in the * strength of the Lord, and in the victorie of the name of the Lord his God: and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest partes of the world.

B Then shall there be peace, so that the Assyrian maye come into your lade, & treade in your houses. We shall brynge vp leuen shepherdes and: viii. yinces vpon the: these shall subdue the land of Assur wth the sword, and þe lande of * Assyrod wth their naked weaples. * Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he cometh wth our land, and setteth his fete wthin our borders.

C And þe remnant of Jacob shall be amoge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lord, and as the droppe upon the grasse, that tarrieth for no man, and wapeteth of no body. * Pee, residue of Jacob shall be amoge the Gentiles and the multitude of people, as the lyon amoge the beastes of the wodde, and as þe Lyons whelp amoge a flocke of shepe: which when he goeth thoroze tresseth downe, tresseth in pces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shall be life vpon thine enemies, and all thine aduersaries shall perishe.

D The tyme shall come also, sayeth þe Lord, that I will take thine hoyses from the, and destroye thy charrettes. I will breake downe the cities of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy strong holdes. * All witchcraftes wth I rote oute of thine hãde, there shall no mo soothsayings be wthin the. * Thine Idols and thine Images will I destroye out of þe so þou shalt nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the woekes of thine aduersaries. Thyne groues will I plucke vp by þe rotes, & breake downe þe cities. Thus will I be auenged also, vpo all þe heathen that will not heare.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

C An exhortacion to heare þe iudgement agaynst Iherusalem because of her wickednes, what manner of sacrificies she do please God.

M I know what the Lord sayeth: * Up, repproue the mountaynes, & lett the hilles heare thy voyce. We heare the punishment of the Lord, þe mountaynes, & þe mightie foundations of the earth: for the Lord will repproue his people, & reason wth Israel. O my people, what haue I done vnto þe? or wher haue I hurted the? geue me answere. * Because I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of þe house of bondage. * Because I made Moyses, Aarã and Miriam to lede þe: Remember: (O my people) what Balach þe hyng of Moab had imagined agaynst the and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, from Serchim vnto Salgal, that ye maye knowe the loupynge hyndnes of the Lord.

What acceptable thinge shall I offere vnto the Lord? shall I bowe my knee to the hye God? shall I come before hym wth burnt offeringes, and wth calves of a prate olde? hath the Lord a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable frames of oyle? * What shall I geue my fyre holme for myne offfences, & the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I will thewe the, O mã, what is good, & what the Lord requyeth of the Ramey, to do right, to haue pleasure in louinge hyndnesse, to be lowly, & to walche wth thy God. * The Lordes voyce crierth vnto þe clype, & the man þe shall be laud cõsidereth thy name (O Lord) hearken what is your rodde, & here him þe warneth you? * Shuld I not be displeased, for þe vncirghtuous good in þe houses of þe wycked, & because þe measure his mynch: O quide I iustitie þe false balaunces and þe bagge of disceafull wygges, amoge those that be full of riches vncirghtuously gotte: where the cpyting deale wth salwede, speake lyes, & haue disceafull tunges in their mouthes.

Therefore, I will take in hãde to punish þe, & to make þe desolate, because of thy synnes. * Thou shalt care, & not haue prouche: pee, þe shalt brynge thy selfe downe. * Thou shalt feare, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, will I deliuer to the * sword. * Thou shalt towe, but not reape: þe shalt presse out olues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe wthall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt depnye no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of * Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe their pleasures, therefore wth I make the waste, and cause thy inhabytres to be aduoyced, O my people: & thus shalt thou breake thine aduersaries.

C A complaint of the righte nombre of the rightuous agaynst the wickid ought he not to bold wth our ouer great feare.

W I am: I am become as our, that goeth a gleanynge in the baruel, there are no mo grapes to eate, yett wold I sayne (wth all my here) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godly man vpo earth, there is not one rightuous amoge men. They labour all to thed bloud, and euery man hunteth his brother to deathe: yet they saye they do well wth they do euill. As the pynce will, so sayeth the iudge: that he maye do him a pleasure agayne. The greete man speakech what his better desireth: the heartysallowe bi. The best of the is but as a thille, & the most rightuous of the is but as a thille.

able to abide his gryme displeasure? his anger taketh on lylic fyre, and the harde ro-ckes are clouen in funder before him.

All gracious is the Loyde, and a strange holde in the time of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in hym: when the foudes cruncheth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and wher the darcknesse foloweth wyl upon his enemyes. What doye Imagin the agaynst of Loyde on this maner? (Cuth, wher he hath once made an ende, there shall come nomoze trouble.) Jfor like as the thornes that like together, and as the dwe skawe, so shall the dwarckardes be consumed togerher, eue when they be full. There come out of the such as Imagin in pichesse, & geue vngacious coun-cell agaynst the Loyde.

Therefore thus sayeth the Loyde: Let the be as well prepared, per, & as many as they can, per shall they be hewe downe, and passe awaye. And as for y, I will bere y, but not vterely destroye the. And now wyl I breake his rodde from thy backe, & burst thy bowes in funder. But the Loyde hath geuen a commaundement concerninge the, y there shall come nomoze fede of thy name. * The earued & casten Images wyl rote out of the houle of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the destruction of the citye of Ninus the Assurians.

Beholde

a lier in the hedge. But when the daye of thy weachers cometh, that thou shalt be visited: the shall they be wasted awaye. * Let no man beleue his frende, ner put hys confy-dence in a brother. Kiepe y porte of thy mouth from her that lyeeth in thy bosome: * for the sonne shall put his fater to dyshonoure, the daughter shall rise agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in la-we: and a mans foes shall be euen they of hys awne hougholde.

Reuerchele. I will loke vp vnto y Loyde I wyl paciencly abyde God my saupoure: my God shall heare me. * W thou enemye of mpne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get up agayne: & though I syt in darcknesse, yet the Loyde is my lycht. I wyl beare the yunichment of y Loyde: for wyl, I haue offended hi? tpyl he syt iudgement vnto my cause, & se y I haue right. He wyl bying me forth to the lycht, & I shall be his righteuousnesse.

She that is myne enemy shall loke vpon it, & be confounded, which now saileth. * Where is thy Loyde God? Whynne eyes shall beholde her. When she shall be trode downe, as y claye in y strettes. * The tyme will come, that thy gappes shall be made up, & the lawe shall go abrode: & at y tyme shall they come vnto the fro Assur: vnto the brgge cities, & from the brgge cities vnto the ruere: fro the one sce to y other, fro the one moytayne to y other.

Most wythstandynge, y land must be wasted, because of the that dwell therein, and for the frutes of their awne Imaginacions.
Therefore fede the people with thy rodde, y hocke of thine heritage which dwel desolate in the wodde: that they maye be fedde vpon the mouit of Charmel, Balan & Galaad as afoye time. Haruelous thyges wyl I thewe the, y lyke as wher they came oute of Egipte Thys shall the heathen se, and be aghained for all their power, * so that they shall laye their hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. * They shall lyke the dust lyke a scerpente, & as the wyrmes of the earth, that tremble in their holes. They shall be afayed of the Loyde oure God, & they shall feare the.

Where is the rocke a God as thou: that yardonek wychednes, and forgoeth the offences of the remnant of thynne heritage? he heareth not his wrath for euer: and wher his desire is to haue cōpassiō: he shall turne agayne, and be mercifull to vs: he shall put downe oure wychednesles, and cast all oure synnes into the botome of y see. Thou shalt kiepe thy trust with Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast iwoyne vnto oure fathers longe agoon.

The ende of the prophecy of Nahum.

Behold. * vpon the mountaynes come p fere of him, that bringeth good tidings: a preacher of peace. * In-da, hope thy holy dayes, perfourme thy praymyses: for Bethel shall come nemoze in the,
 he is defetly rooted out.

The scatterer shall come vp agaynst the, & laye siege to the castell. Loke thou well to p streets, make thy lynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the Lord shall restore agayne the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destructioners haue broken their downe, & married p wyne bzaunches.

The childre of his gnauntes glystereth, hys men of warre are clothed in purple, hys charrettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forward, & his fyre quates are looked in venim.

25 The charrettes collic vpo p streets, & welter in p hye wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke cedrettes of fyre, & go thwylly, as p lyghte-ning. Whle he doth but warne his gnauntes, they fall in their apace, & halfe they clym-me vp the walles: pce, the engines of p warre are prepared all ready. The water portes shall be opened, and the kynges palace shall fall. The queene her selfe shall be led awaye captiue, and her gentyl women shall mourne as the dones, & grone within their hertes.

* Rah. xlii. b

* Rahum is like a pole full of water, but the shall they be kayne to fle. Stand, stabe. (that they etc) & there shall not one turne backe.
 A waye to the synner, awaye with the golde for here is no cde of treasure. There shall be a multitude of all maner of costly ornayntes.
 Thus must the be spoyled, emptied & cleue striped out: that their bettes may be melted awaye, their knees tremble, all their lynes be weak, & their faces blacke as a pot.

C Where is now the dwelling of the lps, & the pasture of p lps whelpes: where the lps & the lpselle wet w the whelpes, a no man feared the awaye: But p lps spoyled enough for hys yonge ones, & denoured for his lpselle: he filled his den w his praye, & his dwelling place w that he had caught.
 Beholde, I will vpo the, sayeth the Lord of hostes, and will set fyre vpo thy charrettes p they shall smoke with all, & the swerde shall denounce p yonge lps. I will make an ende of thy spoyling fro out of p earth, & p voyce of thy nellmyners shall nemoze be herbe.

C Ch. iii. Chapter.
 The fall of Rahum.

I * To p blond thursty citie, which is full of lyes & robbery, & wll not leaue offed ransoming. There a man maye heare scourging, ransoming, the noyse of the whels, p cryenge of the hostes, and p rollinge of the charrettes. There p hoste me get vp w naked swerde, & glysteringe spea-res: there lyeth a multitude slayne, & a greate heape of deed bodys: there is no ende of deed courses: pce, me fall vpo their bodies, And that for p greate and manyfolde who-dome, of p fapies & beutyfull harlot: which is a maistrisse of witchcraft: pce, and sellet p people thow w her who dome, & the nacyd thow w her witchcraft.

* Beholde, I will vpon p (sayeth p Lord of hostes) and will pull thy clothes out thy head: p I maye thew thy nakednes amoge the heathen, and thy shame amoge p kyny-domes. I will cast dyte vpon the, to make the be abhorred, & a gaspne shoke: pce, all they that loke vpon the, shall starte backe, and saye: Rahum is destroyed.

Who will haue pitie vpon p? where shall I seke one to cosforte the? Art p better then the greate cite of Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had p waters solide aboute it: which was strongly fenced & walled with p lee: Ethiopia & Egypte were her strength & p exceedig great, aboute measure. Aphyca & Aphia were her helpers, yet was she dy-uen awaye, & brought into captiuite, her po-ge chyldren were smitte downe at the head of euery street, p lottes were cast for p most auntyent men in her, & all her myghty men were bounde in chaites. Euen so shall thou also be dyoncken, & hyde thy selfe, and seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemy. All thy stronge cities shall be lyke spgctres with ripe figges: whych when a man hatheth, they shall fall into the mouth of the eater.

C Beholde, thy people within the, are but vnto: the portes of thy labe shall be opened vnto thyne enemies, and the fyre shall benoure thy barres. Dyate water now agaynst p be beleged, make vp thy strg holdes go into p clape, tpe p mozte, make strong byck: * pce p fyre shall consume the, p swerde shall destroye the: pce, as the locuste doth, so shall it eate p vp. It shall fall heuily vpo p p locustes: pce, tpe heuily shall it fall vpo the, cut as p grethoppers. Thy marchantes haue bene nobel w the barres of beault: but now shall they lyde abode as the locustes & as their waye: Thy lozdes are as the gre-thoppers, & thy captaynes as the multitude of grethoppers: whych when they be colde, remaine in the byges: but wle the Sonne is vp, they be awaye, & no ma can tel where they are become. Thy wyrdes are as a shep (w hyng of Alur) thy woorthys are layed downe, thy people is scared abode vpo the mountaynes, & no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy woude cannot be hpd, thy plage is so sore. All they that heare this of the, shall clappe their handes out the. As ydath is he, to whom thou hast not alwaye bene doing hurte:

The Prophecy

The booke of the Prophet Baruch.

The first Chapter.

¶ A complainte agaynst Israel.

Ihis is þy cruel burthen, which the Lord hath layd vpon thee, O Lord, how longe shall I crye, & thou wilt not heare: how longe shall I complaine vnto thee, suffering wronge, & yett thou wilt not helpe: yett thou lettest þine lewde people to do wronge, & violence afore me, pouer ouergoeth right: for þy lawe is toarie in peeces, & there can no right iudgement go forth And why? the vngodly is more set by then the righte: this is þy cause, that wronge iudgement proceedeth. Beholde, amonge the heathen, and loke well, wondre at it, and be abashed: for I will do a thyng in your tyme, wherewith thou hast tolde thou, yett thou halt not beleue.

¶ For lo, I will rase vp the Caldees, that bitter and vspite people: which shall go as thyde as þy land is, to take possession of dwelling places, þe be not their aduersaries. I grimme and hopefull people is it, these shall sit in iudgement & punish. Their hostes are swif-ter then the carres of the mountayne, & byte faster then þy volucres in the turning. Their hoofmen come by greates heapes fro farre, they be hastie to deuour as þy Argie. They come all to spoyle: out of them cometh an east wynde, wherewith bloweth and gathereth their captiues, lyke as the sande. They shall mocke þy kinges, and laughe the princes to scorne. They shall not set by thy strange holde, for they shall lay ordinance agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a frech co-rage vnto thee, to go forth & to do more cruel, and to ascribe the power vnto thy God.

¶ But thou O Lord my God, my holy one, thou art from the beginninge, therefore shall we not be. O Lord, thou hast ordeined the for a punishment, and lettest the torpore the myghty. Thynges are cleue, thou mayest not se euill, thou canst not beholde, þyng that is to be wept. Therefore thou dost thou loke vpon þy vngodly, and holdest thy tongue, when the wepeth deuoureth the man þy better the him selfe? Thou makest men as the fish in the see, and lyke as þy creeping beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catch in their net, & gather it in their pame: wherof they reioice and are glad. Therefore offest they vnto their net, & sacrifice vnto their pame: because that thou wast the prey of the people is become to fat, & their meate so plenteous. Wherefore, they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ Of the vision of the prophet, Agaynst poynting, counselours, and Idolaters.

I shode vpon my watch, & set me vpon my bulwourke, to loke and see what he would saye vnto me, and what answer re I shoulde geue him that reposed me. But the Lord answered me, & sayde: Wpste the vision principally vpon thy tables, that who so cometh vp, maye rede it: for the vision is yett farre off for a tyme, but at the last it shall come to passe, & not faple. And though he eare, yett wayte thou for him, for in very deede he will come, & not be lacking. Beholde, the vneightheous sheweth him selfe in laue-gacbe as in a stragg hole: but þy iust shall pue by his fapth. Like as þy wyne disceaueth the dronckarde, euen so þy poudre shall faple and not endure. He openeth his desire vnto the hel, & is as vnfaciable as death.
All heathen gathereth by to hym, and hea-peth vnto him all people.

¶ But shall not all these take vp a poudre agaynst him, & mocke him with a byword, & saye: Woe vnto him that beareth vp by other mens goodes: how longe will he lade hym selfe with thicke claye: how long wilt they stode vp, that shall byte, & awake, that shall feare þy peres, þey shall be their pynne? Whinge þy haill sprount many heathen, therefore shall the remnant of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the eye and vnto all them that dwell therein.

¶ Woe vnto him, that couetously gathe-reth euell goode into his house: that he maye set hym selfe in hye, to escape from þy power of misfortune. Thou hast deuyled the name of thine aduersary, for thou hast slayne to mocke people, and hast wilfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwixte the ioyntes of the building shall answer. Woe vnto him, that buyldeth the towne with bloude, & mayntenech the cytie with vngodlinesse. Shall not the Lord of hostes bigge this to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be byer with a greate fyr, & that the thinge wher vnto the people haue deuyled the felicity, shall be lost? For earth shall be full of knowledg of þy Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters proue the see.

¶ Woe vnto him that getteth his neyghbours dyncke, puttinge in gall and makinge him dronken, that he maye se þy pynne: therefore with shame shall thou be filled, in steade of honour. Dyncke thou also, till thou sloume with all: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the aboute, and shame shall speeke in steade of thy

A pteer of the prophet Abacuc for the smpaint.

A Lorde, when I herbe speake of y, I was aftrayed. The wozech that thou hast take in hande, thalt thou performe in his tyme. O Lorde: & whē thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wozth y thinkest vpon mercy. God cometh from Cheman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

Isa. li. a.

His glay couereth y heuens, & the earth is full of his praye. His shine is as y lumme, and beames of lyght go out of hys handes, there is his power hyd. Desceiption goeth befoze hym, & a pestilent sycknesse go from his fere. * He standerh, & mensureth y earth he loketh, & the people consume awaye, the moistaynes of y worlde fal downe to pouder, & y hills are sapne to bowe the felues, for his goynges are euertalpyng and sure.

Isa. xlii. b.

I sawe, that the panylions of the Mo rians & the tetes of y land of Arabian were vered for weynelle. Wilt thou not angrie O Lorde, in the waters: was not thy wozth in the floudes, & thy displeasure in y see: yea when thou starest vpon thine hoise, & when thy charcters had y victoyr. Thou thewdest thy botwe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed w an orde: vnto the trybes. Selah. Thou dydest denye y waters of y earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were aftrayed, the water dreame wente awaye:

Thou comest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thynne moited. Thou smokest downe y head the house of y vngodly, & discoueredst hys foundaciōs, eue vnto y pike of him. Selah.

Isa. xlii. d.

Thou dydest tryple the othe w his scepter the heydes of his playne people: which com ritnes of their aduice ymaginacions. Therfore, ye shall waite vpon me (sayth β Loide) vntill the tyme that I stande vpon: for I am determined, to gather the people & to bring the kingdomes together, that I may poure out myne anger, & pe all my wrathfull * vpipleasure vpon the. * For at the worlde shall be consumed with the fyre of my gelousy.

And then wyl I clese the lippes of the people, that they maye eueryphone call vpon β name of the Loide, and serue him with one shulder. Soche as I haue subdaed, and my children also whom I haue scatred abrode, shall byynge me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

In that tyme shall thou nomoze be confounded, because of all thy ymaginacions, wher thou hast thou haddest offended me: for
* I will take awaye the proude boasters of thyne honour fro the, so that thou shalt no more triumph because of my holpyl. In β also wyl I leaue a small poore simple people, which shall trust in the name of β Loide.
The remnant of Israel shall do no wykednes, ner speake lyes: neither shall there eny discaitfull tynge be folde in their mou-thes. For they shall be fed, ad take their rest, and no man shall make them asceped. Genethals, & daughter Sp β , betiofull, & Irael: reioyce ye glad from thy whole hert, & daughter Ierusalem, for the Loide hath take awaye thy punishment, and turned backe thyne encirples. The kyng of Israel, cuf the Loide hym selfe is with the: so β thou needest nomoze to feare eny my fortune.

In that tyme it shall be sayde to Ierusalem: feare not, & to Syon: let not thyne hades be slacke, for the Loide thy God is with the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, & a maruelous loue towarde the: pe, he reioiceth ouer the same tyme wyl I gather you. I will get you a name and a good repute amonge all people of the erth, when I turne backe your ca-pitulles before your eyes, sayeth the Loide.

The ende of the prophery of Sophony.

In the secde yere of kyng J * Darius, in the vi. moneth the β daye of β moneth came the woide of the Loide (by the Prophecie Aggeus) vnto * zoioabel the sonne of Salathiel β pryncce of Juda, & to Josua the sonne of Josdech the hye priest, sayinge. Thus speaketh the Loide of hostes, and sayeth, This people hath saye.
The tyme is not yet come to buylde vpon the Lorde house. Then spake β Loide by β pro-phete Aggeus, and sayde. * Ye your selues can finde tyme to dwell in siled houses, and shall this house lye wast? Consyder nowe youre aduice wayes in your hertes (sayeth the Loide of hostes) * ye sowe much, but ye byynge litle in: ye eate, but ye haue not β : nough, ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke your selues, but ye are not warme: and ye that earneth eny wages, putte it in a broken purse.

Thus sayeth the Loide of hostes. Consyder youre aduice wayes in your hertes, get you vnto β mountayne, fetch wood, ad buylde vpon the house: * that it maye be acceptable vnto me, & that I maye see the myne honoure, sayeth β Loide. Ye looked for much and lo it is come to litle, & though ye buy-ge it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayeth the Loide of hostes? * Euen because that my house lyeeth so waste, and ye romne euery man vnto hys aduice house.
Wherefore, the heauy is for bydden to geue you eny dew, and the earth is for bydden to geue you encrease. * I haue called for a brouth, both vpon the lande and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon thynne, and vpon ople, vpon euery thyng that β growe de byngeth forth, vpon men & vpon catell, ye, and vpon all handy labourer.

Now when zoioabel β sonne of Salathiel, & Josua the sonne of Josdech the hye priest & the remnant of the people, herde the voyce of the Loide thes: God, and the woydes of β Prophecie Aggeus (the as the Loide thes: God had sent him) the people bydfeare the Loide. Then Aggeus the Lo-des angell sayde in β Loide messenge vnto the people, * I am with you, sayeth β Loide.
So the Loide waked vp the spete of zoioabel the pryncce of Iuda, and the spete of Josua β sonne of Josdech β hye priest, and the spete of the remnant of all the prophetes: are they yet still aluer? But yd not my wordes and statutes) which I commanded by my seruantes the prophetes) touch your forefathers: Upon this, they gaue answere and sayde: like as the Lorde of hostes brused to do vnto vs, according to oure owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he dealt with vs.

Upon the xxiii. daie of the .xi. moneth which is the moneth Shebat, in the seconde yere of Darius, came the wordes of the Lorde vnto zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, saying, I sawe by nyght and lo, there sat one vpon a redb hoxe and rode still among the myrrer trees, that were beneth vnto the grounde, and behynde hym were there redds, speckled, and whyre hoxes. Then sayde I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the angel that talked with me, sayde vnto me, I will shewe the what theise be. And the man that rode among the myrrer trees answered & sayde: These are they whom the Lorde hath sente to go thowre the world. And they answered the angel of the Lorde, & rode among the myrrer trees and sayde, We haue gone thowre the world: and beholde all the world dwell at ease and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes angel gaue answere and sayde: O Lorde of hostes, howe longe wylt thou be vnmereiful to Ierusalem and to the cyties of Iuda: & wylt thou halt bene dyspleased woth these thre score & ten yeres. So the Lorde gaue a toungue and a comfortable answere vnto the angel & talked with me. And the angel that comened with me, sayd vnto me: Cye thou, & speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, I am ex-cradynge glorious ouer Ierusalem and Iud, and soze dyspleat at the carelesse heathen: for where as I was but alittle angry, they dyd thep: better that I myght destruye them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: I wyl tur me agayne in mercye toward Ierusalem, so that my house shalbe builded in it, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, yee, and the plommet shalbe layd abzoade in Ierusalem, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

And I sayde vnto the angel, that talked w me what be these? he answered me, & These are the hornes which haue scattered Iuda, Irael & Ierusalem abzoade. And the Lord the wylde my four carpenters. Then sayde I: what wylt these do? he answered and sayde: These are the hornes which haue to skrowe Iuda abzoade, that no man durste lyft vp bys hande: But these are come to scap them awake: & to caste out the hornes of the Gentiles: whiche lyfte vp thep hornes ouer the lande of Iuda, to scatter ite abzoade.

The .ii. Chapter.

The reuiewinge of Ierusalem and Iuda.

I Lift vp myne eyes agayne, and lo I beholde: a man with a measure yne in his hand. Then sayde I, whether gauest thou & he sayde vnto me: To measure Ierusalem, & I maye se how longe & howe wyde it is. And behold the angel that talked with me, went bys waye forth. Then went there oure another angel to mete him, & sayde vnto hym: Hane speake to this ponge man, and saye: Ierusalem shalbe inhabited wythout eny wall, for the very multitude of people and cattell that shalbe therein: Yee, I my selfe (sayth the Lorde) wyl be vnto her a wall of fyre rounde aboute, and wyl be honoured in her.

O get you forth. O he from the lande of the north, sayth the Lorde, yee: whome I haue scattered into f foure wyndes vnder beauen, sayth the Lorde. Hane thy selfe, O Shon: thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babilon, for thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. After that glorious power hath he sent me out to the heathen, whych spoyled you, & for who to toucheth you, shall touch a ple of bys owne eye. Beholde, I wyl lyft vp myne hande ouer them: & so that they shalbe spoyled of thase: whych afore scrued them, and ye shall knowe, that the Lord of hostes hath sente me.

Be glad, & reioyce, O daughter of Shon: for lo, & I am come to dwell in the myddell of the, sayth the Lorde at the same tyme there shal many heathen cleue to the Lord and shalbe my people. Thus wyl I dwell in the myddell of the, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde of hostes hath sente me vnto the. The Lorde shal haue Iuda in possession for bys parte in the holy ground, and shal chole Ierusalem yet agayne. Let all flesch be still before the Lorde, for he is cyen ouer bys holy place.

cure of deuces and such as about the name of god, by the byson of the measure, is stamped for byngens of quibet to Babylon.

I turned me, lypstynge by myne booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a synginge booke of. x. cubytes longe, and. x. cubytes very strong, and wente out: & sought to go & take the þ; iourney ouer the whole earth.

C And the woide of þ Lord came vnto me, saying: Take of þ prisoners that are come me & buyde the temple of the Lord, that ye maye knowe, how that þ Lord of hoo-stes hath set me vnto you. And thus shall come to passe, yf ye wyll hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord poure God.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C The estimation of sadpne without merce. The bycoppinge of charite, & the obduracye of the people.

A U It happened also in þ fourth yere of kynge Darius, þ the woide of þ Lord came vnto zachary in the fourth dape of þ nyynth moneth, which is called, Caldeu: what tyme as Daralar & Ro-goimelech & the men þ were w them sent vnto Bethell for to praye before the Lord: and that they shulde laye vnto the prestes, which were in the house of the Lord of hoo-stes, and to the prophets. Shuld I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, & adfeyne as I haue done nowe certayne yeaers? Then came þ woide of þ Lord of hoo-stes vnto me sayege. Speake vnto all the people of the land, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in þ fyfth * a seuenthy moneth (now this lxx. yeaers) dyd ye fast vnto me?
When ye dyd eate also and droncke, dyd ye not eate & dryncke for poure & lone felues?
Are not these the woide, which the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, whē Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, he and the cytyes rounde aboute her: whē there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countrees?

And the woide of the Lord came vnto zachary, saye-ge. Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes. * Execute true iudgement: doctes mercy & lounge kynedme, eueri man to hys brother. Do the wyddowe, the father-les, the straunger, & poure no wrong: & let no man pmaigen euil agaynste hys brother in hys herte. * Neuerthelesse, they wolde not take hede, but turned theyr backs, and stopped theyr eares, þ they shulde not heare: yee, they made theyr bettes as an Adamant stone lest they shulde heare the laue & woide, * which þ Lord of hoo-stes sent in hys holy spete by þ prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lord of hoo-stes was very woth at the. And thus is come to passe:
* that spake as he spake and they wolde not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayth the Lord of hoo-stes) but scattered them amonge all Gentes, whom they knewe not. Thus the lāde was made so desolate, þ there trauayled no man in it nether to, ner fro, for þ picalaunt lāde was vnterly laped waste.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C Of the returne of the people vnto Iherusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. of good woide, & the challenge of the temple.

S O the woide of þ Lord came vnto me, saye-ge. Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes. I was in a great grouw-ly ourt Sion, yee, I haue bene very grouly ouer her in a great dyspleasure thus sayth þ Lord of hoo-stes. I will turne me agayne vnto Sion, & wyll dwell in the myddel of Iherusalem: * so that Iherusalem shall be called a fapthfull & true cytye, þ hyl of the Lord of hoo-stes, yee, an hyl of hyl.

Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes. There shall yet olde men & women dwel agayne in þ stretes of Iherusalem: yee, & such as go w staues in their habes for very age. The stre-tes of þ cytye also shall be full of yonge boyes and damyelles, playnge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes: yf þ sydne of this people thynke it to be vnpolle in these dayes, * shuld it therfore be vnpolle in my syght. sayth þ Lord of hoo-stes: Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes: Behold, I will deliuer my people from þ lan-de of the east & west, and wyll bringe them agayne: that they maye dwell at Iherusalem.
* They shall be my people, & I wyll be theyr God, in treuth and ryght consience.

Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes: let your handes be stronge, yf that now heare these woide by þ month of þ prophetes, wherby be in these dayes þ the foundacyon is layed

*Agg. i. a.

Upon the Lord of hostes house that the temple may be builded. For why? before the temple, neither mecher castel could be wynnyn any thing, neither might any man come in and out in cist, for trouble: but I lett every man go agaynst his neyghboure.

*Agg. ii. c.

For the Lord of hostes, I will now interate presy due of this people homely as afore tyme, sayth the Lord of hostes, but they shal be a seke of peace. The wyneparde shal geue her frute, & grounde shal geue her increase, and the heavens shal geue theyr dewe: and I shal cause the remanent of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shal come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the heathen, O ye house of Juda, and ye house of Israel: Even so wil I deliuer you, that ye shal be a blessing: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

*Eph. ii. c.
*Jer. xii. b.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: lyke as I occupied to punysh you, what tyme as your fathers wrouked me vnto wyath, sayth the Lord of hostes, & spared not. Euen so am I determined now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Juda & Ierusalem, therefore feare ye not. Howe þe thynges that ye shall do, are these: * Speake every man the treuth vnto his neyghboure, execute iudgement truly, and peaceably wpythyn your portes, none of you imagin euil in his herte agaynst his neyghboure, and loue no false othe: for all these are þe thynges that I hate, sayeth the Lord. And the worde of the Lord of hostes, came vnto me, sayeng: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. The fast of the fourth month, þe fast of the fift, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be toye and gladnesse, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Juda: Dely, loue the treuth and peace.

*Eph. ii. a.
*Jer. xii. b.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. There shall yet come people, and the inhabitants of many cyties, & they that dwell in one cyte shall go to another, sayeng. * Wylt thou go, & praye before þe Lord, lett vs like þe Lord of hostes, I will go wþ you: yee, moche people & myghty heathen shall come & seke þe Lord of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before þe Lord. Thus sayeth þe Lord of hostes. In þe tyme shall ten men, out of all maner of languages of the Gentyles take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: We wyl go wþ you, for we haue herde, that God is amonge you.

The ix. Chapter.

The conversion of the Gentiles. The coming of Christe to the sonne of man.

The worde of the Lord shal be receaued at Admach, & Damascus shal be offering: for the eyes of all men & of þe cyties of Israel shall loke vpon the Lord. The borders of hemarth shall be dede therby. Thus also & Sidon, for they are very wyse. * Thus shall make her self stronge, heape vpon synner as þe sande, & golde as þe claye of þe stretes. * Achad, & the Lord shal take her in, & haue her in possession: * he shal synce doo her power into þe see, and she shal be consumed wþ fyre. This shal Ierusalem, & be askeped. * Gaza shal be very sope, & shall Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For þe hynde of Gaza shal crye, & at Ierusalem shall no man dwell.

Strangers shall dwell at Accod, & as for þe pyre of the whylpynes, I shall rote it out. * Theyr blonde wyl I take awaye from theyr mouth, & theyr aboypnacyes from amonge theyr teeth. Thus theyr shal be left for our God, yee, theyr shal be as a prince in Juda, & Accaron lyke as a Jebus. And so wyl I repaire my house rounde about wþ my men of watte gongynge to & fro: that no opprobriour come vpon the emp more. For that haue I senenow wþ myne cyes.

* Reioyce þe greatly. O daughter Syon be glad, O daughter Ierusalem. For lo, thy hynde cometh vnto thee, euen the cyghtynes and Hamoure, Lowly & simple is he, he cryeth vpon an alle, & vpon þe foale of an alle. I will rote out þe charrettes & fyke Ephraim, & the horse from Ierusalem, þe batel bowes shall be destroyed, he shall geue the doctrine of peace vnto þe heathen, & his dominyon shall be from þe one see to þe other, & from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thouzow the bloude of thy couenunt: shalt let * thy prisoners out of the pyre wher his no water. Turne you now to þe stronge holde, ye þe in prison, & longe for to be deliuered. And this daye I bypp þe worde, I wyl rewarde þe double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me & Ephraim haue I fylled. Theyr sorowes, O Sidon, wyl I raple vp agaynst þe Garkes, & make þe as a grauities swearde: þe Lord God shal be sene aboue them, & his darres shall go forth as þe lyghtenynge. The Lord God shall blowe the tromper, and shal come forth as a thorne out of the fowth.

The Lord of hostes shall defende them, & theyr shal consume a denoure, & subdue them wþ þe synge stones. Theyr shal drynke & rage, as it were thozow wyne. Theyr shal be fylled lyke þe balens, & as þe hornes of þe bulter. The Lord their God shal deliuer them in the daye, as þe flock of his people: for as precious stones of a dyademe theyr shal be lett vpon her lande. O how prosperous and goodly & thynges shal that be! The corne shall make þe sponge men cheareful, and the new wyne the maydens.

The x. Chapter.

The people moued to requite the doctrine of truth of the Lord. The Lord the pryncipality to byght and conserue the house of Israel.

Praye

Rape the Loyde then by tymes to geue you platter rapne,* foſhal the Loyde make bright cloude, ad geue you rapne pynough for all the increaſe of the felde. for wyne is the anſwere of Idoles.
 The ſorſhapers ſe lyes, and tell but wyne dreames: the conſorte that they geue, is nothyng worth. Therefore, go they alſe rapne ly-ke a ſheepe of Nepe, and are troubled, becauſe they haue no * ſheperde. My wyoth full diſpleaſure is moued at the ſheperdes, & I will vſet the goates. for the Loyde of hoſtes will graciously viſit his ſtock, the hou-ſe of Iuda, and holde them as a goodly ſapre hoſe in the baſel. Out of * Iuda ſhal come the helmet: the naye the baſelbowe, ad all the pynces together. They ſhal be as ſ gnaunt, which in the baſel creade downe the myre vpon the ſtreets. They ſhal fyghe for the Loyde ſhal be wyth them, ſo that the hoſmen ſhal be conſounded.

I will comforte the hene of Iuda, and pſerue the houſe of Joſeph. I will turne them alſo, for I pitie them: and they ſhal be lyke as they were, when I had not caſt the of. for I the Loyde am their God, ad will heare the. Ephraim ſhal be as a gyaunt, ad their hert ſhal be cheereful as thoſe wyne: yce, their chylden ſhall ſe it, and be glad, ad their hert ſhall reioyce in the Loyde. I will blowe for them and gather them together, for I will rebuke them. They ſhall increace, as they increaſe afore. I will ſowe the amonge the people, that they may thynke vpon me in ſarre countrees: they ſhall lye with their chylden, & turne agayne. I will bynge them agayne alſo from the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of I Syria. I will carye them into the lande of Galaad & to Libanus, and they ſhal wante nothing.
 He ſhall go vpon the ſee of trouble, & ſmyre the ſee waues: ſo that all the depe floudes ſhal be dryed vp. The proude boanſynge of Iſraell ſhal be caſt downe, and the ſcripter of * Egypte ſhall be taken awape. I will co-forſe the in the Loyde, that they maye wal-ke in his name, ſayeth the Loyde.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

¶ The deſtruction of the temple. The caſe of the ſerph: full is conuerted to chylde of the father. A deuourer beſeyn agayne Jeruſalem and Iuda.

When thy dozes, O Libanus, that ſ tyze make colūme they Cedrys trees. howle ye fpyre trees for the Cedyce is fallen, yee, all the proude are waſhed awape. howle (O ye oke trees of Baſan) for the myghty ſtronge wood is cut downe. When may heare the ſheperdes mourne, for their glorie is deſtroyed. When may heare the lpons whelpes croue, for the pyrde of Iordan is waſhed awape.
 Thus ſayeth the Loyde my God: ſede the ſede of the ſlaughter, which ſhal be ſlayne of thoſe ſe poſſeſſe them: yet they take it for no ſinne, but they that ſell them, ſaye: The Loyde be thanked, I am rich: yee, they a bone ſheperdes ſpare the nor. Therefore will I noutore ſpare thoſe that dwell in the lande, (ſayeth the Loyde) but ſo, I will deliuer the people, euery mā into his neygbour hāde and into the hande of his kynge: that they maye ſmyre the lande, and out of their han-des I will not deliuer them.

I my ſelfe ſede ſe ſlaughter there (a poore ſheepe therel) and toke vnto me two ſla-ues: the one is called longyn melchoni, the other is called deſtroper, ad ſo hepte the ſhe-pe. The ſheperdes I putt out of offyce in one moneth, for I myght not awape wyth the, neher had they cny deliue in me. Then ſayde I: I will ſede pynnoize: ſe thynge that dyeth, let it dye: and that will perſyde, let it perſyde, and let the remnant cate, eue-ry one the ſheepe of his neygbour. I toke alſo my longyn niche ſtaff, and blyake it, ſe I myght diſannull the cōuenant, which I made wyth all people. And ſo it was broke in that daie.

Then the poore ſymple ſhepe that had a reſpect vnto me, kered theſe, that it was the worde of the Loyde. And I ſayde vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, byng wyther my pyrce: yf no, then leaue. * So they wayed downe. xxx. ſyluer pens, the value ſe I was pyrred at. And the Loyde ſaid vnto me: caſt it vnto the porter (a goodly pyrce for me to be valued at of them) & ſolde the. xxx. ſyluer pens, and caſt them to the porter in ſe houſe of the Loyde. Then blyake I my other ſtaff alſo: namely deſtroper ſe I myght lowle ſe brotherhead betwixt Iuda and Iſrael.
 And the Loyde ſayde vnto me: Telle ſe alſo the ſtaff of a fooliſh ſheperde: for lo, I will rapne vp a ſheperde in the lāde, which ſhal not ſeke after ſe things that be loſt, ne care for ſuch as go aſtrape: he ſhal not deale ſe woude, he ſhal not noyſe the things that is whole: but he ſhal eate the fleſh of ſoch as be ſat, and teare theye clawes in pſees.

O Idoles ſheperde, that leaueſt the flo-che. The ſwerde ſhall come vpon hys arme and vpon hys ryght eye. hys arme ſhal be cleane dryed vp, and hys ryght eye ſhal be ſore blynded.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

¶ Of the deſtruction and bynnging agayne of Jeruſalem.

When heur burthen which ſe Loyde hath deupled for Iſrael. Thus ſayeth the Loyde: which ſped the braynes abode, ſayde the foundation of the earth: and geueſt man the byent of lyfe. Therefore, I will make Jeruſalem a cuppe of ſurety, vnto all the people that are rounde about her.

RR III Per,

The Prophecy.

* 2. 2. 2. 2. 2.

* See, Iuda hyn selfe also shalbe in the sege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme I will make Jerusalem an heape stone for all people, so that all such as yfe it by, shalbe coare and rente, and all the people of the earth shalbe gathered together agaynst it.

1. 2. 2. 2. 2.

* In that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I will make all hoxes abaynd, and those that rpe vpon them, to be out of their wistes. I will open mine eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all þ hoxes of the people with blindness. And the princes of Iuda shall saye in their heretes. The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall geue me consolacion in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme will I make þ princes of Iuda lyke an hore burnpunge out with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre among the strawe so that they shall consume all þ people rounde aboute them, both vpon the ryght hande & the left. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

The Lorde shall preserve the tētes of Iuda lyke as a foze tyme: so þ the gloz of the house of Dauid: & the gloz of the ctytēns of Jerusalem, shalbe but lytle regarded, in coparison of þ gloz of Iuda. In that daye shall the Lorde defende þ ctytēns of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then amonge the shalbe as * Dauid: and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as Gods house, as the Angell of the Lorde befoze them.

41. 2. 2. 2. 2.

At the same tyme will I go about to destroye all such people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the ctytēns of Jerusalem * will I poure out the spere of grace & copassion, so þ they shall loke vpon me, who they haue perced: & they shall bewepre hi as me moure: ne for their only begotte sone: yee, & be soz for him, as me are soz for their kith chylde.

* 2. 2. 2. 2. 2.

* Then shall there be a great mourning at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Ademion in the selbe of Baggadon. And the lande shall bewaile euery kynd by the selues. The kined of þ house of Dauid the selues alone, and their wyues by the selues: The hyrned of the house of * Sathan them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The hyrned of the house of Levi them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The hyrned of the house of Semei them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. In lyke maner, all þ other generacions eueychone by them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues.

Of the trail of grace and truth, of the cleane remouance of Idolatry, and of false prophetes.

* 2. 2. 2. 2. 2.

* At that tyme shall the house of Dauid and the ctytēns of Jerusalem haue an open * well, to wash of synne and uncleynesse. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) * I will destroye the names of Idols out of the labe: so that they shall nomore be put in remembrance.

* 2. 2. 2. 2. 2.

* As for the false prophetes also, and the vncleyn spere, I shall take the out of þ lande. So that yf any of them prophete any more, his a vne father ad mother that be: gat him, shall saye vnto hi. Thou shalt dye for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of þ Lorde: yee, his a vne father ad mother that begat him, shall woude him, whē he prophete. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euery one of his wils when he prophete: nether shall they were sack clothes any more, to disceane men with all. But he shall be lapne to saye: * I am no prophet: I am an husbandman, for so am I taught: by Adam fro my youth by. The booke of the Prophete Malachy.

The first Chapter.

A complaine against Israel and her priests.

Ihe heuy burthe, which þe Loide hath weyth agaynste Israel, by Malachy. I haue loued you, saith the Loide: & yet ye saye: wherein haue thou loued vs?
* I was not. * (sau Jacobs brother, saith þe Loide: yet haue I loued Jacob, and dated sau: * per, I haue made vs hilles wast and his heritage a wilderness for dragons.
And though I som saye: well, we are destroied, we wyl go by the way agayne the places that be wasted, yet saith the Loide of hostes: * what they buyled, that bin he I doone: to that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whome the Loide hath euer bene angrie withall.

Þoure eyes haue sene it, and ye poure sel-ues must cōfesse. þe Loide hath brought þe lade of Israel to great honour. * Shulde not a sonne honour his father, & a seruāt his master? * If I be now a father, where is myne honour? If I be the Loide, where am I feared? saith the Loide of hostes.

Now to you priests, þe despyte my name.
And ye saye: wherein haue we despyed thy name? In this, ye offere vncleane beest vpon myne autler. And ye saye: wherein haue we offered any vncleane thing vnto the?
In this ye saye: the autler of the Loide is not to be regarded. Ye offere the blynde, is not that euill? And ye offere the lame and the sycke, is not that euill? * Ye, offere it vnto thy prince, that he be content with the, & accepte thy person, saith þe Loide of hostes!

And now make poure prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soche things haue ye done. What he regard you personnes, thinke ye, saith the Loide of hostes: * Per, what is be amonge you, that wyl do so much as to shut the doores, as to hinde the fyre vpon myne autler for naught? * I haue no pleasure in you, saith the Loide of hostes: and as for the meat offering, I wyl not accept it at poure hande. * For fro the offering vpon of the sonne vnto the going done of the same, my name is greāt amonge the Gentiles: yee, in euery place that there sacrifice be done, and cleane meat offering offered vnto my name: for my name is greāt amonge the heathen, saith þe Loide of hostes. But ye haue vnbalowed it, in that ye saye, the autler of the Loide is not to be regarded, and the thing that is set ther vpon not woorthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but labour and trauaple,

It not be lyghte, other cleare of dymme.

* This shall be that speciall daye which is knowne vnto þe Loide: neither day nor nyght but about the euenyng tyme it shall be light.

* In that tyme shall there waters of lyfe runne out fro Ierusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east fele, and þe other halfe towarde the west: so that I shall cōfesse both souther and norther. * And the Loide hym selfe shall be hynged ouer all the earth.

At þe tyme shall there be one Lord onely, & his name shall be but one. * I shall go about the whole earth, as vnto a felde: fro Siba to Kēdo, & fro the south to Ierusalem. * He shall be set vpon, & inhabit in her place: fro Ben Ja-mins porte, vnto þe place of the fyre porte, & vnto the corner porte: & from the tower of * hanañell, vnto the tynge of the pynell.

There shall men dwel, & there shall be no more curtinge, but Ierusalem shall be safely inhabited. * His shall be the place, wherewith the Loide will synge all people, þe haue fought agaynst Ierusalem. Namely, their flesch shall cōsume awaye, though they stād vpon their fete, their eyes shall be corrupted in their holes and their tynge shall cōsume in their mouth.

In that daye shall þe Loide make a great edificion amonge the, so þe one man shall take another by the hande, & lape his shouders vpon the handes of his neyghbour. * Iuda shall speak also agaynst Ierusalem, & the goodes of all þe heathen shall be gathered together round about: golde & syluer & a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall this plague goo ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, & all the beastes that shall be in þe holl, lyk as vnto the plague of the people. * Every one þe remayneth then of all the people, which cam agaynst Ierusalem, shall go vpon perle, to woorthippe the hynges (curn the Loide of hostes) * and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacion vpon the earth goeth vnto Ierusalem for to woorthippe the hynges (curn the Loide of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne.
If the hynges of Egypte go not vpon, & come uaple. Ad thus haue ye thought scozne at it (sayerth the Lorde of hostes) offeringe eobberys, pec, the lame and the lpycke. Ye haue brought me in a meate offeringe. Whilke I accepte it of your hnde. Sayerth the Lorde. Curled be the dylleler, which hath in his flocke one that is a male, ad when he maketh a voice, offerth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a greete hygne (sayerth the Lorde of hostes) and my name is fearfull among the heathen.

was in his mouth, ad there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He dwelled wth me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one awaye fro their synnes. * For in the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowledg, & men may seeke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of the waye, ad haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: * ye haue broken the conuauit of Leui, sayerth the Lorde of hostes. Therfore wyl I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes,

* I haue not all one father, / hath not one God made vs: * wyl doth eueri one of vs then despyse his auncle brother, & so breake the conuauit of our fathers. Now hath Iuda offended: pec, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: for Iuda hath despyled the sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a strange God. But the Lorde shal destroye the ma that doth this: (pec, both the mother ad the scole) out of the tabernacle of Jacob with hym that offereth vp meate offeringe vnto the Lorde of hostes. Now haue ye brought it: accepte my thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherefore? Cuse because that where as the Lorde made a conuauent betwixt me and the wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despyled. * Yet is the thyne auncle company and marryd wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an eyer.

fought the seide promysed of God. Therfore loke well to your sayer, and let no man despy-le the wyfe of his youth. Yet hateth her put her awaye sayerth the Lorde God of Israel and geue her clothinge vnto the scoine, sayerth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to your sayer, ad despyle her not. Pegreue the Lorde with your wordes, & yet ye saye: wherewithal haue we greued hym? In this, that ye saye. Al that do euil are good in the syght of God, and such plesse hym. Wher is the God that punissheth?

To the Reader,

Consideration that the bo

kes before are founde in the hebreue tonge, receaued of all men: & that the other folowynge, whych are called Hagiotogrypha (because they were wont to be reade, not openly and in comen, but as it were in secret and aparte) are netter founde in the hebreue nor in the Caldeu: all whych thinges they haue not of longer bene written: in lesse then it were happily the boke of Sapience: wher upon it were now very harde to reapey a amende them: And that also they are not receaued now taken as le. gytymate a reasull, as well of the hebreues as of p whole Church, as S. Hierome sheweth: we haue le parat them, & lett them asyde, that they may the better be knowen: to thpntent that men maye knowe of whych bokes wrytynge ought to be receaued, and of whych not. For the sayde S. Hierome speakynge of the boke of Iudith (which is hagiotogryphe) sayth, p the auctoptye therof is not esteemed worthy and sufficient to confyrme and stablysh the thynges that lyght in dysputacyo. And generally of all p bokes called Hagiotogrypha, he sayth, that men maye reade them to the edyfyinge of the people: but not to confyrme a strength the doctrine of the Church. Icaue ouer here the lawe (as they call it) of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xvi. distinc. where he sheweth his iudgement. Lpke wyse the Glose of. c. Canones. xvi. distinc. which sayth, that men reade the, but not in generall: as though he shulde saye, that generallly and thowout they are not allowed. And not wythout a cause: for that they haue bene corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his boke called Hypothica Ecclesiastica: whych thyng is calyde to be knowen euen now a dayes in certen poyntes, namely in the bokes of the Machabees: whose second boke S. Hiero. confesseth that he founde not in the hebreue, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspect and the lesse receaued. In lyke manner is it of the thyrde and fourthe boke of Esdras, whych S. Hierome protesteth that he wolde not haue translated, esteemyng them for dreames: where as Iosephus yet in his booke of hys Antiquities declareth p summe of p matter after the manner of a storye, as well of the boke of Machabees as of the. iii. of Esdras: all though he esteame the bokes compiled from the rapyne of kynge Artaxerxes vnto hys tyme, to be hagiotogrypha.

Wherfore then, whē thou wilt mainteyne any thyng for certen, rendyng a reason of thy sayth, take heade to proceade therein by p lypynge and wyethye scriptures, folowynge S. Peter, whych sayeth: he p speaketh, let hym speake as though he speake the worde of God. he sayth the worde of God, as a thyng most true and certen, opened by the pphetes and Apostles, inspyred wyth the holy goost: of whom we haue wrytten in moare cleare then the daye. A wryter ha upyng greate desyre to confyrme and stablysh thez oppynous by the lawe of man, saye, that they shame to speake wythout lawe: how moch more feare and drede then ought he to haue, that sayth he is a Chyrstian, the whych holberth not hym selfe; or reaseth not in p lawes of the lypynge God: but in mennes inuencions, iudgyng of all thynges accordyng to them, and leauyng to an vncertaine pmyngacyon and phantasye: Let vs therefore that are buylded on the foun dacyon of the holy pphetes and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on whych they them selues were founded, and whych they yencheth, that is Iesus Chyrst, the sure stone) leaue the thynges that are vncertaine to folowe the certē: holdynge vs and reassynge vs in them, and fastenyng oure ancre there, as in a sure place. For oure Chylden sayth conspkyeth not in doutefull thynges, but in playne and moost certen assurednes, and in moost true presunpon, taken & confirmed by infallible wryte. In whych God graunte vs to walke perpetuallye, to thpntent that accordyng to le (fulfyllynge his holy wyll in vs, and fetyng asyde all inuencions contrary vnto hym) we maye lpye to hys honoure, and to the edyfyinge of hys Church.

C The. iii. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a ſeall. And the ſentences of the thys ponge men. of whych the ſpall be declared.

Kynge Darius made a great ſeall vn- to his ſeruautes. vnto all hys courtiers. & to all the officers of Media and Perſia. pre to all ſe debytes and rulers that were vnder hym. from India vnto Ethiopia. an hūdzeth &. xxvi. courtiers. So whyn they had eaten & dycken beynge ſatyrſed. and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge wente into his chambry. laped hym downe to ſlepe. and ſe awaked.

Then the thys ponge men. that kepte the kynges perſonne. & watched hys body. com- menced amonge them ſelus. & ſpake one to another. let euery one of vs ſape ſome thynge. & loke whole ſentēce is wyſer & moze cō- ſecler then the other. vnto hym ſhall kynge Darius geue greate gfytes. & clothe hym with purple. He ſhall geue hym velleis of golde to dygncke in. clothes of golde & cou- rnynges. he ſhall make hym a colſely chart. & a byble of golde. he ſhall geue hym a bo- net of whyte ſylke. & a cheyne of golde aboute hys neck. pre he ſhall be the ſecōde & pyn- cipall next vnto kynge Darius. & that be- cauſe of hys wyſdome. and ſhall be called the kynges kynſman.

So. euery one wrote his meaning. ſealed it. & laped it vnder ſe kynges pelotore. & ſap- ded: whyn ſe kynge arſelyth. we wyll geue him oure wyrtynge. & loke whole worde ſe kynge & hys cheſe Lordeſ iudge to be ſe moost wyſely ſpoken. ſe ſame ſhall haue ſe victoz. ¶ One wrote: Alwey is a ſtonge thynge. The ſecond wrote: The kynge is ſtronger. The thrid wrote: Alwey haue pet moze ſtren- ghte. but aboue all thyngeſ the tructh be- reth a wape ſe victoz. Now whyn the kynge was rſen vp. they toke theſe wyrtyngeſ & deliuered them vnto hym. ſe he red theſe. He ſent ſe forth to call al biſchepes lordes. all ſe debytes & rulers of the cortres of Me- dia & Perſia. And when they were ſet downe in ſe coſcell. ſe wyrtyngeſ were red befo- re them. And he commaunded to call for ſe ponge men. ſe they myght declare theſe mea- nynges the ſelus vp mouth. So when they were ſent for. & came in. ſe kynge ſapde vnto them: theſe vs & make vs to vnderſtāde what ſe thyngeſ are ſe ye haue wyrtten.

D Then beganne þe fyrst (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O ye men, * wyne is maruelous stronge, & ouercometh them þe strongest: it dyscaueth the mynde, & bypnyeth both the poore man & the kynge to dotage & vanyte. Thus doth it also with the bondman & with the fre, with the poore & ryche: it taketh awaye theyr understan- dyng, and maketh them carelesse and myrry, so þe none of them remembereþ any heynous dett oʒ betwpe: It causeth a man to thynke also that þe thyng which he doth, is ho- nelt & good: & remembreth not þe is a kynge, noʒ þe is an auctorite, & that he ought not do soch thynges. Howeuer, when men are dysnyng, they forgett all frendshyp, wylfully saye falshehoodes & lous: but as soone as they are doleful, they drewe out þe swerde & wyl fyght: & when they are layed downe from þe wyne, & sopeful vyagayne, they cannot tell what they byd: indge ye now, is not wyne the strongest: soʒ who wolde els take in hand to do soch thynges: And when he had spoken this, he helde his tongue.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The declaration of the.ii. last sentences of the young man, prynced in the Chapter before: of which the last, that is, that vertue beareth the victorye in all thynges, is most commended & alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all þe rulers vnder hym, that they shoulde abyde ioyobas betwixt the burthens of Jerusalem.

A Then þe seconde (which had sayde, that the kynge was strongest) beganne to speake, saying: O ye men, are not they þe strongest & most excellēt. þe conquerors the lande, & the see, & all that is in þe er, and in the earth: Now is the kynge lord of all thes thynges, & hath domynion of the all: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende his me forth a warfare, they go, & beake downe hylls, wallis & towres. They are slayne, & slaye (other men) thein selues, & ouerpasse not the kynges woode. If they get þe victorye, they bypnye þe kynge all þe people. A þe wyse, the other þe meale not with warres & fyghtynge, but tply the grounde: when they reape, they bypnye tpy bute vnto the kynge. And þe the kynge aloue do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: þe he commaunde to forgyue, they forgyue: þe he commaunde to smyte, they smyte: þe he byd theye a wyse, they dryue awaye: þe he commaunde to buyde, they buyde: þe he commaunde to beake downe, they beake downe: þe he commaunde to plante, they plante. The com- men people & the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane season spyteth hym downe, eateth, and dyspacteth, and taketh his rest: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kynge, & not one of them darre get hym out of þe wyse, to do his ad- uene busynes, but must be obedynt vnto þe kynge at a woide. Indge ye now, O ye men, how shulde not he go farre aboue vnto wdd men are thus obedynt: And when he had spoken this, he helde his tongue. The thyrde, whose name was ioyobabel, which had spo- ken of women & of tructh, began to saye as- ter this maner: O ye men, it is not þe greates kynge, it is not þe multitude of men, neither is it wyne þe excellēt: Who is it then þe hath the lordshyp ouer them: Haue not women bozue the kynge, and all þe people that rule those thynges: haue not women bozue the, and brought them vp, þe plante the wynges, wherout the wyne cometh: They make gar- ments for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde, & syluer, & all pre- cious thynges, and is a saye well fauoured woman, they leaue all to gether, and tume theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, & gaue vpon her, & haue more desyre vnto her, then vnto þe syluer & golde, oʒ any maner of pre- cious thyng. * A man leaueþ his father þe brought hym vp, leaueþ his adue natural countre, & cleaueth vnto the woman: þe he leopardeþ his lyfe with þe woman, & reme- bereth neither father, ner mother, ner countre. As þeys the ye must needs knowe, that we- men haue the domynion ouer you.

Woth it not greue you: A man taketh his swerde, & goeth hys wyse to kille, to kyll, to murder, to laye vpon the see, and seeth a lyon, and goeth in the darke: & when he hath kollen, disceaued and robbed, he byp- nyeth it vnto his lode. Agayne, a man loyeth hys wyse better then father and mother: þe many one there be, þe tene out of thes wy- ters, & become bondmen for theyr wynges la- kes: many one also haue perished, haue bene slayne, & haue synned because of women.

And now helue me, I knowe a kynge which is greates in hys power, and all lades stonde in awe of hym, & no man darre laye hande vpon hym: þe byd þe, that Aname (the daughter of þe greates kynge Bartaia) the kynges concubine, letteth þe the kynge vpon the rygth hande, & toke of hys crowne from hys head, & set it vpon her adue head, and smote the kynge with her left hande. Howeuer, the kynge looked vpon her wyth open mouth: þe he laughed vpon hym, he laughed also: but þe she toke any displea- sure wyth hym, þe hys was fayne to flatter her, & to geue her good wordes, tply he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then stronger: Greates is þe earth, & hys is þe heauen. Who doth these thynges: Then þe kynge & þe wyse looked one vpon another. So þe beganne to speake of þe tructh: O ye men, are not women stronger: Greates is the earth, hys is the hea- uen. I wyll is þe counte of the same, * he com- paleth the heauen rounde aboute, & seeth þe his counte greate is the truethe, & ströger then all thynges.

All the earth calleth vpon þe truethe, the heanen prayeth it, all woymes make a treble at it, & so it is no vnryghteous thyng.
All þis is vnryghteous: þe kyng is vnryghteous: women are vnryghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, pee all theþe woymes are vnryghteous, and there is no truethe in them. In theþe vnryghteousnes also shall they be destroyed & perishe. As for the truethe, * it endureth, & is all waye strö-

The truethe accepteth no personnes, it purgeth no difference betwixte riche or poore, betwixte the myghtye or mykle, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euill or good, and all men are louingly dealt wth all in þe woymes of it. In þe iudgement of it there is no vnryghteous thyng, but strength, myght, & powre & mayesty for euermoze. Blessed be the God of truethe.

And with that he helde his töge, and all the people cryed, & sayde: Great is þe truethe, & aboue all. Then sayde þe kyng vnto hym: Take what thou wilt, moze then is appoynted in þe wyrtþyng, and I shall geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thy companyons: þe halfe yett next me, and be my kynman. Then sayde he vnto the kyng: Remember the promyse & woide, which thou hast woyde & promysed (in the dape when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde by Jerusalem, & to sende agayne all þe vessels and Iewels, þe were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: which Cyrys separted, w^hle he offered in Babilon, & wolde sende them agayne.
And thy mynde was to buylde vth the tēple which þe Sompters bzent, when Jerusalem was destroyed by þe Chalbees. This oncyþ (w^h kyng is þe thyng that I requere, thys is þe mayesty, which I desyre and ask of the:
that thou performe the woide, which thou wyt thyne awne mouth hast made vnto þe kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kysed him, * & wrote a letter vnto all þe deuytes and Queenes, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they shulde chynge him forth, and all them þe wolde go vth with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all þe Scheyres that were in Celosyria and Iherences, and vnto Lyba-nus, þe they shulde watre Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the cytle withall. Whosoeuer he wrote vnto all þe Jewes, þe were gone out of hys realme into Jherusalem because of the frechode, þe no officer no ruler, nor Scheyre, shulde come to theþe dozes, and þe all theþe lande which they had acquered, shulde be fre & not tributary. And that þe Sompters shulde geue ouer þe cytyes and villages of the Jewes, which they had taken in-pee & that they shulde yearly geue xx. talentes to þe buyldyng of the tēple, vntill the tyme that it were fynysched, and to the dayly halowynge of the bent offsprynge (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also.

And þe all they which come from Babilon to buylde the cytle, shulde haue fre lyberte, & they & theþe chyldeyn, & all the Iewes.

He wrote þe greatnesse also, & commaunded that þe holy garment shulde be geuen them, wherin they mynystred: & woide þe comāundementes shulde be geuen to þe Leuites, vntill the dape, that the house were fynysched, and Jerusalem buyldeþ vth a commaunded that all they that watched the cytle, shul-de haue theþe porcyons & wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessels þe Cyrys had separated from Babilon: and all that Cyrys had geuen in comāundement, þe same charged he also, that it shulde be done & sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when thys ponge man was gone forth, he turned his face forwarde Jerusalem, and prayed þe kyng of heauen, and sayde: * Of the comēty the victorie, of the comēty the buyldome and clearenesse, and I am thy seruānt. Blessed art thou, which hast geuen nie wylidome: that wylt I pray-se, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers.

* Eccl. i. 1.

And to he take the letters, & wrote vnto Babilon. And when he came there, he tolde thys vnto all his byrthens þe were at Babilon, & they prayed þe God of theþe fathers, that he had geuen them refreshyng & lyberte to go vth, and to buylde Jerusalem & the temple (wherin the name of the Lord is called vpon) and they rejoyced with in strumtes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

Of the v. Chapter.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are rebuith. They begynne to laye the foundacyon of the temple, but are leite by the inuence of euermoze: and so is the buyldyng byruyn of the space of two yeares.

¶ After thys were the pynncipall men of all the villages chosyn in the trybes and kynredes, that they shulde go with theþe wyues and chyldeyn, with theþe seruāntes & maydens, with all theþe catell and substance. And wheris the kyng sent with them a thousande hoysmen, to couerpe them safely vnto Jerusalem, and they þe then were glad, playng vpon instrumē-pyles and the Leuites, & the people that went out to Ierusalem, and in the cowntre there about, the synners also & the poyetes, euery one of Israel in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel, were euery ma at his busynes, they came all wyth one consent into the court, whiche was before the East dore. And there stode Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren the pyles, ad zobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethren, setting vp an awlter, to offre brest sacrificys upon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other cōtrees, and the heathen out of all lades to set vp awlter in his place, and offred sacrificys ad brent offeringes unto the Lorde in the mo-nynge. And to they helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is commaunded in the lawe.
And dayly offred they as accordeynge was,
and made sacrificys appoynted, & offryn-ges also of the Sabbathe & of the new mo-ones, and all holy feastes. * And al they that brent offeringes unto the Lorde, beganne at the newe moone of the vii. moneth to offre unto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet bupde. And they gaue unto p. Masons and Carpenteres, money, meate, & drin-ke with chearfullite. Unto them of Sidon also and Cypr they gaue carres, that they shulde carpe Cedre trees fro Libanus to be ioyntes & beames, ad that they shulde make shyppes in the haue of Toppo, accordeynge as it was appoynted & adordned by Cypr kyng of the Persians.

And in the seconde yere they came into y temple of God at Ierusalem. * In the secōd moneth begane zobabel the sonne of Sha-lathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and their brethren the pyles and Leuites, and al they that were come unto Ierusalem out of the captiuitie of Babilō, & layed the foundation of the temple, in the newe moone of the second moneth in y secōd yere p they were come into Jewey & Ierusalem. And they appointed p Leuites (p they were above. xx. yere old) unto y seruice of p Lorde: so Iesua & his sonnes and his brethren, al the Leuites stode together, & performed the lawe and ordy-nauce in the house of the Lorde.

And the pyles stode, & had their garme-tes & trompettes, and the Leuites the son-nes of Asaph had Cyrnals, geunge thankes and psalms unto the Lorde, according
* as Dauid the kyng of Israel had adordned. And the song p they byd singe unto the Lorde, was after this maner. * A syng unto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & his goodnes vnto Israel endureth for euer. And all y people blew out with trompettes, and song with loude voyce, prapring the Lorde together in y rearing vp of the house of y Lorde.

* There came also from among the pyles and Leuites the rulers & elders, accordyng to the tribes and kindredes (such as had lene the house afore) to the buplding of thys te-ple with great crye and great mourning, many also with trompettes ad great tope: In somuch, that the trompettes mighte not well be hearde for the weeping and mour-nyng. For the comyn people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Then came the enemyes of the tribes of Iuda and Benjamin, to knowe what that trompetting and noyse of shawmes mighte be. And they percaued y it was they which were come agayne out of captiuitie, & wolde bypde the temple vnto a newe unto the Lord God of Israel. So they went to zobabel and Iesua, ad to the rulers of the byllages, and sayd vnto the. Shal we bupde wyth you also? For we lyke wischaue heard you Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Alonzar the kyng of Mira, which brought vs hither. Then zo-robabel and Iesua and y rulers of the byllages of Israel sayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye shuld bupde the temple of our God w vs: we our selues alone wll bupde unto the Lorde, lyke * as Cypr the kyng of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the lande laped thrm selues agaynst those p were in Jewey, helde vp y buplding from the, layed wayte vpon them pelye, stopped such as brought any thyng to them, forbade them to bupde, and byndered those that made the passage, that the buplding shuld not be finished: ad this continued so longe as kyng Cypr luyde: and so they put of the buplding for the space of two yeres, vntyl the capgne of kyng Darius.

Newithstandynge in þe seconde yeare of þe reigne of Darius, * Aggeus & Zachary the sonne of Addo prophesied vpon them in Jewry and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel. * Then zoobabel the sonne of Balthiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedebe stood up, and beganne to buyde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, whiche the prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At the same tyme came Spennes the under Shene in Syria and Phenices, with the landlobes adhyss companions, and sayd vnto the: Whohath bydden and commaunded you to buyde the house, to make the rofe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woosche men, that buyde them? Answereth the elders of the Jewes had such grace of þe Lorde, that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked thereto) but buyded on syl, vnto the tyme that kynge Darius were certified therof, and an and were receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Spennes the under Shene in Syria & Phenices, and the landlobes with thez companions, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenices, sende their salutaciō vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye the lorde the kynge, þe we came into þe lande of Jewry, and went to Jerusalem: wher we founde the buyding the great house of God & the temple, with great costly fre stone and w goodly tymber of þe walles: pec they make great haste with the woosche, & helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with great diligence and wooschp is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vpon the house and the buyding, ad this we oyd, to the intent that we myght certifye the perfectly, & wyte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the woosche. And they gaue vs this answer: We are the seruantes of the Lorde, which made heauen and earth: ad us for this house: * hath bene buyded and set vpon afore tyme by the great & myghtie kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and sinned agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, the kynge of the Caldees, whych brake downe the house & bent it, & carped awaye the people prisoners vnto Babilon. * Answereth the in the fyfte yeare that kynge Cyrus enquired at Babilon, Cyrus þe kyng wrote and commaunded to buyde vpon this house agayne: and al the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his a tyme temple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered them to zoobabel and to Salmannasar the under Shene, commaūdyng them þe they shulde buyde those ornaments agayne to Jerusalem into þe temple and to begynne fro þe tyme forth, to buyde the temple agayne in his a tyme place. Then Salmannasar laied þe foundaciō of þe Lorges house at Jerusalem, ad euer sence haue they buyded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore O kynge, yf thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the Lybaries & rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be founde then, that it is done to the counsell & consent of kynge Cyrus, and yf our lorde þe kynge be so minded, let hym wyte vnto vs therof.

* The commaūded kynge Darius, to seke in the Lybaries: ad so at Cybatanis in a lytel cytie in Medea there was founde soche a wyrtynge: In the first yeare of the reigne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaūded that the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shulde be buyded agayne, and adours to be made there continually vnto þe Lorde whose heighth shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredeth, the lorde cubites, ad foure square with the heuen stones, with a loft of tymber of the same countre, pec with a new loft, and the expenses therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornaments of golde and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were a fore. Spennes also the under Shene in Syria and Phenices, the Princes and their companions, & the other that be heade rulers in Syria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thig to do with þe place.

Cyrus haue commaūded also, þe they shal buyde the house of þe Lorde whole vpon ad haue ordered them, to helpe those that become out of captiuitie: tpe the house of the Lorde be finished: ad out of the tpe and tazing that is yearly capled vpon in Syria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe to the offeringe of the Lorde: the same to be deliuered vnto zoobabel the officer, that be ether withal maye ordeyne offerings, lambes, and coze, salt, wyne and oyle, and that continually euery yeare: after the experiences * which the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shal be made dayly: thus shal be geuen vnto them without delaye, þe they maye offer sacrifices dayly to þe hest God, for the kynge and for his seruantes, and to praye for thez lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery side, that whosoener breakeþ oþer despyseth this commaūdemēt of the king, shalbe hanged vpon a galows (maile of his a tyme good) ad all his goodes shalbe bestowed vnto þe king. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kynges ad people, that vnder take by violence to hinder þe same, or to deale vnur:

unreithfully with the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe done with al diligence.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The temple is destroyed and desolate: and the feast of unleuened breade is holden.

Then Darius the undercheyues in Ecbolys, and Phenices, and the other Landloides with their companions, obeyed the thynges þat kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in þat holy woikes, and were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the woike of the Sanctuary wente forth and prospered, when Aggeus ad Zachary prophesied. And they performed all thynges that were þat commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

And thus was our house finished vnto þat xliiij. daye of the moneth Adber, in the vi. yere of kynge Darius. And the chylde of Israel the prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuite, and soche as were ioyned vnto them, byd accorde byng as it is writen in the boke of Moyses. And in the dedication of the temple: they offered an hundred oxen, two hundred rammes, four hundred lambes, & twelue goates, for the synnes of all þat people of Israel, after þat nombre of the tribes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites kede seaped in theyr flesshe garments, after the tribes, ouer all the woikes of the Lorde God of Israel according to the boke of Moyses, and the porters by all the doores.

¶ And the chylde of Israel (with those þat were come out of captiuite) helde the passeouer the fourtene daye of the first moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. Theyr came out of captiuite, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together, and so al they that came out of captiuite, killed the easter lambe, for theyr brethren, for the prestes ad for them selues. And the chylde of Israel that came out of captiuite, & escaped froin at the abhominacions of þat heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of unleuened bread seven dayes longe, eatynge and drynkyng and were mery before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of þat kynge of Assyria, and comforted their handes to the woikes of the Lorde God of Israel.

¶ Darius causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readeth them the lawe. Darius the kinge of Persia.

After hym when Artaxerxes the kynge of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Sarapas, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Shallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Borsus, the sonne of Abiui, the sonne of Binnas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the first priest. This Esdras wente by from Babylon: for he had good understandinge in the lawe of Moyses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught ad done in dede. And the kynge fauoured him and byd him great worshippe and honoure after all þys besydes. There went by with hym also certayne of the chylde of Israel, of the prestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and minystrs of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere of the raygne of kynge Artaxerxes, i the first moneth, that is in the seuenth yere of the raygne, theyr wet from Babylon in the new moone of the vi. moneth, & came the byr wyge to Jerusalem after his commaundement, yke as the Lorde had prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruction, that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behinde, which are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taughte whole Israel all rightousnes and iudgement.

¶ Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, ad depulped the wyrynges: that were come fro Artaxerxes the kynge: to Esdras þat prest & reder of the lawe of þat Lorde. And this is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his gretyng vnto Esdras the prest and reder of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshype and good wyl I haue ordeyned and charged, þat there be cry of the Jewes, of the prestes & Leuites in my realme, which dryfeth and is conté to go with the vnto Jerusalem, þat he maye do it. Therfore, þat cry be mynde to beare the company, let them come together, and go with þat yke as I am content and my seuen frendes, my counsellors: to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, & kepe the thynges according as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: ad to byng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, & all the synce ad golde that is in the countre of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem, with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem. See, that the same synce and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other that belonge to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacrifices vnto the Lorde, vpon the auter of the Lorde, which is at Jerusalem.

¶ And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do with the synce ad golde, that do after thy mynde, according to þat commaundement

ment of the Lord thy God, a lykewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen the. for þe upper of the house of þe Lord thy God: & other things whatsoeuer is necessary for þe to the woche of the temple, that shalbe geuen the of þe highe treasure: & loke what thou wylt thy brethren wyl bo with the golde & syluer, that bo after the wyll of the Lord. And I hyngre Artacerres haue commended the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenice, that whatsoeuer shalbe of the prests and reader of the lawe of the Lord both wyte, it shalbe geue hym: tyll an hundred talentes of syluer, ad of golde in lyke maner. Of coine also an hundred measures, ad tyll an hundred vessels of wyne: & other plectious thynges without nombre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the hest God, that the wrath of God arys not in the realme of the kyng, and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also, þe require no taxe nor trybute of the prests, Luyres, hyngers, and ministers of the temple, nor of the wyters: & that no man haue auctorite to merle eny thyng agaynst the. As for the (Meditas) set thou iudges ad arbyters in the whole land of Syria & Phenice, after the wysdome of God: and learne all such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lord, and let all them that offend agaynst the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

Then sayde Eneas the wyter. * Blessed be þe God of our fathers, that hath geue so good a mynde and wyll into the hert of þe kyng, to magnifye his house that is at Ierusalem, ad hath made me to be accepted in the sight of the kyng, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was steadfast in my mynde, accordyng as þe Lord my God helped me, & I chose out men of Israel to go by with me. * And these are þe names, (after their kynredes & houses of they fathers) that went by with me from Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artacerres: Of the sonnes of Phares, Serlonus. Of þe sonnes of Semariath, Aucus. Of the sonnes of David Aucus, the sonne of Cecilia.

* As for the sonnes of the prestes & Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I unto Eleazar, and Eccelem, and Salina, & Nabobam, and Euanthan, ad Semeas, & Zorababathan, Euanagan, zachari, Mosollami (these were the leaders and men of experyence) and I sent them word, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, & commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus ad to his brethren and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs such men, as myght execute the prestes office in the house of the Lord our God. And with the myghtie haide of our Lord God, they brought vnto vs men of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Whooling the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Schebriam and the sonnes and hyd brethren Abin & Ann, of whome there were. xliii. from amonge the elphadans the sonnes of Euanans, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, & the principall men that ministered for the woche vnto the Leuites in the temple two hundred and twente men, whose names are all to lychen by in wytepyng.

* Then commaunded I a salpyng vnto the yonge men before the Lord, that I myght desyre of hym a prosperous tourney and a good waye for vs, yee for vs, for oure chyliden and for the casell, because of the laynynges a waye, and I durst not requyre of the kyng men of houle and of fote, to coucepe vs safely agaynst our enemies, for we had said vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be with them, that seke him with they whole hert. And therefore we besought God our Lord earnestly because of these thynges, & he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer. And I separated fro amonge the rulers of the people, and fro the prestes of the temple. xii. mē and Sebeia & Salania, and ten men of they brethren with them. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornaments of the house of our God, whych the kyng, and his counsell, and his princes, and whole Israel had geue. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an hundred and fytty talentes in syluer, and an hundred talentes of syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel seven tymes twente, and vessels of other metal (yea, of good metal) twelue gli-steringe as the golde, and laide vnto them: ye are holy vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the siluer is promised vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers.

Be diligent now and hepe it, vntill the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambrise of the house of oure God.

* So, the prestes and the Leuites which receaued of me the golde, and the siluer and the vessell, brought it into Ierusalem into the temple of y Lorde. And from the xijth daye of the first moneth, till we came to Ierusalem. And whē the thirde daye was past, they weped golde, and siluer was deliuered in the house of the Lorde the fourth daye, vnto Harimoth the sonne of Ioz the prele, and with hym was Eliazar the sonne of Phineas, & with them were Iosabab & sonnes of Iehoiada, & Ebedias and the sonne of Sabas, and certayne of the Leuites to the nombre and to the wayght: & the wayght of them was writen vp the same tyne. As for those that were come out of captiuite, they offered sacrifice vnto y Lorde the God of Israel: euen twelue oren for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xii. goat-es for sinne, twelue lync for a chakosting, all to the sacrifice of the Lorde. And y kynges committed deliuered they vnto the trewardes and debyres of the hyng, and to the vnderchaunces in Elosyria and Phenees.

* Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyō of Israel, the Princes, the Prestes, and Leuites, the straunge people & indwel-lers of the lande, haue not put a dape theyr vnelicnesse, from the Cananites, Hethytes Phereytes, from the Moabites, & Gipcias, and Emoytes. For both they & they: son-nes haue mingled oure selues with y daughters of them, and the holy lode is mixt with the outlandish heathen, & scns the begyn-nynges of their rage haue the rulers & hea-des bene partakers of theyr wychednesse.

* As soone as I had hearde these thynges, immediatly I rente my holy garments, & pulled out the beare of my head & my beerd, and sat me downe so: owfull and heuy. So all they that were moued thozow the word of the God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat still, full of heuynesse vntill the encyng sacrifice. Then rode I vp from fasting, ha-uyng rente clothes & the holy garment, kncled downe vpon my knees, helde out my hādes vnto y Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, I am confused and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our hea-des, and our wychednesse are crated vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of oure fathers we are in great synne vnto this dape. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we vs our hethen and with our prestes haue bene deliuered vnto the kynges of the earth, into the sword, and into captiuite, and became a spoule with confusion and shame vnto this dape. And now, O Lorde God, how greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of the: in y thou hast left vs a rote and a name in y place of thy Sanctuary, to discover oure lyght in the house of y Lord our God, & hast geue vs meat at all tymes of our mynistracion.

And when we were in captiuite, we were not forsake of the Lord our God: but he made the kynges of Idolia graciously & fauourable vnto vs, so that the gaue vs vntaples and meate, yea and leaue to builde vp y temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repare the wastid places of Syn, and to dwell in Ierusalem and Ierusalem. And now, O Lord, what shall we saye haueinge all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken theyr commandementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the hādes of thy seruantes y prophets, sayinge: The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possesyon, is despyed with the vnelicnes and fylthynges of the heathen, & with their abominacyō haue they polluted it all together. Therefore, shall ye not loose pour daughters, vnto theyr sonnes, nor maye pour sonnes vnto their daughters. For ouer, ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them, y ye maye increasē a eate the best in the land, and that ye maye deuyde the inheritance of the lande vnto pour chylde for euermore.
As for the thyng that now happeneth vnto vs it cometh all for our wyched workes and great synnes. yet hast thou geue vs such a rote, y we are come agayne into our aunc lande, & we are so wyched that we haue broken theyr statutes & commandementes agayn, and mingled oure selues with the vneli-nes of the outlandish heathen. O Lord, art thou angrie with vs: wyle thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote ad name remaine no more? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yet vnto this prestie dape. And beholde, now are we before the in our synnes, now can we not stāde before the in them.

* And whē Ecdas with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weeping, and lyncing flatt vpon the ground before the temple, the re gathered vnto hym frō Ierusalem a great multitude of men and women, of pong men and maydens, for there was a verry greate weepyng & mourtiuge in the congregacion.
So whē Iechonias the sonne of Iehoiada of the chylde of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Ecdas: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde because because we haue married ourlandish women of the heathen. Now art thou all Israel.

The wyll weare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, & we shall put away all our wyues which we haue taken of the heathen, wyth theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted & by our fozs elders. Stande yv then, ope thou it, & declare it playnly vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde: for & matter belongeth vnto the, and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Ehas arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes, ad of the Leuytes, and of Isracil, to do after thes thynges: and they swarc.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

¶ After Ehas had read the lawe, the people put a waie theyr drauing wyues: and then returned out ey man meryly vnto hys owne dwelling.

¶ When Ehas stode vp from the court of the temple without, and wente in to the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Ananias, and remained there, ad byd cate no meate, nor dyonke drynke, for the multitude of the wyckednes of the people.
And there was made a proclamation in all Jewry and at Ierusalem, for all such as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuite, that whosoever came not to Ierusalem within two of thre dayes, accordyng to the iudge-ment of the olde lordes of & counsel, his goo-des shoulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregation of the captiuite.
And in the dayes were all they of the tribue of Iuda & Beniamin gathered together at Ierusalem, the twelfth daye of the nyth moneth. And the whole multitude sat trembling in the cource of the temple, for it was winter. So Ehas arose vp, and said vnto the: ye haue done vnrightheously, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to inheritance and so to increase the synnes of Isracil. And nowe knowledg the same, and geue ywarre vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, ad pre-fourme his wyll, departyng from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cryed the whole multitude voloude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so much as & people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stande without the house: agayne, thys woyche is not a thyng, that can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many that haue spynned in thes thynges. Wydorne therfore that the rulers of the multitude and they dwel with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also and iudges of euery place maye stode in the tyme appoynted, till they swage the wyath of the Lorde in thes byllynges.

¶ Then Ionathas the sonne of Eziel, and Ehas, and Berech received & charge of this matter, ad Hozanias, and Leius, & Sabarhus helpe them thereto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of capti-uite. And Ehas the prest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in the newe mone of the tenth moneth they sat together, to exame this matter. And so the matter was a determyng, concernyng the men that had outlandish wyues, vntill the newe moone of the first moneth. And of & prestes that had myrte the selues with outlandish wyues, there were founde. ¶ Of the sonnes of Iesu the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren, Ha-zens, Eleazar, Josibus, & Ioadus, whiche offred the selues to put awaye theyr wyues, and to offere a raminge for theyr ignozaunce.

And of the sonnes of Semmeci, Malas, & Eles, and Jezech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Kolesa, Amosias, Ithmaen, Barbanas, Iustio, Iedbus, and Callas. And of the Leuytes Josabbus, Semes, and Colmis, Ca-leas, Itaceus, Colmas, and Elionas. Of & syngers of the Sanctuary, Elarib, zacharius. Of the porters, Sollumus ad Colbanes. And of Isracil, of the children of Kozab, Osi, and Remias, and Geddias, and Welchias, Michelus, Genezarus, Jemnebius, Bannas. And the child of Iolama, Ehanias, zachari, Jeterius, Iodbus, Erimoth and Elias. And of & sonnes of Iadboim, Eliadas, Iasamus, and zochias, Larimoth, Sabbis, and Cebedias. And of the sonnes of zebus, Iohannes, Amantas, yadobias, and Emmeus. And of & sonnes of Bannus, Osi-mus, Maluchus, Iedbus, Iasub, Iasubus, & Jermoth. And of & sonnes of Abdin, Ra-tus, and Moosias, and Caleus, ad Baanas Maasias, Nathathias, Ielci, Bannus, & Manasias.

¶ And of the sonnes of Raue, Rones, Afeus, Melchias, Samens, Simo, Beniamin Malchus ad Haras. And of the sonnes of Alon, Carianus, Nathathias, Bannus, Eliphalch, Phanadas, Semet. Of the son-nes of Bannus, Jeremy, Woodias, Abzamas, Iohel, Baneas, Belias, Jona, Warimoth, Eliaib, Nathaneus, Elias, Wyng, Delus, Semedius, zambias, & Ioseph.
Of the sonnes of Robeus, Iedus, Nathathias, Sabandus, zecheda, Belmi, Iellus, and Baneas. All thes had taken outlandish women to marriage, & they put them awaye wyth theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Isracil, dwelt at Ierusalem and throughtout all the lande, in the newe moone of the seventh moneth, and the chylidren of Isracil were in theyr dwel-lynges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the floore at the East syde of & holy port of the temple. And they spake vnto Ehas the prest ad reader, & he wolde is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche. Take heauen ad earth to witness for I haue broken the euell in peeces, & created the good, for I thus sayth p Lord. Whither embrace thy children, ad brynge them vp with gladnesse: make they fete as fast as a pfer, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lord.

And those that be deed wyl I raple vp agayne from theyr places, and brynge them out of the graues, for I haue knowne my name I Israel. Feare not thou mother of p children, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lord. And for thy helpe I shall sende the my seruantes Esay & Jeremy, after whole counsell I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flosynge with mylk and honny and leuen mountaynes, wher upon they growe roses and lilies, wherein I wyl sell my children with lyepe. Execute iustyce for the wyddome, be iudge for the fatherles, geue to the poore: defende the comfortlesse: clothe the naked: heale the wounded & speke: laugh not a lame man to scoone: desce the erpel, and let the bynde come to the lyght of my clearnesse. * Wherefore: thou syndest the deed, take them, and burie them, and I shall geue p, & p'st place in my resurrection. Wherbyll I wyl my people, and take thy rest for thy quyetnes is come. Feede thy children, w thou good noyse, stablysh theyr fete: Als for the seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perishe, for I wyl save them from thy nombe: were not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heuynes cometh, other shall wepe and be forowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be able to do nothinge agaynst the, sayeth the Lord. Wherbyll I shall couer the, so that thy children shall not see the fyre euerslastig be topfull, w thou mother with thy children, for I wyl deliuer the, sayeth the Lord. Remember thy deed children, for I shall brynge them out of the earth, & wyl mercy vnto them, for I am mercifull, sayeth the Lord almyghty.

Embrace thy children, vntill I come, & wyl mercy vnto them, for my welles shall ouer, and my grace shall not faile.

I Eshdas receaued a charge of the Lord vpon the most dyeb, that I shuld go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they tyme at naught, and despyed the commandement of the Lord. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye hearthen that heare and vnderstande: Look for pouer shepherde, he shall geue you euerslastig rest, for he is nyr at hand, that shall come in the ende of p woelde. Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerslastyng lpyge shall synne vpon you for euermore. Als the shadowe of thy woelde, receaue the soppynnes of poure glory. I testifie my sauour opely: W, receaue the gyfte that is geuen you, and be glad, geupynge thacker vnto hym, that hath called you to the heauynly kyngdome.

After vp & stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feall of the Lord, which are departed from the shadow of the woelde, and haue receaued glorious garments of the Lord. Take thy nombre W Spd, and put vp thy purpysed, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lord. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfilled: beseeche the power of the Lord, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, maye be halowed.

* I Eshdas saue vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I coulde not nombre and they all prayed the Lord with songes of thankesgeyng. And in the myddest of them there was a ponge man of an hys nature, moze excellent then all they, and vpon every one of theyr heades he set a crown, & was euery higher and higher, whiche I maruelled at greatly. So I asked the aungel, and sayd: Why, what are these? he answered ad saide vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothyng and put on the immortal, and haue testyfyed ad knowledged the name of God. Now are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the aungel: what poge personne is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in theyr bandes? So he answered, and sayde vnto me: It is the soune of God, whome they haue knowledged in the woelde. Then beganne I greatly to commend the, that sode to flye for the name of p Lord. And to the aungel sayde vnto me: So thy wape, & tell my people, what manner of thynges & how great wonder of the Lord thy God, thou hast seue.

Of the.iii. Chapter.

¶ The wondrous woekes which God dyd for the people are recyted. Eshdas martiried that God tused the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are thence all.

And the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bed ad my thoughtes came vp ouer my heart: for I sawe the desolacion of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of the that dwelt at Babylon: and my sperte was lye moued, so that I beganne to speake fearfull wordes to the most hyest, and sayde: O Lord, Lord, thou spakest at the begynnynge, wyl thou wyl plantest.

plisidest the earthe (ad that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast bzyethed in hym the beery of lyfe: and so he lyued befoze the, and thou leddest hym into paradyse, which garden of pleasure thy ryght hande had planted, ouer the earth was made.

And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, which he transgressed, & immediatly thou appointedst death in hi, and in his generacions. Of hym came nationys, trespas, people and kynredes out of nombye.

* Gen. vi. 3.

And ther a wone will, and vpd nyce thynges befoze the: & as for thy commaundementes, thy deuyssed them.

* Gen. vi. 5.

* But in piossele of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpd thole that dwelt in the woild, and destryedest them. And lyte as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also i thes. Scruetberle one of them I leste: namely Noe wyth hys household, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened that whē they that dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplye, and had gottē many chyldren, and were a grent people, they beganne to be moze vngodly then the fyrst.

* Gen. vi. 7.

Now when they all lyued to wyckedly befoze the, * thou vpddest chole the a man fro amonge them, whose name was Abraham. hym thou loudest, ad vnto him onely thou herdest thy wyl, and madest an euerlastyng couenaunt wyth hym, promysyng hym, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his seide.

* Gen. xxi. 4.

* Gen. xxi. 5.

* And vnto hym I gauest Isaac, * vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob ad Esau. As for Jacob thou bydest chole hym, and put backe Esau. * And so Jacob became a grent multiplyte.

* Gen. xxv. 24.

And it happened that when thou leddest hym seide out of Egypte, * thou broughtest hym vp to the mounte Syon, vobyinge done the beaues, lettyng fast the earth, mo-uyng the grounde, making the deperes to quake, and troublinge the woilde: And thy gloz byente thozow foure portes of fyre, & earth quakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest geue the lawe vnto I seide of Jacob, & diligece vnto generacio of Israel.

* Exod. xix. 4.

* Psal. xiii. 5.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wycked hert, & thy lawe myght byrige forth frute in them. For the fyrst Ada bare a wycked hert, transgressed, and was ouercome, & so be all they that are doine of him.

* Rom. vii. 14.

* Thus remayned weaknes wyth the lawe i the herpe of the people, wh the wyckednesse of the rofe: so that the good departed awaye and the euell abode still. So the tynes pased awaye, and the yeres were brought to an ende. * Then bydest thou capte the by a seruaunt called Baudt, * whom thou commaundest to bypde a cyte vnto thy name, and to offer byncense and sacryfye vnto thein. Thys was done now many yeres. Then the inhabytters of the cyte forsoke the, and in all thynges vpd euen as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wycked herte.

* Jer. li. 4.

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the handes of thynne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better ad moze righteous then they people, that they shall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there and (sawe they) vngodlynes, and so greate wyckednesse, that it coulde not be nombred: per, whē my soule sawe so many euil doers (in the thys tye yere) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, how thou suldest them in loch vngodlynes & sparest the wycked doers: but thynne a wone people halt thou coted out and persecuted thynne enemyes, & thys hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue how thys happeneth. Do they of Babilon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the, sauyng the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so deuileth thy couenautes, as Jacob? And yet they rewarde appereth not, ad they labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here & there thow the heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthe, and thynke not vpd thy commaundementes. Whye thou therfore oure wyckednesse now in the balde, and theirs also that dwell in the woilde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpd earth, that hath not synned befoze the? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt finde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

¶ The Angell prophoseth vnto us, because he semeth to enter into the propousure iudgementes of vs.

Ad the Angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Aricell) gaue me an awere, & sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moch vpd it in thys woilde, & I thynekest to comprehend the waye of the myght. Then said I: See, my Loyde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thes wayes, and to sett forth the symplytude, befoze the: wherof yt thou canst declare me one, I wyl shewe the also the waye, that thou bydest to se: and I shall shewe the from whence the wycked herte cometh. And I sayde: Tell on my Loyde. Then sayde he vnto me: So thy waye, weye me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the black of the wyde, or call me agayne agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do? Wher requirest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the, how thy dwellices are in þe see? Or how great water springes are vpon the flemaine? Or how great water springes are in the beginnyng of the deye? Or which are the outgoinges of paradys? Parabasture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet into þe see no hel, neither dyd I euer clyme vp into heauen. Neuer thelesse, now haue I asked the but only of fyre and wynde and of the daye, wher thou hast traunpled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no answer of them.

He sayd moore vnto me: Thyne aduene thynges, & loch as are growne vpon the, canst thou not knowe: how shuld thy beel then be able to comprehend the wynde of the hyell, and now out wardly in the corrupte world, to vnderstande the corruptio that is coudet in my sight? Then sayd I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wycheonelesse, & to suffer, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, & sayd: I wente in a wood, & the trees roche loch a deince ad sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we maye make vs yet moze woodes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner roche thyng deince, ad sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fyght agaynst the trees of the wood that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and deince of the wodde was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wood: The thought of the floudes of the see came lyke wyll to naught also, for the sader stode vp and stoped them.

If thou woldst iudge now betwixte these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & said: Clearly it is a folyþ thought that they both haue occupied. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, & the see also hath hys place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, ad sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy self also? For lyke as the ground is geuen vnto the wood, and the see to his floudes: euen so * they þ dwell vpon earth, may vnderstande nothyng, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, may only vnderstand the thynges þ are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beleue þ, O Lord, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of such as we daily medle withall, namely, wherfore that Israci is blasphemed of the heathen, and for what cause the people (whom thou euer hast loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nacionys: & why þ lande of our fathers is brought to naught and the wynter covenantes come to none effecte, and we vaine awaye out of þ world as the grethoppers, ad our lpe is a very fear, & we are not woorth to opraue merce. What wil he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon our vs: Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered home, & sayd: The moze thou searcest, the moze thou shalt maruell for the world hasteth fast to pale awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges, þ are promysed for the righteous i tyme to come, for * thys world is full of vnyghteousnes ad weaknes.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euill is towen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. If the euell now that is towen, be not turned vpyde downe, and þe place wher the euell is towen, passe not awaye, then cannot the thyng come þ is towen w good. For the come of euill sede hath bene towen in the heart of man from the begynnyng, and how moch vngodlynes hath he brought vpon thys tyme: and how moch that he perþyng forth, but þll he come into the barne.

Wherfore now by thy self, wher the come of euill sede is curt to wne, how grete a barne shall it fyl: I answered and sayd, how and wher that these thynges come to pale: Wherfore are our peaces so we? euill: And he answered me, sayynge: Hast not thou to moch vpon the hyell, for thy hastyness to be about him is but vaine, thou makest to moch a do. Wold not the soules also of þ righteous aske questyon of these thynges in thy þ holyness sayn: * how longe shall I hope of thys fallyson: Wher cometh the frute of my barne, and my reward: And vpon this Ieremyl þ Archangel gaue the answer, and sayd: Ene wher the noimbe of the feres is fylled þ you, for he hath wyced the world i the baladec: in measure and nombe hath he measured þ tyme, & moueth it not, but þll the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I & sayde: O Lord, Lord, now are we all full of synne, and for our sake parabasture it is not, the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the earth.

So he answered me, & sayd: So thy wynde to a woma wyth chylde, and aske of her wher she hath fulfilled her tyme monethes, þ she chyldebed maye kepe þ wythþanþlyge with in her. Then sayde I: O Lord, that can the not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell þ secret places of soules are lyke the wyndy chamber of a woman. For lyke as a woman that necessite of the byrth is at hande. Then so doth the harte to deliuer it that is conuulted vnto her. Like what thou desirest to be, it shall be wroghte the from the begynnyng.

Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue forgiue fauoure in thy syght, and yt is be possible, and yt I be merre therfore, weue me then, whether there be moie to come then is past, or moie past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expounde the sy-militude vnto the. So I stode, and behold, an whote burninge ouen wote ouer befoze me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had þ upper hande.
After this he went ouer befoze me a watery cloude, & sent dothne mochtayne woth a storme: a whyle the stormy raine was past the droppes remained tyll. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the raine is moze then the droppes, and as the fyre exceedeth the smoke, euen so the measure of the thynges that are past, hath the upperhande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboute: ad I prayed ad sayde: What I lyue (thynkest thou) vntill that tyme? What what happen in those dayes: he answered me, ad sayde: As for the tobacis wherof I askedt me, I maye tell the of them in parre: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I may not weue the, for I am not sent therfore.

The v. Chapter.

¶ Of howe and the diuinitie comen tog. ther.

¶ Cuerthelelle, as concerning the tokens, marke this: Wholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwel vpon earthe, shall take in a great nobbe, & the waye of the treuth shall be hyd, and the lande shall beare frofayth:
but * vniuersite shall haue the upperhande, lyke as thou hast sene now. ad as thou hast hearde longe agoo. And the lãde that thou seist now to be a rule, shall thou shortly se waile. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thydd trompet, that þ sunne shall cooleþ wþne agayne in the nyght, & the moone the tymes i the daye, and blood shall droppe out of wodd, and the stone shall geue his voyce, & the people shall be vniuersi-te: and euen be shall rule, who they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the foules shall flye, & the shodomyt shall see that cast out his sib, and make a noyle in the nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shall be a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shall be sent agayne, ad the wynde beales shall go the; waye, and menstruous women shall beare monstres, & salt waters shall be founde in the swete: one frende shall syghte agais another: then shall all witt and vnderstandynge be hyd and put aspyde into they; secreete places, and shall be sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vniuersite confusyon and voluptuousnes haue the upperhande vpon earth. One land also shall aske another, and saye: As ryght-troules goure the; now the; And it shall saye No. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shall labour, but they; wayes shall not prosper.

To weue the soche tokens I haue leue, & yf thou wylt praye agayne, I wepe as now and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I a waked, and a fearfulness wente thorow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost fownded withall. So the angel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vpon my feete.

And in the seonde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the captyne of the people came vnto me, sayynge: Wher hast thou bene: and why is thy countenance so heuy? Knowest thou not, that Israel is conuulged vnto þ, in the lande of they; captiuitie? Wþ then ad care, and forsaik vs nor, as þ weperdest that leaueth hye flocke in the handes of wycked wolves. Then sayde I vnto hym: So thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he hearde it, ad as I sayd: so wote be hye waye fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mour-nyng and wepyng, lyke as Eliciel the aũ-gell commaunded me. And after leuē dayes it happened, that þ thoughtes of myr here were very greuous vnto me agayne, ad my soule receaued þ spact of vnderstandynge, and I began to talke with the moost hieſt agayne and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, of eue-ry wood of the earth ad of all the trees therof, thou hast cholen the one onely vniuersi-te: of all landes of the whole worlde thou hast cholen one ppe: and of all flouris of the grounde thou hast cholen the one lyte: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast spiled the one ryuer: ad of all bypbed cytyes thou hast holowed Shon vnto thy selfe: ad of all þ foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: of all the catell that are made thou hast prouided the one shepe, & among all the myriades of folches thou hast gotten the one people, & vnto this people who thou loudest, thou gauest a lawe, that is prouided of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people once vnto many: and vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other and wþ hast thou leaured this one only people amonge many: which create thei doth-ne, yet wþch haue euer withstande thy pro-myces, and neuer belueued thy counsailes?
And

* mat. xxi.iiia

And though thou werest enemy vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punyſh them with thyne a wile hddes. Now wold I had spokt, theſe wordes þ Angel þ came to me þ myght aſke, waſlent vnto me, & ſayde vnto me: heare me, and hearken to the thynges that I ſaye, and I ſhal tell the moze. And I ſayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then ſayde he vnto me. Thou art loze weſt & troubled for Iſraels ſake. Loueſt thou that people better then hym that made theſe? And I ſayd. No Lorde, but of very grette & compaſſyon haue I ſpokn. For my reynes payne me euery houre, becauſe I wolde haue experieſe of þ waye of the moſt bryſt, ad to ſeke out parte of theſe iudgement. And he ſayde vnto me: þ I mayeſt not. And I ſayde: wherefoze Lorde where vnto waſt I bozne then? O woe was not my mothers chyldbed then my grette. So had I not ſene þ myſter & trouble of Jacob, and the traſſyle of my people of Iſrael.

And he ſayd vnto me: Remembre the thynges that are not yet come: garber me together the droppes, þ are ſcaſtred abroad: make me the flours gene agayne, þ are withered: open me the thynges that is cloſed: and byrnyng me forth the wyndes, that are ſhut vp: ſhewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then ſhall I declare the thynges, that thou laſt donreſt to knowe. And I ſayde: O Lorde, who maye knowe theſe thinges, but he that hath not theſe dwellynge with me. As for me, I am vntwyle: how may I then ſpeake of theſe thynges wherof thou aſkeſt me? Then ſayde he vnto me: like as þ canſt do none of theſe thynges that I haue ſpoke of, euen ſo canſt thou not fynde out my iudgement: oz in the ende the loue that I haue promyſed vnto my people. And I ſayd: We holde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what ſhall they do, þ haue bene before me, oz we that be now, oz they that ſhall come after vs. And he ſayde vnto me: I wyll lpyken my iudgement vnto a cruys. Lpke art there is no lackneſſe of þ lab; eue ſo is there no dwytmelle of þ ſpyt. So I answered and ſayd: couldeſt thou not make thole: that haue bene made, & be now, and that are ſo to come: in one, that thou myghteſt thewe the iudgement the ſooner? Then answered he me, and ſayde: The creature maye not haue aboue þ maker, neþer D make the woyle þohe them at once, that ſhal be created.

And I ſayde: how haſt thou ſayde then vnto thy ſeruaunte, that thou lpyunge maker, haſt made the creature lpyunge at once & the creature bare it: eue ſo myght it now alſo beare them that be preſent, at ſce. And he ſayde vnto me: Aſke the chyldbed of a woman, & ſape vnto her: If thou bypigeſt forth chyldren, why doeſt thou it not to gether, but one after another: Whye beſt thou: foze, to byrnyng forth ten chyldren at once. And I ſayde: the cannot, but muſt do it one after another.

Then ſayde he vnto me: Euen ſo haue I geue a chyldbed vnto the earth, ſo thole þ be ſowen vpo it by pceſſe of tyme. ſo: lpyke as a ponge chld maye not byrnyng forth þ thynges that belonge to the age: eue ſo haue I ordened the woyle which I made.

And I aſked and ſayde: Heryng thou haſt now geuen me a waie, I will ſpeake before the: ſo: oure mother of whom thou haſt tolde me, is yet ponge, & now the brathen nye vnto age. He answered me, and ſayde: Alike a woman that beareth chyldren, & the ſhall tel þ. ſape vnto her: wherefoze are not they (whom thou haſt now brought forth) lpyke thole that were before þ, but leſſe of ſtature. And the ſhal answered the: They that be bozne in the pouth of ſtregh, are of one ſaſt byrd and they that art bozne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldbeden ſapleth) are other wyſe. Conſyde now thy leſſe, how that ye are leſſe of ſtature, then thoſe that were before you, and ſo are they that come after you, leſe then ye: as the creatures which now begynne to be old, & haue paſſed ouer þ ſtregh of pouth. Then ſayde I: Lorde I beſeeche þ, þ I haue founde fauoure in thy lpyht, thewe thy ſeruaunt, by whom doeſt thou viſet thy creature?

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The Angell instructed Eneas, and geueth hym auctores to theſe queſtyons.

Ad he ſayde vnto me. In the beginnyng when þ ground was made: before the woyle ſode, oz euer the wyndes blew, before it thynored and lpyghtened, oz euer þ foundacyon of Iheruſaleme were laped, before the ſaple flours were ſene, oz euer the moueable potewes were ſablyſhed, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, oz euer the byrgnices of the apye were lyfted vp, afore þ meafures of the ſtewment were named, oz euer þ chymneys in Syon were dote, ad oz the preſente peares were ſought out, and oz euer the inueryſons of them that now lpyne, were pur aſpde, before they were ſealed that now gather ſaple for a creature: then vpo I colpyde and pondye all theſe thynges, and they all were made thowome, and choſow none other: by me alſo they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I & ſayd: which ſhall be þ parting aſunder of þ tymes? O when ſhal be the ende of the tyme, & the begynnyng of it? ſoloweth And he ſayd vnto me: ſtrom Abrahams into Iſaac, when Jacob and Eſau were bozne.

of hym, Jacobs hande helde byt the hyle of Chan: for Chan is the ende of thys world and Jacob is the begynnyng of it that followeth. The hande of man betwixte the hyle and the hande. Other questyon (Esays) aske thou not.

I answered then, & sayd: O Lord, Lord, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beleeue the, thewe thy seruauit the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou thewest me parte the last nyght. So he answered ad sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce and soude. There shall come a grente moorpn, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest þ woordes, be not afraide: for of the ende shall the worde be founde: & behold, there was a voyce that spake, and þ founde: of it was I the þ founte of many waters, and it sayde: Schole, the dayes come, that I will begyne to dwelle vnto, & to byset them that dwell vpon earth, and wil begyne to make iniquity of them, what they be that haue hurt equyte with wrighteousnes, and when the lowe date of syde shall be fulfilled: and when the world, that shall vanysh away, shall be ouerscaled, then wil I do these tokens.

The bookes shall be opened before the fir: name, and they shall be all together, & the chylde of a pere olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chylde shall byng forth vnto mylde childe of this or fourte monethes olde, and they shall lye, and be rapsed by: & sodenly shall the lowen places appere as the vnlowen, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde empye, & the troupe shall geue a soude, which wher every mā heareth, they shall be hastily afraied. * At þ tyme shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The spynges of the welles shall stande dryll, and in the howres they shall not rene. Wholouers remanyeth from all these thynges that I haue told the, shall escape, ad be my saluacion, and the ende of your world. And the men that haue reuenced, shall se, they that haue not failed death, from theyr byrth, and the bet of the vnwellers shall be changed, & turned into another meanynge: for euell shall be put out, and dysscate shall be quenched. As for sayth, it shall flozzy, corruption shall be ouercome: & frueyth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shall be declared. And it happened when he talked vnto me, that I looked demyselpe vpon hym, before whom I stode, and these woordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to thewe the, the tyme of the nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye pet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thynges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyest: for wher þ myghte hath sene thy ryghteous dealinge, he hath sene also thy chaite, which thou hast had euersence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to thewe the all these thynges, ad to sape vnto the: the of good conforte, and feare not, and haue not with þ fynes that are past to thyneke dayne thynges, and make not halt of the latter tynes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, þ I myghte fulfyll þ these woordes: which he told me. In þ cytyr nyght was myn herbed with me agayne, & I began to speake before þ hyest, for my spyte was greatly sett on fyre, & my soule was in dyssresse, & I sayd: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature fro the begynnyng (end the fyrt daye) and saydest: * Let beauen & earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte woerde. And then was there the spyte, and þ darkeheles were set on euery syde, and splende: there was no mans voyce as yet from þ. O driu commaundest þ a fayne lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy woerde myght appere and be sene.

Alon the seconde daye thou madest the spyte of the firmament, and commaundest it to part a linder, and to make a deuplo betwixte the waters, that the one part myght remayne aboue: and the other beneath. Al þ the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe, y the waters were gathered to the fourth part of þ earth: & three partes hast thou dyed by, and kepte them, to thyntent þ men myght sow: & occuppe busidape therein. As for the foure daye wente forth, the woerde was made. As for medayrly there was grete innumerable frute, and many dyuers pleasures: & besydes of reynayon, floures of chayne greable couloure and smell, and this was do the the thyrde daye.

* Alon the.iiii. daye þ commaundest þ the sunne shuld geue his dyne, & the moone her lyght: þ starrs bydest thou let in ordy: and gauest them a charge: to do & occuppe euery vnto man, that was for to be made.

Alon þ fyft daye thou saydest vnto the seuth part (where the * waters were gathered) that they shulde byngge forth diuers beastes, soules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth bynyng beastes, at þ commaundment of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous woordes.

Then dydest thou preserue two soules, the one thou calledst Enoch and the other Lulathian, ad dydest separate the one fro the other: for the seventh parte (namely, where þ water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Also Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dyed by the rhyde dape, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherein are a thousand ylls. But unto Lulath thou gauest the seventh part, namely the moyle, and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wyldest, and when. Upon the fyfte dape thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the, it shulde bypne, forth beales, cattell, and all that crepe, and bypnes this. Also also, whd thou madest Lordes of all thy creatures, Of hym come we all, & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayde now & spoken before þ, that I myght thewe how that the woylde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adā thou hast said that they are nothing, but be lyke a spelle, & hast lykened þ abouidance of them vnto a droppe (that fallith) from the rofe of the house.

And now, O Lorde, the heathen whych haue euer bene reputed as nothinge, haue begonne to be loyded ouer vs, and to deuoure þ: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the fyfth boyme, thy only begotten, & thy feruent loue) are geuen into thy handes and power. If the woylde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the woylde: how longe shall this endure?

¶ The vii. Chapter.

¶ The Angel sheweth Edzas many thynges to come.

And it happened after that I had spoken oure these woyles, there was sent vnto me an Angell, which had bene by me also the night afore, and he said vnto me: Up Edzas, and heare the wordes þ I am come to tel the. And I sayd: speake ou Lord my God. Then sayd he vnto me: The tye is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and grente: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a pyuer. For who wolde go fro the see, to loken vpon it, and to rule it? If he wente not thowow þ narrow, how myght he come into the wyde?

Item another: A crite is buylded and set vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes: the entraunce is narrow & sodayne. lyke as if there were a fye at the ryght had, and a depe water at the left: and as it were onely one straye path betwixte the both, so small that there coulde but one man go there.

If this crite now were geue to an heye, & deuoure wote thowow the paelous wyde, how wolde he receaue his enheritaunce? And I sayde: It is to Lorde, Then sayd he: Eue to is Israel also a porcion. And why for their sakes haue I made the woylde: & why Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng iudged þ was done. Then were the entraunces of the woylde made narrow, full of sorow & teneaple. They are but few: euell, full of perils and labour. For the entraunces of the fore woylde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall feute.

If they now which are entred into this woylde, maye not cōpēhēde these straye and wayne thynges, moche lesse maye they cōprehēde and vnderstande the secretē thynges: why disquietest thou thy selfe, seing thou art but a corruptible man: And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why halt thou not receaude into thyne herte the thyng that is to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lord Lorde, * thou hast ogedyned i thy lawe, þ the ryghteous shuld inherēt these thynges, but that þ vnfaythfull and vngodly shuld perpe. Reuerthelē, the righteous shall suffre straye thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lpyed vngodly and suffred straye thynges shall not le the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboute God, and none that hath vnderstandyng aboue the hysse. For there be many that perpe, because they despyse the lawe of God þ is sett before them. For God hath geuen straye commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shuld lpye: and yf they kepe this they shuld not be punyshed.

Reuerthelē, they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: magnyfyed vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayd mozeouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they despyced, and denyed hys promysse: in hys statutes & ordynances haue they not bene faythfull and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed hys woyles.

And therefore Edzas: vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Scholde the tyme shall come, that these folges which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, ad the byde shal appere, and the earth that now passeth a waye, shall be shewyd, and whosocuer is depyured fro the fo: sayde euell, shall se my wondrous. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, woth those that be with þ: & they that remayne, shall be mercy in foure hundred yeres.

After these same yeres shall my sonne Christ dye, & all men that haue lpye, and þ woylde shall be turned into the olde spiere seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgements, so þ no man shall remayne. And after seuen understandyng, for thou art agreed to her-ken and to geue eare, and wyllynge to pro-phete: for thou hast no lenger space geuen þ, but onely to lye. W Lord, wilt thou not gene thy seruauit leaue, that we maye praye before the, and that thou mayest geue sode into oure herte, & bypbe oure understandyng, that there maye come frute of it: & that euery one which is corrupte, and beareth þ stace and place of a man, maye lye.

For thou art alone, & we all are one wor-chman and typer of thy hādes, lyke as thou hast sapyd, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the mothers wōbe, & thou genest the mēbers, and thy creature is preserved in thy ead water: & so, monethes both thy woike lasteth thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thing that is preserved, and it that is preserved, shal both be kepte together: and whē tyme is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded þ byestes to geue mych vnto the frute, that the thyng which is created and fashioned, maye be no-rished for a tyme: and then thou dyspoilest & ordrest it with thy mercy, bypynge it vnto thy rpyghteousnes, nucturest it in thy law, & retourneest it with thy understanding, motifiest it as thy creature, & makest it lyke as thy woike. Wherby thou hast thou destroyedst þi, which with so great labours is created and fashioned: thow the thy commaundment, thou couldest lyghtly ordeyne, also, that the thyng which is made, myght be preserved.

B And this I speake now of all men in generall: as þ knowest: but of thy people: for wholke sake I am sorpy: and of thy inheritāce: for wholke cause I mouene: and of Israel, for whom I am woofull: and for Jacob, for wholke sake I am grieved, therefore begynne I to praye before the, for my selfe & for the, for I fe the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwel vpon earth. But I haue byde the wyfynesse of the iudge, which is to come: therefore henere my woipe, and vnderstande my woordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnyng of the woordes of Envyas, before he was receaued: W Lord, thou that dwellest in euerslastyngnesse, whose eyes are lyft vp I the aye, whose looke is exceedyng wyse, whose gloze & mayesty maye not be comprehended, before whom the wo-rdes of þeuent stande with tremblыng, whose keepyng is turned in to wynde & fyre, whose woorde is true, whose talchpyng is stedfast, whose commaundment is stronge, whose ordynance is fearfull, whose loke dyeth by the depeyres, whose wyat maketh the most tayne to melle awaye, and whose trouth beareth wytnes: W heare the prayer of thy seruauit, and marck with thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lye, I will speake, and so longe as I haue understandyng, I will an-swere. W loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, whych serue in the trouth. Haue no repecte vnto the wicked doctes of the heathen, but to the desire of those that be thy testymones wryth forwodes. Wpynke not vnto those that haue walkeid fapnedly before the, but vpon them, which wyl will haue knowe thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroye them, which haue had bently maners, but to loke vnto the that haue cleary taught thy lawe.
Take thou no indignacion at the, which are woke then beastes: but loue them, that all waye put the: trust in thy rpyghteousnes: & gloze: for we & oure fathes haue all the same synnes and dyscase, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercyfull.

For þf thou hast mercy vpon vs, þ shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no woykes of rpyghteousnes: for þ rpyghteous whych haue layed vp many good woyses together, shal out of the: þ deces receaue re-warde. For what is mā, that thou shouldest take dyspleasure at him? W what is the cor-ruptible mortall generacō, that thou shouldest be so rough towarde hym?

* For of a trouth there is no man amōge them that be borne, but he hath dealt wy-kedly: and amōge the fapthfull there is no-one, which hath not done amys. For in thy (W Lord) thy rpyghteousnes and thy goodnes shal be prapled and declared, þf thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not rpy in good woyses.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spokē a rpyght, and accor-dyng vnto thy woordes it shall be. For I wil not vceryly consyde the woyses of them, which haue synned before deat, before the iudgement, before destruction, but * I will reioyce ouer the woike and rhyght of the rpyghteous. I will remēbe also the pylgr-mage, the holy makpyng and the rewarde.
Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shal it come to passe. For as the husbāde man soweth moche sode vpon the groude, and planteth many trees, and pcalwaye the thyng that is sowne or plantēd is not all kepte safe, nether both it all take rote: Eue so is it. If the that are sowne in the woyle, they shall not all be preserved.

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, let me speake. Like as the husbāde mans sode perissheth, þf it receaue not rayne in due season, or þf there come to much rayne vnto it: Euen so perissheth man also, which is created with the bandes, and is lyke vnto thyne a wye maye: and to thy selfe, for wholke sake thou hast made all thyn ges, and lykened hym vnto the husbände mans seide. He nor wroth at vs, O Loide, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne awne interptaiuer: O be interptall vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me & sayde. Thynges present are for the present, and thynges to come for to come. For thou lackest yet much, forpunge I maynt loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft tymes dyntone nye vnto the, but neuer to the vncorruptious. In this also thou art maruelous before I dyest in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thyne awne selfe, that thou art had in such honoure amonge I ryghteous. Therefore shal great wecheries and miserie come vpon the, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in the world because they haue walked in greates pydde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, and seke out glory for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the tree of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plentifulnes made ready, a cytie is buylded for you, & a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The roote of euill is marked from you, I weaknes, and much is hyd fro you, & into hell dyeth corruption in forgetfulness. Sowdres are vanquished awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallite. And therefore take thou nomore questions concerning the multitude of the thynges perishe. For they haue taken libertye: despyed the hyell, thought cozine of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

A Hozouer, they haue troden downe hye ryghteous, and * sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God, yee and that wyttungly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynges that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euell is thyselfe payne prepared for them. For it was not hye wyll that man shulde come to naught, but they which be created haue despyed the name of hym that made them, and are vnto backfull vnto hym, which prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my indigement now at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto the, and to such as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayd: Beholde O Loide, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme & when, thou hast not shewed me.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

¶ These hath diuyns shewed vnto hym.

A Then answered me then and sayd: Measure thou I tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, wherby I haue tolde the before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherein the hyell will be gynn to dyet the world, which be made. And whē there shalbe tene earth quake and vproare of the people I the world, the shal thou well vnderstande, that the most hyell spale of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnyng.

For lyke as al that is made in the world hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euell so the tymes also of I hyell haue playne begynnynges, in wonders and spynes, and the ende in woekings and in tociens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shal be able to escape by hye woekes and by faith, wherein ye haue beloued, shal be preserued from the sayde perils, and shal se my sauoure in my lande, and wythin my woekers, for I haue halowed me fro the world. The shal they be in carefulnes, which now haue abused my woekes: and they I haue cast the oute despitfully, shal dwell in paynes.

For such as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefices, and haue not knowne me, & they that haue abhorred my lawe, wher they had yet freedom, and wher they had yet opulscure of amendment and education, and vnderstode not, but be perspicit: I same must knowe it after death in paine. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the ryghteous shalbe tined, and whole the world is, & for whē the world, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: * I haue tolked before & now I speake, ad will speake also her after, that there be many moos of them wherby perishe, the shalbe saued, lyke as the floure is greater then the choppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seide: as the floure be, so are the coulours also: such as the woekman is, such is also the woeker: and as the husbandman is hym selfe, so is hye husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the world. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the world was made, where in they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the world which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceased not, and the lawe wherby is vnterscheable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I conspyed the world, & beholde, there was perill, because of the thoughtes that were comen to it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generacions. Let the multitude perishe thou, wherby are growne vp in payne, and lett my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante: for wyth greates labour haue I made it vp.

¶ Acuer the les

Neithertheless, if thou wilt take vpon the yet seven dayes mo / but thou shalt not fast in them / yoo thy waye then into the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate only of the floures of y^e felde, take not chyldyrnye, no wyne, but eate floures onely.
Dape vnto the hyell continually, so wilt thou come, and talke with the.

C So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Arboth (lyke as he co-mounded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of y^e same satisfied me. After seven dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my herte was vaxed within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth, and beganne to talke before the hyell, and sayde: O Lorde, thou that dwellest thy selfe vnto vs, & thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest, saying: heare me O Israel, and marke my wodes thou seest of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shall brynge frute in you & ye shall be honoured in it for ever. For oure fathers which receaued y^e lawe, kept it not and obserued not thy obdinaunces and statutes, and the semente of thy lawe was not declared: for it nyght not, for why / it was thyne. * For they that receaued it, perished, because they heare not the thyng that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the grounde receaueth seds, or the see a ship, or a vessel meate and drynke, that whē it perissheth or is broken wherein a thing is sowne, or wherein any

D thyng is put: the thynges also perishe and are broken, which are sowne or put therein.
But vnto vs it hath not happened so for we that haue receaued the lawe, perissh in synne & oure herte wyth y^e lawe receaued the lawe: notwithstandyng * the lawe perissheth not, but rempnysh in his labour.

And when I considered these thynges in my herte after this maner, I looked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the right syde * I sawe a woman, which mourned sore, made greate lamentacion, and wepte with lou-de voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, and she had a shew vpon her head.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd: wherefore wepest thou / why art thou so sorow and discomfited? And she sayde vnto me: Why, lett me be wape my self and take yet more sorrow: for I am sore vaxed in my mynde, & brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what apleth is this? who hath done any thing to thee? she sayde: I haue bene vnfruitfull and barren, and haue had an husband thyngs yeres. And these xxx. yeres I do nothyng els daye and nyght & all houres, but make my prayer to y^e hyell. After this the yeres God herde me thy handmappe, looked vpon my misery, compassed my trouble, and gaue me a sowe, and I was glad of him, so was my husband also & all my neygh-bours, & he gaue greate honour vnto the Egyptie. And I nappied hym with great travaille. So when he grewe vp, and came to y^e tyme, that he shuld haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

Of the x. Chapter.

Of Edward and the woman that appereth vnto hym common together.

And it happened that when my son he wente into hys chamber he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrew we all y^e gyghtes, and all my neygh-bours rose vp to comforte me. Then roke I my self vnto the second daye at nyght: and whē they had all rested, that they might comforte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyght, and hee, & am come hyther in to thy felde, as thou seest: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remayne here, and nether to cate ner drynke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditations & thoughtes fall, that I was in, & spake to her in dyspleasure: Thou foolysch woman, seest thou not oure heynous and mourning, & what happeneth vnto vs: how syon oure mother is all woofull and sorow, and how she is cleane broughte downe and in mylery: seest thou be all now in heynous, & make oure none (for we be all sorowfull.) Is for y^e heynous that thou takest, it is but for one sowe. Demande the earth, & she shall tell thee, that it is the which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnyng all me are borne of hir, and other shall come: & behold, they walke all most all in to destruction, and many of them shall be robed out.

Who shalde then, by reason, make more mourninge, then she, that hath lost so great a multitude: & not thou, which art sorow, but for one. But if thou woldest saye vnto me: Why mourninge is not lyke the mourninge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare to heynous: but y^e earth is accordinge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth againe into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with travaille & so-rowe, eue so y^e earth also fro the begynnyng groweth her frute vnto man, for hym y^e made her. And therefore with holde thy sorow and heynous by thy selfe: & loke what happeneth vnto the, beare it strongly. For if thou iudgeth the marche and ende of God to be y^e gyghte ouer

be ryghteous and good, & receaueth his reward in tyme. þ̄ shall be cōdemned thetyn. So thy waye then into the cytye to thy husbāde.

And the sayde vnto me: that wyl I not do. I wyl not go in to the cytye. but heare wyl I dye. So I commended moze with her and sayde: Wo not so, but be counceiled, and folowe me: for how many fallers hath syde of good comforte because of the sorowe of Ierusalem. For thou seyst that our Sanctuary is layed waste, our altier broken, our temple destroyed, our playenge of instruments and spyngynge layed howne, the thakelgyng put to spylene, our myrth is vanquished awaye. the lyght of our candlestick is quenched, the arche of the couenaunt is taken from vs, all our holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon our vs, is dishonoured: our chyldre are put to shame, our yeres are bynt, our Lanties are caried awaye into captiuitie, our virgins are defyled, and our wyues rauished, our ryghteousnes mispoyled, and our chylidren destroyed, our ponge men are brought in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weak: and syde (which seale is the greates of all) is loded vpon her wofullnes: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shoke of thy great heuynes, and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: þ̄ the myghty maye be mercyfull vnto the, & that the hysell maye geue the rest from thy labour and traualle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face byd wyne and myrth, so that I was afraied of her, and mist tobat it myght be. And immediately the cast oute a grente voyce, very fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the nople of the woman: and I looked, and beholde, the womā appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afraied, and cryed wylth loude voyce, and sayde: where is Daniel the angell, * which came to me at the tyme? For he hath caused me to come in many considerations and hys thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruptiō, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me, & I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne understanding was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and cōforted me, and let me vpon my kete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the: and why is thine understanding vexed: and the understanding of thy herte, & wherfore art thou sorow? And I sayd: Because thou hast forsake me: and I haue done * according vnto thy wordes, I went in to the felde, and there haue I lene thynges that I am not able to expelle. he sayde vnto to me: Stande vp and be manly, and I shall geue thee exhortacion.

Thene sayd I: I speake vnto me my Lord forsahe me not, lest I dye in byrne. For I haue sene that I knewe not, and herde that I donot knowe. Wherfor I vnderstandinge be disceaued, & my mynde? But now I beseeche the, that thou wylt shewe the truest of this word. he answered me thei & sayd: heare me, and I shall enforme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afraied, for the byest hath opened many secreete thynges vnto the.

he hath sene that thy waye is ryght, and that thou takest sorowe continually for thy people, and makest greates lamentacion for syon: and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a lytle while agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her: neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of a woman nomore, but thou thoughtest there was a citie byrden: and like as the tolde þ̄ of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: The woman whom thou sawest, is syon, and where as the tolde the, that the hath bene thy cytye peares unfructfull and bare, those are the xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offsprynge made in her.

But after xxx. yeres Salomō byrden her, & offered, and then bare the bare a sonne. And where as the tolde þ̄: that the noyrded hym with labour, that was the dwellyng of Ierusalem. But where as the tolde the þ̄ her sonne dyed whā she came into her chamber, that is the fall of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, how she mounted for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed þ̄. And now God seyst, that thou art sorow in thy mynde, and lustrest fro thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her cleynesse, and the faynes of her bewyfe.

And therfore I bad the remaine in þ̄ felde where no house is builded. For I knewe that the hysell wolde shew this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to go into the felde, where no foundacion yett buildynge is. For in the place where the hysell wyl shew hys cytye, there shall be no many buildynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thyng hert be afraied, but go thy waye in, and let the glorious and saye buildynge, and how greates it is, and how greates thou thyngest it after the measure of thine eyes, and the shall thou heare as much as thine eares maye comprehend. For þ̄ art blessed above many other, and art called with the hysell, as the seleste. But comozow at nyght thou shalt remaine here, and so shall the hysell shewe the the vision of hys thynges, which he wyl do vnto the, that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght. I was not commaunded me.

The. xi. Chapter..

In this chapter and in the. ii. next encourage be entertainment of seven bypocrites and of the interpretation thereof.

When I sawe I a dreame: and beholde there came vp from the see an Eagle, which had. xii. wynges and thre hea-des: And I sawe, and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in the, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, & out of his fethers there grew other lyke cotrary fethers: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Whereouer I sawe, that the Eagle flew & hys wynges, and ragened vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwelt vpo the earth: and I sawe that all thinges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, & no man spake against hym, no not one creature vpo earth. I sawe also that the Eagle fode vpon hys clawes, & gaue a foudre with his fethers, and a voyce lapinge after this maner: watch not all together, sleepe euery man in hys owne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the hea-des be perserued at the last. Nevertheless I sawe, that the voyce wrote not oute of hys heades, but from the myddest of hys body.
And I nombred hys cotrary fethers, and be-holde, there were eynge of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether: & ragened ouer all feareth.
And it happened, that when it ragened the ende of it came, and the place thereof appeared nomore. So the next folowynge fode vp, and ragened, and had grete tyme: and it happened, that when it ragened, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrst, so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayd heare thou that hast kepte in feareth so lon-ge, thys I saye vnto the, before thou begyn-neth to appeare nomore: There shall none after the astepne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thysyd, and ragened as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So went it with all the residue one after another, so that euery one ragened, and then appeared nomore.
Then I looked, and beholde, in proccesse of tyme p fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myght rule also: & some of the ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for some of the were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked, and be-holde the. xii. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: & there was nomore vpon p Eagles body, but two heades that rested, and thre fethers. The I sawe I also, that the thre fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpo the ryght syde, for the foure continued in the place.

So I looked, & beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp the felous, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shortly it appeared nomore, & the secōde was sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I be-helde & lo, p two thought also by the felous to ragene: & when they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of p two heades. And the I sawe, that the two heades were filled with hym, and p head was turned wth the that were by hym, and byd cate vpo the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue ragened.

But this head put p whole earth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those p dwelt vpon earth w much labour, and he had p gouer-nante of the world, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I looked, & beholde, the head that was in p myddest sodenly appeared nomore, lyke as p wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, & ouce those p dwelt therein. And I behelde, & lo, the head vpon the ryght syde, deuoured it that was vpon p left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before p, and conspyre the thyng that thou seest. The I sawe and beholde, as it were a lye p roareth, ren-nyng hastily out of the wood, & he sent out a mas voyce vnto the Eagle, & sayd: heare thou, I will talke with the, & the byest shal saye vnto p: Is it not thou p hast p victorie of the foure beastes, whom I made to ragene vpon earth & in my world, and p the ende of the p tymes myght come thowout the?

And the fourth came, and ouerwonne the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the world with great fearfulness, and ouer the whole espalle of the earth with the most wicked labour, & so longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earth with disceate, & the earth hast thou iudged not with truerth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the penceable & quyet, thou hast loured spers, & destropt p dwellinges of the that brought forth fruit, and hast cast downe the walles of loch as dyd the no harme. Therefore is thy wongeous dealing, and blasphemie come vp vnto the byest, and thy pryde vnto the myghty. The byest also hath looked vpon p proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and the p adominacions are fulfilled. And therefore appeare nomore thou Eagle, & thy horrible wynges, and thy wycked fethers, & thy vngacious heades, and thy fynfull clawes, and all thy wane body: that the earth maye be refrethed, and come agayne to her selfe, whā she is deliuered from thy violence, and that the maye hope for the iudgemēt and mercie of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

And it

3 And it happened when the Lyd spake these wordes vnto p. Aegle, I sawe, & beholde, the head that afore had the upper hand, appeared nomore: neither dyd p fourer wynges appear any more, that came to him, and were let vp to raygne: and their kyngdome was small and full of vppoure.
And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared no more, and the whole body of the Aegle was byst, and the earth was in greute feare. The awaked I out of the trauice of my mynde, & from greute feare, & sayde vnto my spye: Lo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou searchest out p wayes of the hysell: lo, yet am I weery in my mynde, & very weake in my spye, and lytle strenght is there in me, for p greute feare p I receaued this nyght. The foze wyll I now beseeche the hysell, that he wyll cofozte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lo, he lozde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syght, and yf I am iustified with the be-foze many other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, cofozte me the, and the-we me thy seruauant the interpretation and playne differre of this horrible syght, that thou mayest perfectly cofozte my soule: for thou hast iudged me woorthy, to shewe me the last of tyme.

* Dani. iiii.

25 And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Aegle whom thou sawest come vp fro the see, is the kyng dome* which was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto p. Aeg-hold, p dayes come, that there shall clype vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were be-foze it. In p same kyngdome shall. xii. kyng-domes raygne, one after another. For the firste shall begynne to raygne, and shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and thus do the twelue wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for p voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heabes, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of p kyngdome there shall arise great strypunges, and it shall stande in pcell of kailpung: neuertheles it shall not per fall, but shall be let into his begynnyng. And p cpyght vnder wynges whych thou sawest hage vnto the wynges of hym, be token, that in him there shall arise cpyght kynges, whose tyme shall be but small, and they peares twof, & two of the shall beare. But when the myn-dest tyme commeth, there shall be foure kepte in the tyme, wher his tyme begynneth to come p it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

C And where as thou sawest the headed re-sprynge, this is the interpretacyon: In his last shall the hysell ruple vp the kyngdomes, & call many agayne into the, & they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwelt therein, & much labour aboue all those that were before the. Therefore are they called p hendes of the Aegle: for it is they that shall byrge forth bys wechidnes agayne, and that shall perfourme and finish his last.

And where as p sawest, that p greute head appeared nomore, it signifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet to payne, for the two that remaine, shall be slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shall brouere the other, but at p last shall he fall thorow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as p sawest two vnder wynges vpon the head that is on the cpyght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whome p hysell hath kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyon wher thou sawest rpyngge vp out of p wood, and roarynge, and speakeyng vnto the Aegle, & rebuynge him for bys vnpayghte outnerle, is the wynde, which p hysell hath kepte for them, & for theyr wechidnes vnto the ende: he shall repyone the, and sette them alundre before them. For he shall see the lyuyng before the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall be deliuered with trouble those that be pserued our myne endes: and he shall make the ioyfull vntyll the commyng of the daye of iud-gement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the fro the begynnyng. This is the dreame p thou sawest, & this is the interpretacion. Thou only hast bene meete to knowe the secretes of the hysell.

Therefore wryte all these thynges p thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde the, and teach the the wyse i the people, whose heres thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wryte p here thy selfe per seuen dayes moo, that it maye be twed the, whatsouer it pleaseth the hysell to declare vnto the, and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cyte, they gathered the all together from the least vnto p most, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and sprest here in this place? For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candel in a darcke place, & as an haue & thy pserued from the respell. Haue we not eis aduersite pough, but thou must forsake vs where it not better for vs, that we had bene dynt wyth syon? For we are not better, then they that dyed there: and they wepte w loude voyce. The answered I them & sayd: Be of good cofozte O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for p hysell hath you in you in remembrance, and the mightye hath not forgotte you in temptation. As for me, I have not forgotte you, neither am I departed from you, but am come into this place to praye, because of the myserie of Israell: & I might like mercy for the lowe estate of your Sactinys. And now go your waye home euery mā, and after these dayes will I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cyppe, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remained still in the selde seven dayes, as the Angell bad me, and byde ate onely of the flowers of the selde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

¶ The xiii. Chapter.

And it happened after the seven dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the cloudes therof. And I looked, & beholde, the mā was strong and increased with the cloudes of heauen. And whē he turned his countenance to consider, all the thynges terrible that were sene vnder hym: and whē the voyce went out of his mouth, all they went that herbe hym, lyke as the earth when it scleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, & beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of me out of noumbe from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynst the man, that came out from the see. And I looked, and beholde he graued hym selfe a greate mountayne, & stode vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border of the pill, wherout the pill was grauen, and I coude not.

I sawe after these, that all they which came to fyghte agaynst him, were soe asfayed and yet durst they fight. Reuertheless, when he sawe the fearfull and violēt of the people, he nether lyft vp his hande nor helde swerde, ner eny weape: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes the wynde of the flamme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, & they were all myrte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flamme, and the greate storme, & fell with a rushe vpon the people, which was prepared to fyghte and byent them vpon euerydowle: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene; but onely dust & smoke. When I sawe this, I was asfayed.

After worde sawe I the same man come downe from the mostpayne, and calling vnto hym, amonge peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hī. Some were glad some were soye, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sych thorow greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast thewed thy seruauit all thy wondres from the beginning, and hast counted me worthy, that thou mightest receaue my prayer. Nowe me nowt yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I confesse in my vnderstanding: vnto vnto the that that be left: those dayes ad much more vnto the that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heuyned.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which that happe vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therefore are they come into great paretles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, & by which suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the world, & now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, & sayde. The interpretation of the sight shall I thewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thynges & thou hast required. For thou hast spoke of them that are left behynde, and thus is the interpretation. He that taketh awaye the paretl in that tyme, hath kept him self. They that be fallen into harme, are soch as haue wokes and saye vnto the, I do it myselfe. And now this therefore, that they which be left behynde are more blessed, the they that be dead. This is the meaninge of the vspyl. Where as thou sawest a man comming by from the depe of the see, the same is he whom God the hpyt hath kepte a greate season, which by his awne lisse had deluiered his creature, and he that orde the that are left behynde. And where as I sawest, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre & storme, and how that he lyft vp nether swerde nor weape, but that the rushe in of him destroyed the whole multitude that came to fyghte agaynst him: it signifyeth, that & dayes come, whā God will bepurge them that are vpon earth, and in a trauance of mynde shall he come vpon them, that dwell in the earth.

And one shall undertake to fyghte agaynst another, one cyte agaynst another, one place agaynst another: one people agaynst another, and one realme agaynst another. With this cometh to passe, the shall the tokens come, that I thewed the before: and the that any sone be declared, whā thou sawest clime vpon a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shall in their awne lande leaue the battail that they haue one agaynst another, & an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as they that be willinge to come, & to ouercome him by fygging. But he shall stāde vpon the toppe of the mount syon. Reuertheless syon shall come, and shall be thewed, beinge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the pill graue forth without any dayes,

des. But my sonne shal rebuke the people & are come, for theyr wickednes, with the temple, and for theyr euell ymaginations: and theyr paines: wherewith they shal be punished, are lykened vnto the flanne: and with out any labour, shall be destroyed the, even by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto him: tho se are 7 ten tribes which were caried awaye prisoners out of their awne lande. * in the tyme of Ahas the kynge, whom Salmana sar the kynge of Assyria toke prisoner, and carped them ouer the water, & so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them thys counsell, that they shulde leave the multitude of the heathen, and to go forth into a farther countrie, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepe in thys awne lade. And so they entered in at the narrow passages of 7 water of Suphates, and God shewed tokens for them, * and helde still the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thozow 7 countrie there was a greate waye, namely of a peare and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asereth. The dwelt they there vnto 7 later tyme: and wher they come forth agayne, the hysell shall holde tyll the springes of the streame agayne, that they may go thozow, therfore sawest thou 7 multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Now wher he destroyed the multitude that is gathered together, he shal beside his people that remaine, and the shall be thew them greate wonders.

Then sayde I. O Lord, Lord, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the mā coming vp from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou canst netter see out nor knowe thesē thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayest thou not see my sonne, or those that be with hym, but i the tyme of the dape. Thys is the interpretation of the dreame wher 7 sawest, therfore thou onely art here lyghened: for thou hast forsake thys awne lande, and applyed thy diligēce vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe hast thou ordeied in my dome, & * hast called vnderstanding thy mother: and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hysell. After thesē dayes I will shew the moze, & talke with 7 at moze large, pee heuy and wonderfuls thynges wll I declare vnto the.

Then went I forth into the felde, geuyng praye & thankes greatly vnto God, because of hys wonders that he byd in tyme, and because he goereth the same, and soche as is in tyme, and there I sate thesē dayes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

God appeareth vnto elias in the bush, and sheweth what he shall do.

Vnto the thys dape I sat vnder an oke tree, then came there a waye vnto me out of the bush, & sayde: Eljas, Eljas: And I sayde: heere am I. Lord, and stood by vpon my feete. Then spake he vnto me: * In the vnty byd I appere vnto 7 ofes, & talked with hym wher my people serued in Egypt, and I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount syon, where I helde him by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderfuls wozeches, and shewed hym the secrettes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded hym, saying: These wozeches shalt thou declare, & not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and 7 interpretacyōs wherch I haue shewed the: for 7 shalt be reccaund of all, thou shalt be turned and remaigne with my coliel, and with such as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For 7 woulde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begine to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuēded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of 7 tenth parte: yet remaigneth there 7 which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore, prepare and ordeie thy house, & reforme thy people: comforte thy of thein as be i trouble: and tell now of the destruction: let go from the moztall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weakē nature: lape vp in some places the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haile the to flye from thesē tymes: for such euil and wyckednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shall they do yet much worse. * For the weaker that the world ad the tyme is, the moze shall synne and wickednesse increse in them that dwell vpon earth. For the trouth is fled farre awaye, & leysynge is hard at hande. For now haue they the villon to come that thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lord, I wll go as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shall be doine after warde, who wll exhortē or rebuke them? Thus the world is set in darkness: & they that dwell therein are without light: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no mā knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or that shall be done. If I haue founde grace before the, sēde the holy goost into me, and I shall wyte all that hath bene done in the world sence the begynnyng, which was writen in thy lawe, that mā maye fynde the path, and that they which wll lyue in 7 latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he

* For the weaker that the world ad the tyme is, the moze shall synne and wickednesse increse in them that dwell vpon earth. For the trouth is fled farre awaye, & leysynge is hard at hande. For now haue they the villon to come that thou hast sene.

* iiii. Regl. 19. 18.

And he answered me, sayinge: God thy maye, gather the people together, and save them, that they leke þ not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather þ many bores trees, & take with the Sycara, Dabzia, Selemia, Canna and Aiel, these fyue, whiche are ready to wyte swyfly, & some bycher, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstandinge in thyne heart, which shall not be put out, till the thynges be performed which thou shalt begynne to wyte. And the thale thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shall thou shew secretly vnto the wyse. To morowe this honoure shall thou begynne to wyte.

C Then wente I forth as he commaunded me, and gathered all the people together, and sayde: heare these wordes O Israel, Dure fathers art þ begynnyng wele strangers in Egypte, from whence they were deliuered, & deceaued the lawe of Iste * which they kepte not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then wast this lande & the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lot to possesse. But your fathers & ye your selues also haue done vncyghteousnes, and haue not kepte the wayes which the hyest commaunded you. And for so much as he is a cyghteous iudge, he toke from you in tyme þ thynges þ he had geuen you. And now are ye here & youre brethren amonge you. Therefore ys to be that ye will subdue your adone vnderstanding, and reforme your herte, ye shall be kepte aloue, & after deathe shall ye opteyne mercy. For after deathe shall the iudgement come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the cyghteous be manifest, and the wordes of the vngodly shall be declared. Let no man therefore come now vnto me, ner as he cnyquell you at me these fourtye dayes.

D So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente in to the selde, & remaine there. The next daye a voyce called me sayinge: Exodus * open thy mouth, & dynerke þ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, & beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my heart had vnderstanding, & wisdom grewe in my heart: for my sperte was kepte in remembrance, and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The hyest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thynges of þ nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they vnderstode: as for me, I spake in the daye & helde not my tongue by nyght. In .xj. dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure booke.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfilled, that þ hyest spake, sayinge:

The first that thou hast wyrtten, speake openly, þ the worthy & vnderworthy maye rede it. But kepe the .ix. last, that thou mayest shew it onely to such as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is þ fynginge of vnderstandinge, the fountayne of wisdom, and the streame of knowledge. And I vnd lo.

¶ The punishment that most people that haue, which God commaunded to beas to their borne them.

Behold, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophete, which I will put in thy mouth, sayeth the Lord: and cause the to be wyrtten in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the pynagyns agaynst the, let not þ vnfaithfulness of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaithfull shall: dye in they vnfaithfulness. Beholde sayeth the Lord. I will byngne plagis vpon the woyle, the swerde, hunger, death and destruction, for wychednes hath the vpper hand in all the earth, and thez: Gamellull wordes are fulfilled.

Therefore sayeth the Lord: I will holde my tongue nomore vnto thez wychednesse, which they do so vngodly: necher will I suffer them in the thynges, that they deale with all so wychedly. Beholde * innocent bloud of the troubled cryeth vnto me, & the soules of the cyghteous complayne continually: and therefore (sayeth þ Lord) I will surely auenge, & reuenge vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

* Beholde, my people, is led as a flock of shepe to be slayne, I will not suffer them now to dwel in Egypte, but will byngne them out with a myghty had & a stretched out arme, & smyte it with plagis as afore and will destroye all þ lande of it. Egypte shall mourne, and the foundacyons of it shall be smytten with the plage and punishment, that God shall byngne vpon it.

They that till the ground, shall mourne: for they: ledes shall be destroyed thorough the blackynge and hable, and an horrible scarre. Also worth the woyle and them that dwel therein, for the swerde and they: destruction draweth vpe, and one people shall stande vpe to fight agaynst another, and swerdes in they: handes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shall not regarde they: kyng and prynces, the wayes of they: dorynges and handelynges in they: power. A man shall despyse to go into the cpyte, and shall not be able. For because of they: pyte the cpytes shall be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shall be afraied. A man

Shall haue no pytpe vpon hys neyghbour, but one shall vponioke another vnto vntapill to spoyle theyr goodes becaufe of the hunger of byed, and becaufe of the greates trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the wyppling, from the South, from the East and I vbanus to turne vnto them, & restore the thynges þey haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yett theyr dyce vnto my cholen, so wyll I do also, & receyue them in theyr bosome. Thus sayeth the Lord God: my ryght hand shall not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not ceasse ouer them, that shed the innocent bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out from hys wrath, & hath consumed the foundacyons of þe earth, & the synners lyke the straw þe is kindled. Who wyeth them that synne, & kepe not my commaundmentes, sayeth the Lorde. I wyll not spare them, so youre waye ye chyldeyn from violence desyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all them that synne agaynst hym, & therfore deliuered be them vnto death and destruction: For now are the plagis come vpon þe world, & ye shall remayne in them. For God shall not deliuer you, because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde, an horrible vpsyon cometh from the East, where generacyons of Dragons shall come out, and þe people of þe Tribes with many charcttes, and þe multitude of them shalbe as þe wynde vpon earth, that all theyr which heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, maye feare and be afrayed, and as the wynde bores oute of the wood, so shall theyr go out, and wyth greates power shall they come, and shalbe fyghtynge wyth them, and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragon haue the vpper hande, not remeyng theyr þe wyth, and shall turne aboute swerapunge together in greates power, to percutte them. But these shalbe afrayed, & kepe sylece at theyr power, and shall ke: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shal besage them, & consume one of them, & in theyr hoost shall be feare and drede, and strepe amonge theyr kynges.

F Beholde cloudes from þe East, and from the North vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath & storme. They shall smyte one vpon another, & they shall smyte at the greates barre vpon earth and theyr barre, and the bloude shalbe from the swerde vnto the bely, and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shalbe greates fearfulness, & trembling vpon earth, and theyr þe the wrath, shal be afrayed, and a tremblynge shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greates raynes from the South, & from the North, & parte from the West, and from the South wynde from the East, & shall ouer them by agayne and þe cloude wyth theyr rayned by in wyath, & the flares to cause feare towarde the East & West wynde, shalbe destroyed: & the greates cloude shalbe lyte by, & the myghty cloude full of wyath, and the flares, that theyr maye make all the earth afrayed, and then that dwel therein, & that theyr maye poure oute ouer all places an horrible flares, fyre and houle, and spenge swerde, & many waters: that all felde maye be full, and all ryuers, & theyr shall beake downe the cytyes and walles, mountaynes & bylles, all trees, wood, & the grasse of þe medowes, & all theyr frute. And theyr shall go steepest vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, theyr shall come to her & besage her: þe flares & all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust & smoke go vnto the heauen, and all theyr that be aboute her, shall bewaile her: theyr that remayne vnder her, shall do streupe vnto them that haue put her in feare: And thou Asia þe confortest thy selfe also vpon þe hope of Babylon, and art a woorthy of her perforce: Who be vnto the thou wretch, because þe hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast dekte thy daughters in whozdom, that theyr myghte triumphe & please thy louers, which haue allwaye despyed to committe whozdom to the: thou hast folowed the abhominable cpe in all her woorkes and inuencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyll sende plagis vpon þe, wyddowhede, pouerte, hunger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction, & death, and the gloze of thy power shall be dyed by as a floure, when the heate eyleth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be lyke as a poore wyfe þe is plagued & braten of women: so that the myghtie and lower shall not be able to recuree her. Walde I to hate þe sayeth þe Lord: If thou haddest not allwaye slayne my chofen, exaltinge þe stroke of thy hades, and sayde ouer theyr death, when þe wast dycken: lett forth the be wyte of thy countenance.

The rywardes of the whozdom shalbe recompensed the in thy bosome, therfore shall thou recuree rywardes.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my cholen (sayeth þe Lorde) cuen to shall God do vnto the, and shall deliuer þe into the plage. Thy chyldeyn shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall to the swerde. Thy cytyes shalbe broken downe, & all thyne shall perishe with the swerde in the feld. Theyr that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, and eate their owne flesch, & drinke their owne bloud for veryr hunger of byed and theyr of water.

Thus

Thou unhappy shalt come thowow the see, and recreace plagis agayne.

In the pallage they shall cast downe the dayne cytpe, and shall rote out one parte of thy lande, and consume the porcion of glorye. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume the thy cyties and thy lade, thy wood and thy fruitfull trees shall they burne up with the fyre. Thy chyldren shall they carawaye captyue, and loke what thou hast, they shall spolie it, and marre the betwpe of thy face.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ The worden shall be punyghed.

And vnto the Babylow & Asia, two be vnto the Egypt and Syria: gyde your selues with clothes of sack & heare, and mouneyour destrucion is at hand. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it back?
A fyre is kyndled amonge you, & who wyl quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that wyl dryue them awaye?
Wape eny man dryue awaye an hongrie vpon in the wood? Or mape eny man quench the fyre in stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Wape one turne agayne the arrowe, that is shot of a strong archer. The myghtye Lord sendeth þ plagis, & what is he þ wyl dryue the awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wrath, & what is he that wyl quench it? He shall cast lyghtenynge, and who shall not feare? He shall thunder, & who shall not be afrayed? The Lord shall thunder, & who shall not drede? He shall beate, & who shall not drede? He shall pouder at his presence? The earth quaketh, & the foundations therof: the see ar-seth up with waues from the depe, and the floodes of it are vnyquyte & the fildes ther-of also before the Lorde, and before the glory of his power. For stronge is his ryght hand that holdeth þ bowe, his arrowes that he shotteth, are thorp, and shall not myse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the world.

25 Beholde, the plagis are sent, & shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth.
The fyre is kyndled, & shall not be put out till it consume þ foundations of þ earth. Ly-ke as an arrowe which is shot of a myghtye archer, returneth not backwarde: euen to the plagis þ shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who will deliuer me in those dayes? The begynninge of sorowes & greate mourninge: the begynninge of darth and greate death, the begynninge of warres, & þ yowens shall stand in feare: the begynninge of euils, and they shall tremble enery one. What shall

I do in these thinges, when þ plagis come?
Beholde, hōger & plage, trouble & angurph are sent, as scourges for amendment. But for all these thinges they shall not turne fro their wyckednesse, ner be all wape myndefull of the scourges.

Beholde, wytydes shall be so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thinke them sel-ues to be in good case: and euen then shall mysechre growe vpon earth, warres, darth and greate disquietnes. For many of them that dwel vpon earth shall perishe of hōger, and þ other that escape the hōnger, shall the swerde destrope: & the berd shall cast oute as donge, & there shall be no man to comforte them. For the earth shall be wasted, and þ cy-ties shall be cast downe: there shall be no man left to tply the earth & to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them or gather them? The grapes shall be ry-pe, & who shall treade them? For all places shall be desolate of men, so þ one man shall desyre to se another, or to heare his voyce.
For of one whole cytie there shall be ten left, and two in the felde, which shall hyde them selues in the thypke bushes, and in þ clypes of stones: lyke as when they remaine thre or foure olmycs vpon þ olyu tre, or as whē a vineyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently sought thowrow the vineyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or foure left, for them þ search they houses with the swerde. And the earth shall be left waste, and þ felbes therof shall ware olde:
and her wapes and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shall tra-uayle there thowow. The daughters shall mourne, hauing no bydegromis: the women make lamentacion, hauing no husban-des, their daughters shall mourne, hauing no helpe of their bydegromis. In the war-res shall they be destroyed, and their husbands shall perishe of hōger. Of þ seruantes of the Lorde, heare these thynges, and marck them. Beholde, þ word of the Lorde, & re-ceau it: beholde, the plagis drawne, & are not slack in raryge. Lyke as a traunpynge woman, which after þ. ii. moneth bringeth forth a sonne, when þ yowre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre a fore that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chylde cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twynckling of an ey. Euen so shall not the plagis be slack to come vpon earth, and the world shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on enery tyde.

¶ My people, heare my word, make you redy to the battayle, and in all euill be euen as pylgryms vpon earth. * he that selleth, i. Cor. xiii. 4.

occupieth marchaundies, as he that buy-neth nor: he that buydeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he þ soweth, as one that shall not reape: he þ caryeth the vncypharde, as he þ shall not gather the grapes: they that marþ, as they þ shall get no chyldren:
and they that marþ not: as the wyddowes: and therefore * they that labour, labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape they: fru-tes, & spoyle their goodes, ouerthrowe their houses, & take their chyldren captiue, for in captiue & longer shall they get chyldren.
And they that occupie they: marchaundies with robbery, how longe deede they they: cynics, they: houses, they: possessions, & personnes: þ more wyll þ iump & the for they: synnes, sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whose cunperth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she declereth her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, which shall make inquisye on for all synne vpon earth. And therefor be not ye lyke the thurmo, nec to the woiches thereof: for oꝛ euer it be lōge, iniqui-te shall be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall raggne amonge you.

¶ Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpo his head, which sayeth befoze þ Lord God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all þ woiches of men, they:
pynaginations, they: thoughtes, and they:
herres. * for he spake but þ worde: lett the earth be made, and it was made: lett þ heauen be made, and it was made. In his wo-de were the starres made, & he knoweth the nobbe of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures thereof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth.
He hath that þ see in þ myddest of þ waters, & with his worde hath he hangd the earth vpon þ waters. He spyedeth out the heauen lyke a vatore, vpon þ waters hath he founded it. In þ deserte & drye wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppes of þ mountaynes, that þ floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herce in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym byeth, lyfe and vnderstādyng, yee and the sperte of þ Almyghtye God, which made all thynges, and hath searched þ ground of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth poure pynaginations & in-uencions, and what ye thynke when ye syn-ne, and wolde hyde poure synnes. Therefore hath the Lord searched and sought out all your woiches, & he shall bewape you all.
And when your synnes are brought forth, ye shall be ashamed befoze me, & poure awo-synnes shall be poure accusers in that daye.
What wyll ye do? What wyll yee hyde your synnes befoze God and his Angells?
Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue of from poure synnes, and forget poure vnyrghteousnes, & meke no moze with the: so shall God leaue you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kindled ouer you, & they shall take awope certayne of you, & fede þ phle with Idols: & they that consent vnto them, shall be had in derpyen laughed to scozne, & troben vnder foot.

For vnto the places there shall be a place, & and in the next cyties a grete insurreccyon vpon those that feare þ Lord. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle and walke lochasfear the Lord, they: goodes shall they take fro the, and shute them out of they: houses. Then shal it be knowne who are my chof, & they shall be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare I ye my belouch, sayth þ Lord: beholde, the dapes of trouble are at hāde, but I wyll deliuer you from þ same. We not ye a fapd dispayre not, for God is poure captiue.

Whoso keperth my commaundementes and pceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not poure synnes wepe you downe, and let not poure vnyghteousnesse be lyft vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto they:
synnes, and tangled in they: wyckednesse: lyke as a felder is hedged in with bul-wes, and the path thereof couered with thornes, y no man maye trauaple thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre,
and bent.

The booke of Tobias,

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ Tobias beinge taken prisoner, forsaeth not the labor of trueth. The mercy and charge of Tobias and the manner of hym in his youth. He taketh Sani-rach to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succurreth Sani-rach with money. He is faine to fynde, but after the death of Sennacherib the refrains agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe and cy-tie of Nephtali, which lyeth in þe coūtreys of Galile aboute Naason the waye toward the west, haupnge þe cytie of Se-pher byon the left syde.

Though he was taken prisoner in the dayes of Salmanaſar kyng of þe Assyrians nevertheles beinge in captiuite, he forsoke not the waye of trueth. In so much þe what fouer he myght get, he parted it daylie w his fellow prisoners & brethren, that were of his kynred. And though he were ponger then all in þe trybe of Nephtali, yet byd not he behaue hym selfe chyldeshyp in hys workes. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, wherby Ieroboam the kyng of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all theyr companies, and gat him to Ierusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde, and there worshipped the Lord God of Israel, saynfully offeringe of all his first frutes & ty-thes, so that in þe trybe yere he mynistrd all the thyngs vnto the straungers and conuerſes. These and such lyke thynges byd he obserue accordyng to þe lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

When he was a man, he toke oute of his wyue a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whom he called after his wyue name, and taught hym from hys youth by, to feare God, & to refrayne from all synne.

Now when he with hys wyfe, hys sonne and with all his kynred was come in cap-tivitye vnto the cytie of Samie, what tyme as they all byd eate of the meates of the dea-then, he kepte his soule, and was neuer deſpyed in theyr meates. And for so much as he was myndfull of the Lorde in all his deer, God gaue hym fauoure in the syght of Sal-manaſar þe kyng, which gaue hym power to go wher he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what fouer hym lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all them þe were in prison, and comforted them, & gaue them whollsome exortacions. And when he came to Rages a cytie of the Medes, haupnge ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges where w þe kyng had honoured hym) & inwe among a grete company of people of hys kynred, one Gabelus (which was of hys wyue try-be) beinge in necessite, he gaue hym the sayd wyght of syluer vnder an had wyrtunge.

After a longe season when Salmanaſar the kyng was ded, and Sennacherib hys sonne reygnd in his stede, which had the chyldren of Israel. Tobias wet duple tho-row out all his kynred, and comforted them, & gaue of hys goodes to euery one of them, as much as he myght: he fed the hōgre, clothed the naked, and buried þe ded and day-ne, and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kyng came to agayne and fled out of Ieremy (what tyme as God punished hym for hys blasphemie) and in hys wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kyng, he commaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all his goodes.
Nevertheless, Tobias with his sonne and w his wyfe fled his wyue, and was byd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after xlv. dayes þe kyng was slayn of his awne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were reco-red vnto hym.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias herbeth ſuche of his reuerſes as fraie God, to a banquet or feaſt. He is reſpoynd of his friends.
He ſearcheth God more then the wyng. He ſermoneth bygh by the prynces and ſubſtance of God. He reſpoyndeth more bygh.

After these thynges vpon a solmyne daye of þe Lorde Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: God thy wyfe & byng herber some of oure trib, for as feare god, þe they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father that one of þe chyldren of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete. And immediately he leapt from his table, left the feast, came fastunge to the bed coarſe, toke hym and bare him puerly in to his house, that when the sunne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And when he had byd the coarſe, he byd eate hys meate with mourninge & feare, remembryng the wordes, that the Lorde sayeth by þe prophet Amos: poure ye feaſtes walde turne to forowe and heynnes.

But when þe sunne was downe, he wet his wyfe & buried hym. Then all his neygh-bours rejoynd hym, sayyng: It is not logh, sens it was commaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce cleaped the daunger of death, and buryest thou the ded agayne? Nevertheless, Tobias feare God more then þe kyng, toke the bodies of the slayne, and byd them in his house, & buried them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had byred þe ded, and was wepyng, cam home, and layed hym downe by the wall & slepte. And

The booke

Why he was allepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes darre donge out of the swalows nest, so that he was blynde. This tempta-cyon vpo God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myghte haue an exmple of his pacifce, lyke as of holy Job.
For in so much as he cure feared God from his youth vp, & kepte his comaundemētes, he grudged not agaynst God, that p plage of blyndnes chaufed vnto hym, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thakid God all the dayes of his lyfe.

D For lyke as blessed Job was had in deri-syon of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynfolkes, which sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which p hast done allines & buried p deeth?
But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Saye not so, for we are the chyliden of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shall geue vnto them, p neuer turne they belec from him. Anna his wyfe wenter daylye to the weatunge mochte: & loke what lpyunge he couide get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened p the toke a lpyd, and broughte it home.

And when her husbande herde it crye, he sayd: loke p it be not stolen, restoze it agayne to the owne: for it is not lawfull for vs to cate o: to touch any thyng of theft. The was hys wyfe angrie, & sayde: Now is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy allines deces are manifest. With these & loch lyke woydes vpo the cast him in the tethe.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Ra-guel is claudered of her fathers tcausite. The prayer and sayngs of Sara, and also the tuncency and char-gite of her. The prayse of Tobias and of Sara are hearde.

¶ When Tobias toke it heuely, and with teares beganne to make hys prayer sayng: O Lorde thou art ryghte-ous, and all thy iugementes are true, pec all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulness and iugement. And now O Lorde be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nether remembre my mysdoes, nether the mysdoes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaundemētes, therefore are we spoyled, brought into captivitye, into death, into derisyon and shame vnto all nacjōs, among whom thou hast scattered vs. And now O Lorde, thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done acordyng to thy comaundemētes, nether haue we walked in ocessly before the. And now O Lorde, deale with me accordyng to thy wyll, and commaunde my spere to be receined in peace, for moze expedit were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At p same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Raguel a cyle of the Wydes was claudered of one of her fathers handmaydes, namely, that the quhe haue had seuen husbantes, which as loone as they were gone in vnto her, were layme of the deuell called Almobens. Therefore, when she repoued p mayden for her saule, she and werde her, sayng: Godlett vs neuer se sonne ner daughter of p moze vpon earth thou kyller of thy husbantes. Wyle p slay me also, as p hast slayne seuen men. At this woye wente Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether ate ner drycke, but continued i prayer and besought God with teares, p he wolde deliuer her from thy rebuke.

Vpon p thre dayes it chaunced, p when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayed p Lorde sayng: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which when p art woorth, shewest mercy, & in tyme of trouble p soze-nest p synnes of them, p call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne p my face, vnto the lyft I vpmyn eyes. I beseeche p O Lorde, lose me out of the bondes of thys rebuke, o: els take me vterly awaye from of the earth.
Thou knowest Lorde, p I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane fro all vncleyn luf. I haue not lepyte company with those p palle thet tyme in spore, nether haue I made my self parta-ker w them p walche in lpyte behaunour.
Nertheles an husbād haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduerture ether I haue bene vn-woorthy of them, o: els were they vnumte for me, for p happily hast kepte me to another husbād. For why: thy counsell is not in p power of man. But whosoener loueth the and serueth the a ryght, is sure of thys, that p hys lyfe be rempyed & proued, it shaldedh in p trieng, and p he endure in pacifce he shall haue a reward, and be ppye crowned: and p he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall deliuer hym: and p hys lyfe be in chastyng, p he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dayna cyon: and why: after a soyme thou makest the wether saye a still: after wepyng & be-uynes thou gnest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israel, he prayed for euer. At p same tyme were both they: prayers hearde in the spght of p maggeth of p hyell God.
And Raphael p holy Angell of the Lord was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias shewyng to ber greut a gubly shoytacyon and maggethon to beu loun.

¶ The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which he sent into Ragas. An Angell accompanied with hym in hys iourney.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias and sayde vnto him: My son ne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundation. When God shall a waye my soule, burye þy my body, & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For þy oughtest to remember, what and howe greate payres the fathered for þy in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled þy tyme of her lyfe, burye her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, & betwene, lest at any tyme thou comest vnto synne, & lest þy lett synne the cōmāndementes of the Lord oure God.

¶ Gene allines of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lord shall not be turned awaye fro the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moche, geue plen-tiously: yf thou hast lytle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of þy lytle. For to gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the daye of necessite. For mercy besygnereth fro all syn-ne and from death, and suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate comforte is mercy before the hye God, vnto all them that shew it.

¶ My sonne, keepe the well from all wolo-dome, and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faure be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde haue enye in thy mynde ner in thy wordes, for in pyde beganne all destruction.

¶ Whosoever woorketh any thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruauntes wages remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng þy thou wol-dest not another man shoulde do vnto þy. E-ate thy byed with the hongrie and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy byed and wyne vpon þy buriall of the pyg-teous, and do not thou eate & dryncke thereof with the synners. Ake euer counsell at the wyfe.

¶ We allwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseeche hym, that he wyll ordeyne thy wayes, and that what souer thou deuydest or cal-lest in hāde, it maye remayne in hym. I cry-stye the also my sonne, that (when þy wylt per, but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabriel, at Ragas a cytie of þy Medes, & his hand wytyngs haue I by me. And therfore seke howe meanes, howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer, & geue hym his band wytyngs agayne.

¶ My sonne, be not afrayed: trueth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

When answered Tobias his father, & sayde: Father, all that thou hast commaunded me, wyl I do, and that diligently. But how I shall require this money I can not tell: Neither doth he knowe me, ner I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye ther, I neuer knewest. Then hys father answered hym, and sayde: I haue hys hād wytyngs by me whiche when thou dost wylt hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But goo thy waye now, and get þy some saythfull man to goo with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyvinge. Then went Tobias out, & vpon the strete he found a sayre poge man (and byng, gpyd by, and as it were one ready to take hys iour-ney). And he knewe not that it was an angell of God, but saluted hym, and sayde: From whence art thou, þy good poge man?
He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

¶ And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest þy the waye, that ledest vnto þy cōtre of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone off tymes, and haue lodged w our lordor Gabelus, that dwelleth in Ragas a cytie of the Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the moūte Egharomus.
Tobias sayd vnto him: I praye þy, tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then wete Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At þy which his father marvelled, ad prayed, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

¶ Now when the angell came in, he saluted hym, and sayd: Iope be with the for euer more. And olde Tobias sayd: what iope can I haue that lyt here in darkenes, and le not the lyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good cheare. God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Canst thou byyng my sonne to Gabelus, vnto þy cytie of Ragas in Medes? And wēt thou comest agayne, I shall paye þy thy hyre. And the Angell sayd vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and byyng him to þy agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what tye art thou? The Angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Asketh thou after the kynred of an hyrclyng, or sekest þy a gyfte for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make þy not ca-refull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Yananius. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a greate kynred: but I praye þy, be not displiced, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The Angell sayd vnto him: thy sonne shall I leade forth safely, and byyng him wholy to the agayne.

D Then answered Tobias, and sayde: well, go on your waye, & God be in your iourney, and his Angell beare you company. So when they had prepared all thynges, that they wolde take with them in theyr iourney: Tobias had his father & his mother fare well, and they went on their waye both together. Now when they were gone: his mother beganne to wepe, & sayde: The staffe of our age hast thou taken awaye and sent hym from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with oure pouerte, thys had bene greaue ryche vnto vs, that we shoulde haue hadde here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thynne cryes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym company, & orde well all the thynges that be both: so that he shall come to vs agayne with lope. At thes wordes his mother left off weepingge, and helde her tongue.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ Young Tobias is departed from the spirit, by the Angell. The Angell comforteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

A Tobias wote on his waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and by night ngyht they abode by the water of Egreis. Then wot he out to wally his fete, & beholde, there came forth an horrible fpyth to deuoure hym. Of whonic Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: Lorde, be cometh vpon me. And þe Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by þe fyll, and draw him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpon the lande. And the fpyth beganne to leape at his fete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take out the bodiles of thys fpyth, and as for the herte, the gall & the leuer, kepe them by the. For thes thynges are necessary a good for medecyne. Tobias dyd so, & rolled the fpyth, and theyr toke him with them in theyr iourney: þe fpyth they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, tyl they came to Raguel a cytie of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I praye þe by other Sacra, tell me, wher to see thes thynges good of þe fpyth þou hast bydden me kepe?

The Angell answered hym and sayde: Thou shalt see a pece of the hert vpon þe coles, the smoke therof dryeth awaye all maner of euill sperees, whether it be fed man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto the. The gall is good to anoynte or to strepe þe pes wyrtball, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shalbe whole.

And Tobias sayd vnto him: wher shal I thou þe remayne? The Angell answered & sayd: here is a nyte byrman of thynne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath neuer come nee daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, & thou shalt marrye her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstode, she hath bene married vnto seuen husbundes, & they all are ded; and I haue herde saye, that þe deuell slewe them. I am afrayed therfore, lest such thynges happen vnto me also: which ys it came to passe (seyng I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde wyngre the in thes age with sorowe to thes graues.

Then sayde the Angell Raguel vnto him: heare me, & I will tell þe what they be, of whom the deuill hath power. Namely, they þe reuene marriage of such a fashon, þe they put God out fro them, & from thes herbert, & geue them selues to thes a vncle lust, such as it were an hore & a wyle, which haue no vnderstandinge: vpon such hath þe deuill power. But when þe takest her, & art come in to the chāber, withholde thy selfe from her thes dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto no thyng but vnto prayer with her.

And in þe fyrst nyght, rolle þe leuer of the fpyth, and the deuill shalbe depun awaye. The seconde nyght shalt þe be receaued into the company of the holy patriarches. The thyrde nyght shalt thou opteyne þe blessing of God so that wholc chylidren shalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take þe mapden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chylidren, then for eny fleschly lust: þe in the sepe of Abraham thou mayest optayne the blessing in chylidren.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

¶ Young Tobias and the Angell come to the house of Raguel. He requyeth Raguel's daughter to wyfe and obtaineth her.

When wete they to Raguel, which receaued the soflyll. And when Raguel looked vpo Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyke is this younge man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he had spoken this, he sayde: whence be þe good byerthyn? They sayd: Of the trybe of Reubyn, out of þe captiuitie of Assyrie. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: knowe þe my by other Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe hym well. And when he had spoken inoch good of hym, the Angell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou hast said, is thys younge mans father. Then Raguel bowed hym selfe downe, and wepte, toke hym aboute the neck, and blessed hym, and sayde: Gods blessinge haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara his daughter wepte also.

Now whē they had talked together, Raguell had kyll a wether, ad to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sit downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyl neither eat her dynche here this daye, excepte thou frst graunte me my peticion, a promise due to geue thy daughter Sara. Whē Raguell herde this he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other leuen mē, that wente in vnto her: and he beganne to feare, that it shuld chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the yonge man no answer, the aungel saide vnto him: feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, beloggeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguell: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers, and feared in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for f same intent, & this daughter of mine myght be maryed in her owne kyned, accordyng to the lawe of Moyses. And now dowte thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the: so he toke the ryght hande of his daughter, and gaue her into the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfill hys blessing in you. And they toke a lctter, and made a wytyng of the mariage. And the made they mery, ad prayd God. And Raguell called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheare my daughter, & Lord of heauen geue the ioye, for the heuines that thou hast suffred.

The aungel synneth the deuell. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye, and they praye the daye before they goe together.

Now whē after that they had supped they brought the yonge mā into ber. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a peece of the leuer of the frsh, and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuell, ad sent hym awaye and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgyn, and sayde: My Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to daye, to morrow, ad ouermorrow: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconcele our selues wth God: and when the thyrde holy nyght is past, we shall ioyne together in the burpe of mariage. For we are the chyldren of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen that knowe not God.

Then stode they by both together, and besought God earnestly, that he woulde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of our fathers, prayed be thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles ad founteyns, ad of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the * moule of the earth, ad gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes, & I take this yster of mine to wyfe, but only for the loue of children, in whō thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs, O Lord, haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde together to a good age.

And aboute the cock crowyng, it happened, that Raguell called his seruantes, ad they wente with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced now vnto my peraduventure, as it did vnto the other leue mē, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made a graue, Raguell came agayne to his wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be dead, that I maye burye him afore it be lyght daye. So she set a mayden to se, which when she came into y chamber, founde them both whole and sounde, lpyng together. And so he came agayne, and brought good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayd the Lord and sayd: Praise be to, O Lord God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully wth vs, and put a waye frō vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto y pōder two beloued. O Lord, cause the to magnifye the more perfectly, ad to offere the sacrifice of thy prayse, ad of theyr helth: that all people maye knowe, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguell commaunded his seruantes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, wth earth, a foz it was lyght, and bad his wyfe prepare a feast, ad to make readye all thynges that were necessarye for meate, to cooke as went by the waye. He caused two fat lync also, a foure wetters to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all his nychbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias, to remaine with him two weekes. As for al the good that he had be gaue Tobias the halfe of it, ad made this wytyng, that the halfe which remayned, shuld fall vnto Tobias after theyr deathe.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

The aungel goeth to Gabilde, at the bysse of Esau: whiche deliuereth the leues, and recouereth the mouey.

¶ The x. Chapter.

21 When Tobias called vnto hym þæt Augell, whom he thought to haue bene a mail, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Arias, I praye the berken vnto my woordes: þæt I quide geue my selfe to be thy seruant, I shall not defene thy prouidence. Neuerthelesse I beseeche the, that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruantes, and go vnto Gabelus in cages the cyte of Medes, and deliuer him his hand wyppinge, and recraue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marpage: for þæt I knowest thy selfe, that my father doth aduise the dayes: and þæt I stary one daye to long, he wyll be sorry in his mind. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym nay.

22 Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruantes, and two Camels, and toke vnto Ragel the cyte of the Medes: and when he had toke Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wyppinge, & recraued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias the sonne of Tobit, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come wth hym to the marriage. Now when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sitting at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God, and sayde: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and doeth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe, and your eldres, that ye maye se your chyldren, and your chyldres chyldren, vnto the thirde and fourth generation, and your seede be blessed of the God of Israel, whych thyng shall be without ende. And when they all had sayd Aue, they went to supper, but with the feare of the Lord held they the fast of the marriage.

¶ Tobias & his wyfe are sadde for the taryance of their sonne. Raguell comforte agayne Tobias wth his toke.

23 Then Tobias called vnto hym þæt Augell, whom he thought to haue bene a mail, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Arias, I praye the berken vnto my woordes: þæt I quide geue my selfe to be thy seruant, I shall not defene thy prouidence. Neuerthelesse I beseeche the, that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruantes, and go vnto Gabelus in cages the cyte of Medes, and deliuer him his hand wyppinge, and recraue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marpage: for þæt I knowest thy selfe, that my father doth aduise the dayes: and þæt I stary one daye to long, he wyll be sorry in his mind. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym nay.

stake of oure age, thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generation: þerbyng all the thynges þæt we haue are only in the, we shuld not haue lent the awaye from vs.

24 Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tounge, and be not discorforted, our sonne is whole and sounde: the man that we sent hym wth þall, is fastyfull ynowgh. Neuerthelesse, the might in no wyse be discorforted: but daplye went our, looked aboute, and went about all the streetes, wherby the thought he shuld come agayne: that (yf it were possible) the myght se hym commynge a farr off.

25 But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in C lade: Wtary here, and I shall sende a messaunger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel him that thou art in good health. Tobias saide vnto him: I am sure, that my father shal my mother counte every daye, and that they herres are sorry.

26 So when Raguel prayed Tobias wth many wordes, and wolde in no wyse hence hym, he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruantes and handmapens, in shepe, in Camels, and in kyne and much money, & so sent him awaye from hym wth peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy aungell of the Lord be wth you in poure iourney, and bypasse you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case wth your eldres: & that myne eyes maye se your chyldren as I dye. So the eldres embraced they daughter, kyssed her, & let her go, exhortinge her to honour her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbande, to rule well her household, to kepe her house in good orde, and to shew her selfe fauentele.

¶ Raguel leaping hys wyfe and her wythe in the myddeweape, comethe bryde wth the aungell. The bryme of his mother looking after her sonne. He is ioyfully receyued of hys father and mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

27 As they now were going home ward agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Amlus. And the aungell sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therefore yf it please the, we two wyll go before, and let the household wth thy wyfe and the catel come soft and fastly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shuld go before, Raphael sayde vnto hym: Take of the galle of the fyth wth the, for it shal be needful. So Tobias toke of the galle, & they went their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daply by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence the myght se farr aboute her. And whyle the was waypynge there there for his commyng, he tolde a farr of;

and anon he perceiued her sonne comyng, and came and tolde her bus bande, sayinge: Behold, thy sonne cometh. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediatly worshippinge the Lorde thy God, and geue thanks vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kysse hym: & kysse his eyes ouer with the gal of the fysh that thou hast brought with y. For be sure, that his eyes shall stryght waye be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heauē, & shall reioyce at the sight of y. The dogge that had ben with the in the journey, ranne before, and came as a messenger, & wagged with his taile for gladnesse.

¶ So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne, and stumbled with hys fete, & ga-ue a seruant hys bande, ranne to meete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kysed him, he and his wyfe, ad they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshipped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gall, and anointed his fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, & then beganne the blemph to go out of hys eyes, lyke as it had bene the wynter skynne of an egge: whiche Tobias toke and dyed from hys eyes, and immediatly he receaued hys syght.

¶ The they prayed God, he and his wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of Israel, I geue the praise and thanks, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seue dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole & sounde with al the household and carle, with camels and moche monney of his wyues, and with the monney that he had receaued of Sabelus: and he tolde hys father and his mother al y benefytes, which God had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achior also and Sa-bath Tobias sister sonnes came, & were glad and reioyced with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seue dayes they made me-ry, and were reioyced to full euery chone.

¶ The xli. Chapter.

¶ Upon Tobias rekened vp vnto his father the pleasures that the angell dyd hym. He offered vnto the angell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

sparte from her, he hath bene an occasion of gladnesse to her father & mother: he deliuer-ed me, that I was not deuoured of y fysh, he hath made the to see the light of heauen, per we all haue receaued great good of him.
How shalde we worthe help deliuer these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt deliue hym, yf happily he wyl vouchsafe, to take with hym y halfe of all that we haue brought.

¶ So the father and the sonne called hym, & tolde hym a fynde, and beganne to praye hym, y he wolde be content to take in good worth, the halfe parte of al that they had brought.
Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Wraye pe the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto hym before all men puyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde y kinges secretes, but to shewe to y pray-se the workes of God, it is an honorable thing. Prayer is good with fasting, & mercy is better, then to hoode vp treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth fro death, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde curialling lyfe. But they y do tyme and vncyphercou-nes, are the enemyes of thes awne soule.

¶ Wherefore I tell you the truerth, and will hyde nothyng from you. When thou pray-est with teares, and buryest the deed, and ledest thy dynner, ad hydest the deed in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myght burpe them in the nyght. I offered thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou wilt accept and beloued of God, it was necessary, that tentacyon shalde tye the. And now hath the Lorde sent me to heale the, ad to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the enell spryte. For I am Raphael an Angel one of the seuen that stande before God.

¶ When they hearde thes, they were sore astayed, and trembled, and fell downe vnto theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Angel: Wreke be worthy you, feare not.
Where as I haue bene worthy you, it is the wyll of God: geue praye and thankes vnto hym.

¶ You thought that I dyd care and digne: * See scrib. a he with you, but I vic ment that is multiple, and dygnke that cannot be lene of men.
* Public. int. 2

¶ Now therefore is the tyme that I must turne againe, vnto him that lent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderous workes.

¶ And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken a waye out of theyr syght, so that they sawe hym no more. Then fell they downe flat vpon theyr faces by the space of the houre, and prayed God: when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous work-es.

¶ The xlii. Chapter.

¶ Then

The Booke.

When olde Tobias opened hys mouth and prayed the Lord, & sayd: Great art thou O Lord: for euermore, and thy kyngdome wold withoute ende: for thou scourgest and healest: thou leddest vnto hell, and byngest out agayne, and ther is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thaukes vnto the Lord, ye chyldre of Israel, and prayse hym in the syght of y^e heauen. For amonge the heauen which knowe hym not hath he scattered you, to thynke y^e ye wold haue togeder his maruclous woordes: and cause them to knowe, that there is none other God almyghty but he. He hath chaſtised vs for our iniquities, and for his awne mercy sake shall he saue vs.

Consyde then, howe he hath dealt with you, and prayse him with feare and drede, & magnifye the euellſpynginge hynges in youre woordes. I will prayse him cut in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maruclous vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore O ye synners, and do righteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he will shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we will reioyce in God. O prayse y^e Lord al ye his choyse, holde y^e dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Ierusalem y^e cytie of God, the Lord hath punysshed y^e for the woordes of thine awne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thynges, and geue thaukes to the euellſpynginge God, that he may buyd vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all such as be in captiuitie, ad that thou mayest haue hope for euermore. With a fayne light shalt thou shyne, ad all the endes of the world shall honour the. The people shall come vnto y^e ffeſſe, they shall byngynge yfsted, and worshippe the Lord in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a Sanctuary, for they shall call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blasphem the, shall be condemned: but blessed shall they be that buyde the vp. As for the, thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldre for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all that loue the, and that be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the Lord, O my soule, for the Lord our God hath deliuered his cytie Ierusalem from all her troubles. I will count my self happy, yf my feode remaine to se the cleannes of Ierusalem.

The gates of Ierusalem shall be buyded with Sapphyre and Smaragde, and all the copalle of her walles with pious stones. All her stetes shall be paved with white marble stone, and in all stetes shall Alleluia be longe. Prayse be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talynges.

The .xlii. Chapter.

C Tobias propheseth the destruction of Antioch, his soune returned to Anagel, after the death of his father and mother.

After that Tobias had gotte his sight agayne, he luyed .xlii. yeres, & saue his chylders chyldre. Now when he was .C. and .ii. yeres olde, he dyed: & was buryed honorably in Antioch. For when he was sixe and fiftie yeres of age he lost the sight of his eyes, ad when he was thre score yeres olde, he gat his sight agayne. The residue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increased wel in the fere of God, & departed in peace.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen yonge spryngalder his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Antioch is at hand, for y^e woordes of the Lord canot faile, and our heathen that are scattered out of the lande of Israel, shall come thither agayne. And the whole land of it y^e hath bene wast, shall be fylled: ad the house of God that was bzint in it, shall be buyded agayne: & al such as feare God, shall retorne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their Idols, & come to Ierusalem, and dwell there, and al the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and worshipping the Lord God of Israel.

And therfore my chyldre, heare your father: Serue the Lord in the truenesse, seke after his wil, and do the thynges that please hym. Commaunde your chyldre that they do righte, geue almes, be myndeſul of God, and eue to be thankfull vnto hym in tyneth and with all the y^e power. Heare me now: therfore my chyldren, and abyde not here: but in what daye soener ye haue buryed your mother besyde me, get you from hence. For I se, that the wyckednesse of it shall byngynge to destruction and ende.

After the death of hys mother, Tobias departed awaye fro Antioch, with hys wyfe and chyldren, and with his chylders chyldre, and came agayne to his father ad mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, and was heye vnto al Raguel's goodes, and saue the fiftie generation, and his chylders chyldren. And when he was .cxi. yeres of age, he dyed in the feare of y^e Lord, and his kynfolkes buryed him. And al hys posterite continued in good lyfe, and holy conuersacion: so that they were lauded ad accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the lande.

The booke of Judith.

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ The buyng of Agabathani. The byctes of Nabuchodonosor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are bycted.

Alpharath the kynge of the Medes subdued many people unto his domynion. & buylded a noble brygge cite whyche he called Agabathani. The walles of it made he of free stone, foure squared, feuty cubytes hie, and thyrty cubytes wyde. He made towres there vpon an hundred cubytes hie. But vpon the four corners euery side was twenty foure wyde. He made the portes in þe peryth, lyke as þe towres. This kynge trusted in his myghty host, and in his glorious charrettes.

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians, which raygned in the great cite of Ninne, fought agaynst Arpharat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragau, besyde Euphrates and Tigris, and Jafaton in the felde of Erith the kynge of the Elphes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyft vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the benthen that dwelt in Carmel and Cebat, and to such as dwelt in Galle in the greates felde of Chelion, to all them þe were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the whole lade of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all withone consent wolde not agree vnto him, & sent the messengers agayne empty, and put the awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacion at all those londes, and swore by his throne, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreys.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes in sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the world. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

In the thyrtyenthe yere of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the xii. daye of þe first moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende hym selfe. So he called vnto hym al the elders, all his captaynes, and men of warre, and shewed them his secret counsell, and tolde the that his purpose was to bypne the whole earth vnder his domynion. Now when the wyte all content wyth this sayng, Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes þe chiefe captayne of his warres, & sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the west, and specially agaynst those that haue despised my commaundment. Thou shalt spare no realme, al brygge cyties shalt thou bypne in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes aduersers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twentye thousande fightyng men vpon foote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. At his ordinaunce sent he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoste was well provided for with oxen, ad final cattell, and that without mony. He caused come to be prepared out of all Syria for his host. And the golde and siluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourne, and all his host, with charrettes, horsemen, and archers: of whome there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grechopres.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Arge, which lyen vpon þe lende of Celicia: & so he went vp into al their castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthy cyrie of Holothus, he brake it downe, & spoiled all the chylde of Charris and the Amaleites, which laye towarde the wilderness, and vpon the South syde of the land of Chelion. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hie cyties that were there, from the byrke of Hambe tyll a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in fro Celicia vnto the coastes of Iaphet towarde the South. He carped awaye al the Arabia wytes, and spoiled all the goodes, & whosouer withstode hym, he slew the wyth the swerde. After this he went downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of Haruck, & bynt by all the corne and all the trees, and caused the wytes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fell vpon all them that dwell in the earth.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

¶ Hengas become wyllynge subject to Holofernes; The prayme and crucitie of hym.

So the kynges & wytnes of all cyties and londes sent theyr Embassours: namely, the cyrie of Syria, & Mesopotamia, Siria, Sobal, and Lybia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wyth chaffe toward us: It is better for vs to serue þe great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then þe we shulde dye, and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. All our cyties and possessions, all mountaynes and hilles, all feldes, great & small castell, shepe goates, hoxses, and camels, at our goodes & householders, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it all together. Take our selues also and our chyldren wylle thynne a wone, come vnto vs a peaceable lord, and vse our seruycs at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with hoxsien & great power, and conquered all stronge fenced cyties, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cyties he toke stronge men, and such as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. There came such a feare also vpon those countrees, þe indwellers of all the cyties, the wyntes and rulers, and the people together, wente forth to meete hym as he came, and receaued hym honorably with garlandes and tozels, with daunces, taberces and yppes.

But the more, though they dyd thys, yet myght they not swage hys rgyuous stomack: but he bestrope their cyties, & hewed downe their wyddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commaunded hym, that he shuld rote out all þe Goddes of the lande: to the intent that he only myght be called and taken for God, of the nacions whych Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So went he thorow Syria, Sabal, ad thorow all Assyria, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Iudumans, in the lande of Gaba and Scopolopol, and toke theyr cyties, and remayned there thre wyke dayes, wherein he caused all the whole multitude of hys host to be gathered together.

The .iiii. Chapter.

¶ Israel requesteth helpe of God agaynst Holofernes. They fast and praye.

When the chyldren of Israel þe dwelt in Ierusalem heard thys they were sore afraied of hym. There came such tremblinge also and feare vpon them, that they so muche he shulde do vnto the cytye of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Lord, as he had done to other cyties & their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, & made fast the townes with walles, ad prepared coyne for their agaynst the battail.

Eliachim also the Pryest wrote vnto all thern that dwelt towarde Eldaelon (whych lynth our agayn þe great felde by Dorthaim) and vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shuld take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wher-by there might be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, and that they shulde holde diligently, watch where any skraft was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the pryest of þe Lord had commaunded them. And all the people cryed earnestly, and humbled theyr soules with fastynges and prayers, they and theyr wyues. The Pryest put on hearete clothes, ad laped the poge vnder before the temple of þe Lord, and couered the altar of the Lord with an hearete cloth. And with one accord they cryed vnto þe Lord God of Israel, that theyr chyldren shuld not be geuen into a praye, and theyr wyues into a spoule, that theyr cyties shuld not be laped walle, & that theyr Sanctuary shuld not be vngalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the Pryest of þe Lord wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto the, sayinge: Be ye sure, that þe Lord will heare youre petitions, ye pe contynue steadfast in fastynges & prayers in the sight of the Lord. Remember Holofernes the seruant of the Lord, whych ouerthrewe the Analechites (that trusted in theyr might & power in theyr host, in theyr wyldes, in theyr certtes and hoxsien) nor with weapens, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the cnympes of Israel be, ye pe continue in this wyse, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this cry: hoxtacion they continued in prayer before þe Lord. In so moche þe they which offered burnt sacrificys vnto the Lord, offered the offerynges vnto the Lord, byrnyng araped in hearete clothes ad had as theyr vpo theyr heades. And they all besought God for theyr whole bert, þe he wolde vlyet his people of Israel.

The .v. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Iewes. Achas heuilye wote Holofernes the mercurius of God done vnto the Iewes, for whych thynge the euyls under Holofernes were dynt angry with hym.

Asd woode came to Holofernes the Prync of the warres of the Assyrians that the chyldren of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwixt the mountaynes. Then was he exceedinge wroth, and called all the Prynces of Donb, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and laped vnto them. Tell me what people is thys, that keperth in the mountaynes? What manner of cyties are they? What is their power? What manner of host haue they? Who is theyr Captayne? And why do they deffye vs (more then all those that dwell in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, þe they myght receaue vs with peace? Then Achior the Captayne of all the Ammonites answered, and sayd: Shy, yf it please the to heare heare. I will tell the truth before the, concerning this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and these shall no lye go out of my mouth.

B These people are of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwell first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe þe goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of þe Caldees, and so folowe they the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddes) & worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth: which also commaunded them, þe they shuld go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Howe when there came a dearth into þe whole land, they were downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt foure hundred years, in the which they multiplied so greatly, that their host might not be nombred. And when the king of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued the in buydynge of his cyties with making of claye and bryck, they cryed vnto God they: Lozde, which punished the whole lande of Egypte with diuerse plagues.

C Now when the kynge of Egypte let the go their waye, and the plague ceased, & then followed after them, to take the, & to bringe them againe into his seruaue, while they were flyinge a waye, the God of heale opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and these went thorow the botome of the see drye shod. In the which place were an innumerable people of the Egyptians followed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with þe waters: that there remained not one, to tel them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed thorow the red see, they came into the wilderness of the mount Synai, where neuer man myght dwell afore, & where þe fone of mā had neuer rested. There were the bitter waters made swete for the, that they myght drinke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Wherefore they went without bove and arowe, without bulke or weard: they: God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victorie. No man was able to hurt this people, except it were so, þe they departed vnawaresly from the worshippinge of the Lozde they: God. But as oft as they worshipped any other belyde they: God, he gaue them ouer to be spoiled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusion. Fewer thele, as oft as they were foz for departinge from the worshippinge of they: God, the same God of heale gaue them power and strength to withstande thei enemies.

Whereouer they sette the kynge of þe Canaanites, Jebusites, Iherosites, Ierichites, Enites, and Amozites, and all the myghtye in Iherichon, and take their landes ad cyties in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the sight of they: God it went wel with them, for they: God hateth vnryghteousnesse. For in tymes past when they went out of the waye, which God had geuen the, that they shuld walke in it, they were destroyed in diuerse batayles of many nations: and many of the were caried a waye prisoners vnto a straunge countre. But now latelie they haue turned them selus againe vnto the Lozde they: God, and are come together againe out of the countrees where they were scattered abroad: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwel therein: and as for Ierusalem where they: Sanctuary is, they haue it againe in possession.

And therefore my lozde, make diligent inquisid, of this people haue done wyckednesse in the sight of they: God, then let us go vp agaynst the, for doubtles they: God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But of this people haue not displeased they: God, we shal not be able to withstande them, for they: God shall defende the, and so shall we be aduantage to all the world.

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, al the great men of holoserres were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, & sayde one to another: what is he this, which darre saye, that the chyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge and his host: where as they are an vnderweynde people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therefore maye knowe that he hath discaued vs we will go vp into the mountaynes: & when the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shal be speake with the sword, that al people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without hym.

Achior is committed into the handes of the Iewes by holoserres, where he is kepte, but is loosed of the Iewes. He prayeth for the people. Achior is comforted of the Iewes.

S When they had left of speaking, holoserres toke soze indignacion, and said vnto Achior: for so much as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israel shal be destroyed of they: God, I will shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perishe with them thorow the sword of the Almightie, & all Israel shal be destroyed with the, and then shalt thou seie, that Nabuchodonosor is þe Lozde of the whole earth. Then shall the sword of my myghtynde go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalt fall downe speake amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt shale not come to thy selfe agayne but he directly destroyed with them. But yf thou thinkest thy prosperie to be true, why dost thou then change thy colour? why arte þ afraid? Cynchest thou þ my wordes are not able to be perfolmed? But that thou mayest knowe, þ thou shalt fele these thynges with them, beholde, fro this house forth will I sende the vnto ponder people, that when the punishment of my wordes which they haue woorthely deserved, falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them.

So holofernes commaunded his seruants to take Achioz, & to carpe hym vnto Be-thulia, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldre of Israel. Then holofernes ser-uantes toke him, and wet chozow þ playne fide. But when they dyed nye vnto the mountaynes, the spinge casters came out against them. Keuerthelisse they gat the awaie by the syde of the mountayne, ad bounde Achioz hande and fore to a tree, and so left hym bounde with wythpyes, and turned agayne vnto thei: Lorde.

For withstandinge þ chyldren of Israel went downe fro Bethulia, came vnto hym, lowded him, brought him into Bethulia, set hym in the myddel of the people, and asked him what the matter was, that þ Mirians had left hym bounde.

¶ Dias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Simeon, and Charmin (which is also called Sorboniel) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achioz stode in the myddel of the congregatours, and before them all he tolde them. And answered he ga-ue holofernes, to the thyng that he asked him, and how holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and how holofernes hym selfe was wroth, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achioz also to be put to death with diuerse tormentes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achioz had playnly tolde out all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpo thei faces, prayling the Lorde, and poured out their prayres together vnto the Lorde, with a general complaine and weeping, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauē & of earth, beholde their pride and loke vpon our lowynes, and compose how it standeth with thy lawnetes, and make it to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those which holde them fast by the, ad how that thou vngnedst the lobe, that presume of the felices, and make thei boast in thei awne strength. So when the weeping and prayer of the people (whych they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, thei comforted Achioz, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power and strength thou hast prayed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather le thei: destructi. Whiche the Lorde our God then shall geue his seruantes thy lybertie. God be also with the amide us, that yf it please the, thou with all thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Dias had ended the counsell, he toke him into his house, ad made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers at the night longe in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people requere helpe of God. Thei of Bethulia wolde geue ouer thei cytie for want of water. Thei praye of the people with teares and lamentacion.

¶ The next daye, holofernes commaunded his host to go vp agaynst Bethu-lia. There were an hundred & twenty thoulande fyghtynge men on fote and two and twenty thousande horsemen, beside the the preparynge of the that were donne: and came to them on euery syde out of the coun-treies and cyties whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battail agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hill syde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Bethaim, from the place which is called Selma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth to-warde Edrelon.

Now whē the chyldren of Israel sawe so grent a multitude of the Assyrians, they fel downe flat vpo the ground, strewed ashyes vpon their hedges, and prayed with one accorde, that þ God of Israel wolde shewe his mercy vpo his people, and so they toke thei townes, and sat vberth the mountaynes in the narrow place, and kept the towpe daye and nyght. But whyle holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water spynge, which fro the south syde was conueyed into þ cytie by a cōdyte: this commaunded he to be direct another waye, & to cut their cōdyte in funder. There were welles also not farr from the walles, wherby they wolde secretly more for pleasure then for necessity.

¶ Then wente þ Ammonyres & the Moabytes vnto holofernes, & said: The chyldre of Israel truste neither in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, ad kepe the mountaynes and hillles. That thou mayest ouercome thei therfore without þ cryngynge of any battail, set men to kepe the welles that they haue no water out of the: so shalt thou destroye the without sword, or at þ least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the cytie: whych they cōnye not able to be donne, for so moche as it lieth in the mountaynes.

mountaynes. These wordes pleased holofernes well & all his men of warre, & he sette an hundredth at euery well rounde aboute.

And when they watch had endured twelue dayes, the Elthernes & all that had water, fasted them that dwelt in petye of Bethulpa, so that in y whole cyte they had not drynche pough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came the men and women, pouge per souner ad chyliden all vnto Othas, & sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixt vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assyrians, therefore hath God solde vs in theyr bandes, and there is no mā to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe before theyr eyes I thurst & great destruction. Therefore gather now together all y people that be in the cyte, that we maie allelbe our selues wyllingly vnto y people of holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and pwayne the Lord with our lynes, then to be slayne and perseyde, and to be laughed to scorne and shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues and chyliden dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earthe theys daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers, which punyssheth vs accordyng to y destruction of our lynes, and geue you warning, that ye geue by the cyte now ito y powder of holofernes hood, that oure ende maie be swyte with the swerde, whych cly shall endure longe, for wante of water and for thirst.

When they had spoken out these wordes there was a greute wepping and howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God w one voyce, sayenge: we haue sinned with our fathers, we haue done a myse, we haue dealt wyckedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punyssh our vnyghteousnes with thine a wne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowledg the, vnto a people whych knowe the not, lest they saye among the heathen: where is they? God?

And when they were so werry with this cryenge and wepping, that they helde theyr tungen, Othas rode vp with watrey eyes, and sayde: I take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheate, and let vs wayte yet thes fyue dayes for mercy of the Lord: peraduenture he shall cut awaye hym indignacion, and geue glory vnto hym name. But yf he helpe vs not when thes fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ At the byrth of Iudith, which remoueth the ancliters because they emptye the Lord. She also moueth them to encourage and heren the people, and sheweth hyr counsell agaynst the enemies of the cyte.

And it happened whē thes wordes came to y ears of Iudith a wyddowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, & sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Olin, the sonne of Elap, the sonne of Jammo, the sonne of Je deon, the sonne of Iaphoim, the sonne of Achisob, the sonne of Archia, & sonne of Euan, the sonne of Barhania, the sonne of Sholathel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbād was called Hannales, which dyed in the dayes of the barpe harvest. For whyle he was byndyng the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his head, & he dyed at Bethulia his cytie & there was he buryed by his fathers. Now was Iudith dysolate wyddowe thre yeres and six monethes. And in y her partes of her hause he made her selfe a pryup chambze, where she dwelt, beynge closed in with her maydens. She ware almos of heare, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabba thes, and newe mones and the solempn dayes that y people of Isracell keppe. She was a very saye and betwistful person. Her husbād also had left her greute riches, a plenteuous housholde, great vnnouenable posselions and many carrell. This Iudith was a woman of a very good reperte with euery one, for the feared y Lord greatly, ad there was no body that spake an euell woide of her.

When theys Iudith hearde, how Othas had promysed the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue by the cyte vnto the Assyrians, she sent for the elders Chamby and Charim, and when they came to her, she sayde: what thynge is this, wherin Othas hath consented, that yf God helpe not with in fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer the cyte to the Assyrians? What are ye, that ye tempte the Lord? This deuce optenyeth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercy of y Lord a tyne and apoynte hym a daye after poure wyll?

Acuerthelesse, soz so moch as the Lord is pacif, lett vs rather repent, pouynge out teares, and beseech hym of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, neyther wyl he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyliden of men. And therefore lett vs herely fall downe before hym, and serue hym with a meke spete, and with wepping eyes saye vnto the Lord, that he deale with vs accordyng to hym a wne wyll and mercy: that lyke as oure herte is now bereb, and broughte lowe thowt the pyde of them, it maie so be comforted thowt hyr grace: in so moch as the folowe not the synnes of our fathers, which forsoke the Lord, & worshipped other gods: for the which synne they perished with the sword, were theye & brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely he, for whose sake lett vs tary with me here. He shall requyte and make inquitie for our blood from the veracions of our enemies: he shall bringe downe all the theyghen, that ryse vp agaynst vs, & put them to dishonour, such as the Lord oure God.

Therefore heare brethren, seynge ye are honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respecte, ad vpon whom the lpe of the people standeth, lpe vpon their brethren with poure exhortacyon, that they may call to remembraunce, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, if they wold thyppe the Lord.

¶ Gen. xii. 10

¶ oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and trespethow many tribulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beinge trespethow many troubles, were founde to stand in faith. Agayne, they that reuened not theye tribulacions with the feare of God, but put the selues forth with vnpatience and murmuringe agaynst God, perished in the destreper, and were layne of cruell hand. Therefore shuld not we vnderstande our vengeance, for the wyng that is done vnto vs, but to consider, that all these punishments are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdoes. Beleiue also that thys correccion cometh vnto vs (as to the seruantes of God) for amendement, and not for oure destruction.

¶ Then sayde Moses & the elders vnto Judith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therefore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judith sayd vnto them: Seynge ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell & deuite, if it be of God: I beseeche God, that he will byynge my counsell to good ende.

¶ Thus haue I deuyled: ye shall haue this nyght before the porte, and I will go forth with Abime my mayden. Praye ye therefore vnto God, that he will graciously remembre his people of Israel within fewe dayes, as ye haue sayd. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, as he ye no questyon of it, tply I open it vnto you my self: do ye nothing els but praye vnto the Lord poure God for me. Then Moses the prince of the people of Iuda sayde vnto her: So thy praye in peace the Lord be with the, that we maye be auged of our enemies. And so they wete from her agayne.

The .ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Judith for the victory.

¶ When they were gone the praye, Judith wente into his closet, put on an hearme smock, drawed aches vpon his head, fell downe before the Lord, & cried vnto hym, sayng, O Lord God of my father * Since, which gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemies, & vied vpon eace and wylfulness, and that rauished & vyrgins & put her to dishonesty. Thou & gauest theye wyues into a praye, and theye daughters to captiuitie, ad all theye praye for a spolie vnto the seruantes, which bare a zeile vnto & helpe me wyddow, O Lord my God, I beseeche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnyng, and loke what thou hast taken in hand ad deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done i thy euery thyng for knowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirians, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the host of the Egyptians, when theye begyn weariet, persecuted the seruantes, and put theye trust i theye charrettes, hoysmen, & in the multitude of theye men of warre. But thou lokest vpon the host, castynge a thyell darkness before the: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

¶ Gen. xii. 10

¶ Euen so Lord, lett it go with these, that trust in the power & multitude of theye me of warre in theye charrettes, arrowes & speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art oure God, which destruction warres fed & begynnyng, and that thou art the Lord. I lift vpon thine arme now, lyke as euer from & begynnyng, and i thy power byynge theye power to naught, cause theye myght to fall in thy wrath. They make theye boast, & they will vnhalowe and despoile thy Sanctuary, and to wayte the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the hoys of thine altar w theye swerde, wight to passe. O Lord, that the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne swerde, that he maye be take with the snare of hye eyes in me, and that I mayest smyte hi with & lpyppes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him ad hye strength, & that I maye destruction hym.

¶ Thys shall byynge thy name an euery thyng remembraunce, of the hande of a woman ouerthowen hym. For thy power, O Lord, shal be not in & power of men, neyther shall & any pleasure i the strenght of hoysen. There was neuer proude personne & pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hart thy pleasure bene euermore.

¶ Thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lord of all creatures, beate heare me poore woman, calling vpon the, & putting my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lord, and mynister woꝝdys in my mouth, and stablysh this deuice in my hert, that thy house maye charyne still in holynes, and that all the hepten maye knowe, that thou art God, ad that there is none other but thou.

C The .x. Chapter.

¶ Iudith beareth her selfe to go to Holocernes. The deuyng that the eldres gaue Iudith. Holocernes is an towne with Iudith.

Ad when he had left of crying vnto the Lord, he rose vp from the place, where he had lye flat betwixt the Lord, & called her mayden, & went downe into her house. Laped the heare of cloth from her, put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhede, washed her body, anointed her selfe with precious thinges, of sweete sauoure, brayded and platted her heare, sett an houee vpon hir heade, and put on soche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon hir fete, armettes, spages, earynges, fpynger rynges, ad decked her selfe with all hir best arraye.

The Lord gaue her also a speecall betwixt ad sayng this: for all this deckyng of hyr selfe was not done for eny voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesch, but of a ryght dyscrecion and vertue, therfore vnd the Lord increaseth hir betwixt so that she was exceeding amiable and well sauoured in all meyes eyes. She gaue hyr mayde also a botell of wyne, a pot with ople, pottage, cake bryed & chese, and wente hir waye.

Now when she came to the porte of the cite, the soide Othias and the eldres of the cite waight there. Which whā they sawe her, they were astonied, & marueled greatly at her betwixt. Neuer thelesse, they asked no questyon at her, but let her go, saying: The God of oure fathers geue the his grace, and with his power perforce all the deuce of thy herte: that Ierusalem maye recioyfe our the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made hir prayer vnto the Lord, and wente oute at the porte, she and hir mayde.

And as the was goyng downe the mountayne, it happened that a bouthe the spynges of the dape, the spynges of the Altrians met with her, and toke her, saying: whence comest thou? Whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the Iehyues, ad am fled fro the, for I knowe, & they shall be geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thoughtleslye toyled the selues vnto you that they might fynde mercy i your sight. Therfore, haue I deuyled by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the prince Holocernes, and tell hym all the secrettes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them and wyne them, so that not one ma of hyr booke shall perishe.

And when these me had hearde hir woꝝdes, and considered hir saye, they were astonied: for they wondred at hir excellēt betwixt. & sayd vnto her: thou hast saued thy lyfe by spynding out this deuce, & thou woldest come downe to oure loyde: and be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shalt please hym at the herte. So they brought her into Holocernes paupion, and tolde hym of her. Now when she came in before hym, immediately the was ouercome ad taken with hir betwixt. He sayd his seruantes: who wolde despyse & people of the Iemes, that haue so saye wem? Shuld we not by reason fyght agaynst the for the? So when Iudith sawe Holocernes spynging in a canapp, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, & maragbe and precious stones, she looked fast vpon hi, & fell downe vpon & earth. And Holocernes seruantes toke her by agayne, at their loydes commaundement.

C The .xi. Chapter.

¶ Holocernes requesteth of Iudith the cause of her coming, which geueth him a subtil answer.

Then sayd Holocernes vnto her: Be of good chere, & feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte mā, & wolde serue Nabuchodonosor & kinge. As for thy people, they they had not despyled me, I wolde not haue lyft by my speare agaynst &. But tell me now, what is the cause that & art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: & p, vnderstande & woꝝdes of thy handmayden: for yf & wylt do after the woꝝdes of thy handmayden, the Lord shall bryng thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a loyde of the lande Ieruch, and as truly as his power Ieruch, which is in & to the punishment of all men that go wydg, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thow the, but also the Ieruch also of & self. For all people speake of thy vnderact & upre, and it hath euer bene reported, how & onely art good & myghtie in all thy kyngdome, & thy dyscrecion is commended in all lades. The this is manifest also, & Achioz spake, & it is wel knowne, what & commaunded to do vnto him, for this is playne & of a suretye, & our God is to woꝝch vs (by & reason of our synnes) & he hath wroth by hyr prophets vnto & people, how & for: their synnes he will deliuer the ouer vnto & enemye. And for so much as & child of Ierach knowd it that we that they haue so displeased the? God, they are soe afrayed of the.

They suffer greate hunger also, and for wante of water, they are ded now in a manner. Whereouer, they are appoynted to slape all the? castell, that they maye dyneke the bloude of them, and are purposed to spende all the holy ornaments of their God, (which

E be hath forbydden them to touch) for coine, wyne and oyle. Sleepeing now, that they do these thynges it is a playne case that they must needs be destroyed. Which wile I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, and the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thynges. For I thy handmayden doo thyppre God euen here now helpde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, so he shall trill me, when he will rewarde them they synne, then shall I come and thewe the and bypunge the thyow to the myddell of Ierusalem so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as y thepe without a thepeherde: three shall not so much as one dogg barch agais the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouidence of God: and for so much as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to be the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes & all his seruantes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that y mayest geue the to our habes. And for so much as thy prayme is good, yf thy God performe it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the court of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

C The .xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well treated. She desired hym to go out in the night season to praye, and staynerd it. Hagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes a biche, and, and her summe. Holofernes is drunken.

And when commaunded he her to go forth. Hee his treasure laye, and charged that the shulde haue her dwellinge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (I self displease my God) but will eat of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as thou lyest my lord, thy handmayden shall not spende all this, yll God haue brought to passe in my hand, the thynges that I haue deuyed.

So hys seruantes brought her into the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as the was goynge in, the deuyed that the myght haue leue to go forth by night & before daye to her praye, and to make interestid vnto the Lord. Then commaunded Holofernes his Chamberlaynes, that the shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those three dayes.

And so in the myght season the wete forth into y valley of Bethulia, and walshed her selfe in the well water. Then wente the vp, and besought the Lord God of Israel that he wolde prospere her waye, for the deluyraunce of hys people. And so the wente in, & remayned cleue in her tent, tyll the toke her meate in the eueninge.

Vpon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruantes, and sayde vnto Hagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and counsell thy he-brother, that the maye be willing to content to kepe company with me. For if there a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde so laugh a ma to scorne that the were come from hym vnnedled with all.

Then wente Hagao vnto Judith, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afeared, to come to my lord, that the maye be honoured before hym, that the maye eate and dyneke wyne, and be mery with hym. Vnto whom Judith answered: All ho am I, that I shulde saye my lordes name? What soeuer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thynke well done, as long as I lyue.

So the rode vp, and deckt her self with her apparell, and wente in, and rode before him. And Holofernes her te was whole maged, so that he bent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: Dike now and syte downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde sauoure before me. Then layde Judith: Say, I will dyneke, for my mynde is mery to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And the toke, and dyde eate, and drank before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dyke more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in hys lyfe.

C The .xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes sleapeth for hys dynekinge, and Judith cutteth off his heade, and geueth it with to her awne people of whom she is rescued with hope. Her geue thence vnto ison, for they deluyraunce. Judith prayeth vnto wholy which meruaild at her state do, fit to Holofernes.

And wile it was late in the myght, hys seruantes made haste euery man to hys lodgige. And Hagao the chamber doer, and went hys

his waie, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for holocernes he laye vpon the bed all drunken, & of deep dronkenesse fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stāde without before the doore, & to waite. And Judith stode before the bedd, makinge her prayer with teares, and moued her lippes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the woordes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vpon thy cytie of Ierusalem, lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I may performe þ this, which I haue dryed þ to the deliuer that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedchamber, and took the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she the hold of the heareye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre, and with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the neck, and smote of hys head. Then toke she the cannapp a waie, and rolled the dead body alyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and deliuered the head of holocernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And to these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the hooft, and came thowto the valley vnto the porte of the cytie. And Judith cryed a fauce of vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Ope the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they heard her voyce, they called the elders of the cytie together. And they came al to mete her, lyke and greete, yonge & olde, for they thought not that she shuld haue come to loone. So they lighted candels, and gathered aboute her euery chone: but she wente vp in to an hye place, and caused silence to be proclaimed.

When euery man now helde hys tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despyed, nor forsaken them, that put theyr trust in hym, & in me his handmaide he hath performed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: pe in my hande this same nyght hath he slayne þ enemy of hys people.

And with that she toke forth the head of holocernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, sayinge: Beholde the heade of holocernes the captayne of the Assyrians, & this is the cannapp, wherein he laye in his dronkenesse: where the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth, his Angell hath kepte me, goyng thether, & cominge thence, & compynge by the waye from thence. And the Lord hath not suffered me to be handmaide to be despyed, but without anye feithfulness of synne hath he brought me againe vnto you: & that wth greate victory, for I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euery chone, for he has gracio and hys mercy indureth for euer.

So they prayed the Lord altogether, & gaue thankes vnto hi. And to her they sayd: The Lord hath blessed the in hys power, for thow to the he hath brought our enemies to naught. And thus the chiefe ruler of þ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art þ of the Lord the hye God, above all women vpon earth.

Blessed be þ Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, which hath gyded þ a ryght to wolde and to smyte of the head of þ Captayne of oure enemies. For this daie he hath made thy name to honorable, thy praye shall neuer come oute of þ mouth of synners, which that all waie remembre the power of the Lord, seige: thou hast not spared thyne awne self, but put the incompard, considering the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped theyr fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whō þ gauest victorys, þe wolde be auge of his enemies, eue he hath thys nyght thow to my had smitten of þ head of all the vnfaithfull. And that þ mayest se þ it so is, beholde this is þ head of holocernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despyed þ God of the people of Israel, and threatened the w destruction, saying: whē þ people of Israel is taken, I shall cause þ also to be spelyte with the swerde. When Achior sawe holocernes head, he fell downe vpon his face to y ground for very anguysh & feare, so he toweyned w all. But after þ he was come agayne to himself, he fell downe before her, and prayed her saying: Blessed art thou of the God in all þ tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

¶ The council of Judith. Achior byng an heathen, cometh to God. & the Assyrians are stricken with the sword.

Judith sayd vnto all the people: Be ye then, heare me. Stepe by this brade vpon our walles, and when þ shine anye synners, take euery man hys weape, and fall out violently: not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to reuenge vpon them, with violence. When the spyres in the tentes of this, they shall of necessity be compelled to fle backward, and to cāple vpon theyr captayne to the battail. So whē the captaynes come into holocernes paupyr, wdd iii and and fynde the deere bodye to appoynted þe bloud, fearfulness shall fall vpon them: and whē ye perceaue that they slepe, folowe the without all care: for God shall helpe the vnto pou to be destroyed.

Then Achioz leigne the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, full of freyn bys deathtous belefe, and put his trust in God, and let hym selfe be crucified: and so was he nombred among þe people of Israel, he and al his posterite vnto thys daye.

Now as loone as it was daye, they sticht vp holofornes head vpon the walles, and euery man toke hys weapen, & so they wente out with an horrible cry. Whē the spyed sawe that, they ranne vnto holofornes feet. And they that were within the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate rushig to wake hym vp, because they thought with the nople to haue raptid him. For ther durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go ino open.

But when the captaynes and wyrces and all the chefe in the hyng of the Assyrians hook came together, they sayde vnto the Chamberlaynes. Go poure waye in, ad wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of thyr holes, and darre prouoke vs vnto batayll.

Then wente Magao into hys chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Iudith.

But whē he had hekedned perfectly with hys cares, and could be perceane no sterynge, he wente nper to the bed, and lyft it vp, and the sawe þe deere bodye of holofornes lyge there with oute a head, belted in his bloud vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and with weeping rent hys clothes, and wente inco Iudiths tent, and found her nst: And so he cleante out vnto the people & sayd: one woman of þe Jewes, hath broughte all this chadonofoss people to shame. For lo, holofornes lperth vpon the ground and hath no head.

When þe chefe of the Assyrians hook herd that, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and trembyng vpon them, so þe thyr myndes were soze afrayed, And there was an excedding greate crye in the whole hook.

C The. xlv. Chapter.

¶ The songs of the Assyrians. The consule of Israel after thyr. Israel becometh crye, by the consule of the Assyrians. Iudith is prapied of Joachim and of the people.

Now when all þe hook herde þe holofornes was headed, their mynde & counsell fell from them: and soch a feare came vps them, that they vnderooke to defende them selues by fleig a waye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr beades, lest all behynd them, and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they herde, that they were haling to come after with theyr weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the felers, & shorow all the fore partes of the dalcs.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them and wente downe with trompettes, blowyng and makinge a greate crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordie, & kept not the selues together, but fled theyr waye seuertheles, the chyldren of Israel fell vps them with one company and ordie, and discomfeted as many as they myght get. And Dias sent messagers vnto all the cyties and countrees of Israel.

So all the rygions and euery cytpe sent out theyr best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to þe vttemost parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and toke all þe theyr which were fled had left behynd them, and so they founde greate good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from þe batayll, roke with them soch thynges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombze of the catell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hest, they were all made ryche of the peoples of them. And Joachim the hye prestre at Ierusalem, came to Bethulya with all the elders, that they myght se Iudith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to praye her with one voyce, sayinge: thou wozt wyppre of the cytpe of Ierusalem, thou tope of Israel, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast donemany, & thy herte is comforted, because thou hast loued cleynnes and chastyte, ad hast knowne no man but thyne awne bulbad: therfore hath the hande of the Lord comforted the, & blessed shalt þe be for ever. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In theyr dayes could the people of Israel scarce gather vp the peoples of þe Assyrians. But all that beloged vnto holofornes, and had bene hys, specially toberher it were of gold, of syluer, precious stones, clothynge, and all ornamente, theyr gaue it vn to Iudith. And al the people cryed, both Iemen, mapdens, and yonge people, with yppes and herpes.

C The. xlv. Chapter.

¶ The songs of Iudith for the victory. After the victorie obtained, the people cometh to Ierusalem, to woztshipp and praye to God.

Then

A Then longe Iudith thys longe vnto þe Lozde. Begynne vnto the Lozde vpon the tabernacles, syng vnto the Lozde vpon the cymballes. O syng vnto hym a new songe of thanksgynges, be tofull & call vpon hys name. It is the Lozde that destroyeth warres, euen the Lozde is hys name. Which hath pitched hys tentes in the myddes of hys people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hand of all oure enemies. Thus came out of the mountaynes of the North in the multitude of hys strength, his people stopped the water brokes, and theyr hostes couered the valleyes. He purposed to haue bent by my lande, and to slaye my people with the swerde.

He wolde haue carped a waye my chyldre and begynne into captiuite, but þe almyghty Lozde hyndred hym, and deliuered hym into the habdes of a woman, which brought hym to confusion. For theyr myghte was not destroyed of the ponge men. It was not the sonne of Man that slew hym, neither haue the grete gyauantes let them selues agaynst hi: but Iudith þe daughter of Merari with her saye bewyre hath discomfited hym, and brought hym to naught. For she layed a waye her wyddowes garment, and put on the apparel of gladnesse to the reioyng of the chyldre of Israel. She anointed her face, and bounde by her heare in an hooue, to begyle hi. her syllynes rauished his eyes, her bewyre captiuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of hys neck. The þersians were astonied at her stedfastnes and the Arabes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my simple appeared, wyse of thyng. The sones of the daughters haue feared the thowde and slayne them as fugyue chyldren: theyr perished in the battayl, for the very feare of the Lozde my God. Let vs syng a songe of thanksgynges vnto the Lozde, a new songe of prayse to all we syng vnto oure God. Lozde, Lozde, thou arte a great God, myghty in power, whome no man may ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the: for thou spakest but the woerde, and they were made: thou sentest thy spyrte, and they were created, and no man can withstande thy voce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundations with the waters, the stonpe rocks shall melt before the lyke warre. But theyr feare the: shalbe grete with the iall thynnes. Alas vnto þe people that ryse vp agaynst my generacion, for the almyghty Lozde will auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyl be vper them. For he shall geue fyre and wormes into theyr flesh, that theyr may burne and sele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victory, all the people came to Ierusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the Lozde. And when they were purposed, they offered all theyr bent sacrefyses and theyr purposed offerynges. And Iudith offered all holofernes weapens, and all þe Jewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canopy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them by vnto the Lozde. The people was tofull, as the yle is: and this tope by reason of the victory with Iudith, endured the monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man wente home agayne, and Iudith was a grete reputation at Bethulia, and enyght honoably taken in all the lãd of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was that she toped, so that after her husbände Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hys solempne dayes she wente out with grete woorthynesse. She dwelt in her wyddowes house an hundred and fyue yere, & left her handmayden fete, and dyed, and was buryed by her husbãde in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solemply holden, and reuered of þe Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euertence, vnto thys daye.

The dyeme of Harbocheus.

A Harbocheus þ sonne of Jair, the sonne of Seruiet, þ sonne of Cle-let of the trybe of Seriamun, a Iewe: which had his dwellyng in the ctyte of Sulis, a man of greate reputacyon, and excellent amige al them that were in the kynges court. (Meuer theles, he was one of the priefers, who Rabuchodonozor þ kyng of Babilon had caried a waye from Ierusalem vnto Babilon with Zechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of great Artaxerxes in the fyfth daye of the moneth Vi-san, had this Harbocheus such a dreame: he thought he herde a greate tempest, horrible thönderclaypes, earthquake & greate vpyrouce in the lād, and that he sawe two greate dragons, ready to fyghte one agaynst another.
They cryed was greate. At the which roaryng and crye al heathen were vp, to fyghte agaynst the ryghteous people. And þ same daye was full of darcknes and very vncle-are, full of trouble and anguyshe, pec a greate fearefulness was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuyled ouer them, and were at a poynte w them selues to dye.
So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were ceping, þ lytle well grewe to a greate ruiuer and into many waters. And with þ it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne.
And the lowly were exalted, and denoured the glorious and proude.

Now when Harbocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, & mused ffeadfully in his heart, what God wolde do: ad so he delyed to knowe all the matter, & his mynde was threupon vncill the nyght.

The. xii. Chapter.

Harbocheus delyeth the tresson deuyled agaynst the kyng, and is therfor rewarded of hym.

At the same tyme dwelt Harbocheus with Bagatha and Tares in the kynges court the kynges Chamberlay-nes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde they deuice, & had dyligently considered they pynaginations, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to lape they cruell handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes and so be certified the kyng therof. Then caused the kyng to examen the two gelded wyth tormentes, And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the king caused to be put in þ Cra-nyeles for an enclaspynge remembrance, & Harbocheus wrote vp þ same matter. So the kyng commanded that Harbocheus shulde remaine in the court, and for this faythfulness of his, he gaue him a reward.
But Aman þ sonne of Amadath the Agagle, which was holden in greate honoure & se good will, trust, & faythfulness hath oft bene shewed and proued (which was also þ ppyncipall and next vnto the kyng). And by name: which certyfied vs, how that i all lades there was scatred aboide a rebellyous folke, that made statutes & lawes agaynst all other people, ad haue all waye deuyled the proclaimed commundementes of kynges: ad how that for this cause it were not to be suffred, that such rule shulde contynue by you and not to be put downe. Seynge: now we perceaued the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, bringe strange and other maner of lawes, & withstande oure statutes and doynges, ad go about to stablisch theiweid matters, that oure kingdome shuld neuer come to good estate, and ffeadfulness: Therefore haue we commaunded, that all they þ are appointed in wytyng and shewed vnto you by Ama (which is ordeyned and sett ouer all oure landes) and the most ppyncipall next vnto the kyng, and in maner as a father (shall with they wyues and chyldren be destroyed and myes and a pueraries: and that there shalbe no mercy the woe, and no man spared. And thus shalbe done the. xiii. dayes of ymoneth (called Adar) of this yere, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye wpyth violence be thrust downe into the hel, to p'fect that after this maner, oure empire maye haue peace and tranquillite.

D But Ardabechus thought vpon all the woekes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer vnto him, saying: O Lord Lorde, thou valeant and almyghtie kynge (for all thynges are in thy power,) and yf thou wilt helpe & deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstande ner lett p' for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderfull thinge to cur is vnder the heau: thou art Lord of all thynges, and there is no man that can resist thy maiestie (O Lord) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, yf it was nerther of malice, ner p'psumptiō, ner for enuyl of gloze, yf I wolde not bowe downe my selfe ner woorthyp p'pound p'psumptuous Amā (for I wolde haue bene content, & that with good will, yf it myght haue done Israel any good, to haue kepte his foete steps) but that I ypd it, because I wolde not lett the honour of a man in the shade of the gloze of God, and because I wolde woorthyp none but onely ymp Lorde. And thus haue I done in no wyse ner p'psumption.

E And therefore O Lorde thou God & kynge, haue mercy vpo thy people for they p'magine how they maye bepyge vs to naught, yee they minde and desire is to destrope and to ouertrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thine cheristid of olde. O despyse not thy pozeid, which thou hast deliuered & brought oute of Egypte for thine owne selfe. heare my prayer, and be mercifull vnto thy people, whom y' haue chosen for an heretage vnto thy selfe. Turne oure complainte and let come into ioye, y' we maye praye O Lord, and praye thy name. O Lord, suffre not y' mouthes of the that praye the, to be destrope. All the people of Israel in lyke maner cryed as earnestly as they coude vnto the Lorde, for they death and destruction lode befoze they eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of hie and her people.

A Gene Esther also bepyng in the battayl of death, resorted vnto the Lorde, layed awaye her glorious apparell, and put on the garments that serued for spghte and moueyng. In the shade of p'cions oymment, she scattered allwes and donge vpo her head: and as for her body, she humbled it wpyth fastyng, and brought it very lowe. All p' places where she was wont to haue ioye afoze, those tyled she wpyth heare, & the plucte of her selfe. She prayd also vnto the Lorde God of Israel wpyth these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate woman, whych haue no helper but the, for my misery and destruction is harde at my bade. fro my youth up I haue herde oure of y' lyndred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonge all people (so haue oure fathers of their foze elders) y' they shoulde be thy perpetual inheritaunce, and loke what thou dost promise the, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Now Lorde, we haue sinned befoze the, therefore hast thou giuen vs into the handes of oure enemyes, because we woorthypped they goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous. Acuerthys is satisfier them not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuite and oppresed amonge them, but thou hast layed they handes vpon the handes of they goddes: so that they begynne to take a daye, y' theyng that thou with thy mouth hast ordeined and appoynted, to destrope thine inheritaunce, to what and to stoppe y' mouthes of the that praye the, to quench the gloze y' woorthyp of thy house and thine aulter, and to open y' mouthes of the heathen, y' they maye playe the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleshy kynge for euer.

O Lord, geue not thy keeper vnto them that be nothing, lest they laugh vs to scozne in oure mysery a fall: but turne they deatē vpo them selues, and punish him, that hath begone the same ouer vs, and set him to an example. Turne vpon vs O Lorde, and shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distress and of oure trouble. Strengthen me O thou kynge of Goddes, thou Lord of all power, geue me an eloquent & pleasant speech in my mouth befoze the Lōn. Turne thys hert into y' hate of oure enemye, to destrope him, and all such as consēt vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me thy hand maye, which haue no defence ner helper but onely the Lorde, thou knowest all thynges, y' wotest that I loue not the gloze and woorthyp of the vnyghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcised and of all heathen.

Thou knowest my necessity, that I hate the token of my p'ccinence and woorthyp, which I beare vpon my head, what time as I must shew my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloy, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I tye hande maye haue not caten at. And as terrible, and that I haue had no pleasure nor de-

Uther's Chapter

¶ Bartholomew moveth Heller, to go into the kinge, and make intercession for her people, and the persons with her request.

MArдохеus also had hysse go in vnto the kyng, and praye for hye people and for hye countre. Remember (sayeth he) dayes of thy loue elste, how thou wast nasyth vnder my hande: For I man which is next vnto the kyng hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lorde, and speake for vs vnto the kyng, and deliuer vs from death. And vpon þe thyrd daye it happened, that hysse layd awaie the mountinges garments, and put on her glayous apparell, & decked her selfe goodly / after þe he had called vpon God, which is þe beholder and Shewour of all thynges / toke two maydes with her: wpo the one she leanned her selfe, as one þe was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her beuure. The thyne of her beuure made her face rose col-red. The similitude of her face was chearful and amiable, but her herte was sorrowfull for greate feare. She wete in thowald all the doores, and Lode before the kyng. The kyng satt vpon the throne of hye kyngdome, and was clothed in his goodly aray, all of golde and set with pious stones, & he was very terrible. He lyft vppys face, that shone in p clearenes, and looked grimly wpo her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and fawnt, leanned her selfe wpo the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

vnto her: helpe, what is the matter? I am

The .xvi. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Brihaxartes, whereby he reuoceth those which he spylt sent forth.

The greate kynge Artaxages, which raigned first in India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred y. xxvi. landes, sendeth vnto the Wyrces and rulers of the same landes, such an loue him, hys frendly salutation. There be many for the sondepeyked wyrces and benefites which are diuersly done vnto the for theyr woorthynesse, be euery the more yownde and mynished, and undertake not only to hurte our subiectes, for plentifull benefites maye theyr not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thing agaynst those that do them good, & take not only all vnthankfulness awaye from men, but in yppre and presumption (as they that be vnmynedfull and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, which (iudgement) hateth the pynnysheth all vprydenes. It happeneth also, that they which be set in office by hys power, and vnto whom the bulwerkes and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, done yownde, and defyle them selues wth weddyng of innocent bloude, which hzyngeth them to intollerable hurte. All which al with falsse & defecatfull wordes and with lying tales, deface and betraie the innocent goodnes of Wyrces.

Now is it profitable and good, that we 25 take heede, make leaue therat, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of old: but the shamefull vnwisdomē, & noysome thinges, that the debitors haue now taken in hande before oure eyes, and thereby to beware in tyme to come. & we inapre make the thyng done quyet and peaceable for all men, and that we myght some tyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thyng that now is present before oure eyes, to wrythlede it, and to put it downe, after the moost seemly manner.

What tyme now as I man the sonne of Amadrius þe paccioniou (a stranger) ve-rely of the piershis bloude, and farr fro oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleuout, and had opayned the frendship that he beate towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hye ho-noure of euery man, as the next and principall vnto the kyng, he coulde not for believe hym selfe froin þys pryue, hath unbertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

With manyfolde disceate also hath he desired to destroe Mardocheus oure helper & preseruer.

The booke of wyldome,

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ How we ought to searcke and enquire after God, & who be those that fynde hym. Of the help good, we ought to liue from backbitenge & murmuring, &c.

¶ Sweet poure affectiō vnto ryght & reuousness, ye that be iudges of the earth. haue a good opinion of the Loide, and seke hym in þe synglenesse of herte. for he wil be founde of them þe tempter him not, & appeereth vnto such as put their trust in him. As for forwarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertu (yf it be allowed) reformeth the vntuylle. And wher wyldome shall not entre into aforwarde soule, ne dwell in the body that is inbouded vnto synne. for þe ho-ly goost abhorreth fapned nourse, & with-standeth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstanding: and where wy-chednes hath the vpper habde, he flyeth from thence. for the sperte of wyldome is louynge, gētic and gracious, & will haue no plea-sure in hym that speaketh euell with hyt typpes. for God is a wyrticelle of hys repen-ces, a true searcher out of hys herte, and an hearer of hys tōge. for the sperte of þe Loide fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: & the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hath knowledg also of the vopce.

¶ Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hydd, neither maye he escape the iudgement of reproc. And wher in-quisicion shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the report of hys wo:des shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shall be punished. for þe care of gelously be-areth all thynges, and the hope of the dead-ginges shall not be hydd. Therefore, beware of murmuring, which is nothyng worth, and refrayne poure tonge from sleaumber. for there is no worde so darth and secrete, þe it shall goo for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

¶ Seke not poure adue death in the error of your lyfe, destroie not your selues for the wo:kes of poure adue habes. for God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyvinge. for he created all thynges, that they myght haue their beinge: see all the people of the earth hath he made þe they shuld haue health that there shulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vnto earth (for righteousnesse is euylusting and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse byn-gerth drach.) Acuerbelic the vngodly call her preserue, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innoctt better the lyke parta-ker of oure kyngdome, with all her people. for his mynde was (when he had taken the oute of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate þe kyngdome of the Iherusians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accursed of the wiche, that they might be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes: and that they be the children of the most hye spuryng God, by whom the kyngdome of vs & oure progenitours hath bene well ordeyded hitherto. Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundmentes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effect: for he that sett them vp and inuenced the, hagerth at Sulis befoze the porte, with all his kynred, & God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after hys deservynge.

¶ And vnto this ye shall publish and let vp the copy of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye seely and without hinderaunce holde their selues after thei: a tōne statutes, and that they maye be helpe, and that vpon the xii. daie of the xii. moneth. And, they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of thei: angust and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. for the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to lope the daie, where in the chosen people shulde haue perished.

¶ Moreover, amonge the hye solēne dayes ye haue, ye shall holde this daie also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come this daie maye be a remembraunce to good, for all such as loue þe prosperite of the Iherusians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

¶ All cityes & landes that do not this, shall hoitely perishe and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomage inhabited of men, but be abhoyred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

her vnto them both with wordes & woordes: and wylie they thynke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte, are worthy of deathe.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

¶ The ymaginacions and desires of the wycked, and theyr counsell agaynst the sayntull.

¶ The vngodly talke and ymagin tion amonge them selues (but not right): ¶ The tyme of oure lyfe is but shote and trespous: and when a man is once gone, he hath no more tope ne pleasure, neither knowe we any mā that turn eth agayne from deathe: for we are borne of naught, and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. ¶ For oure lyfe is as a smoke in oure nosegayle, and the woordes as a sparke to moue oure herte. As for oure bo dy, it shall be very ashyes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanishe as the lost nyte.
¶ Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a clove, and come to naught as the mist that is dynt awaye with þe beames of the sonne, and put downe with þe heate theroof.
¶ Oure name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle, and no man shall haue oure woordes in remembrance.

¶ For oure tyme is a very shadow þe passeth awaye, & after oure ende there is no returnyng, for it is fast fained, so that no man can come agayne. Come on therefore, let vs en ioye the pleasures that ther are, and lett vs soone vie the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs spill oure selues with good wyne & opor tunitie, and lett there be no houre of the tyme go by vs. Let vs conuene oure selues with roses afore they be withered. Let there be no say re meadowe, but oure lust go thorow it. Lett euery one of you be partaker of oure volup tuousnes. Let vs take some toke of oure plea sure in euery place, for that is oure porcion, els we be nothinge. Lett vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs not spare the wyd dows nor vnde mā: let vs not regarde the bea des that are gray for age. Let þe lawe of vn ryghteousnesse be our auctorite, for þyng that is feble is nothinge worthy. ¶ Therefore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and whyppe he is not for oure piety, yee he is cleane contrary to oure dopynge. ¶ He checketh vs for offer yng agaynst þe lawe, and sleaeth vs as rebellours of all murther. He maketh his boast to haue the knowledge of God, yee he callyeth him self Goddes sonne. He is the be trayer of our thoughtes. ¶ It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne personnes, he with draweth hym selfe from oure wayes as fro filythynes: he commeth greatly the latter ende of the last, and maketh his boast that God is his father. Lett vs then yf his wo des be true, lett vs proue what shall come vpon hym: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. ¶ For yf he be þe true sonne of God he will receaue him, and deliuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes. Lett vs crauen hym with despyrfull rebuke and to men tyng, that we... we knowe his dignite, ad proue hys patience. Lett vs condemne hym with the most shameful deathe: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Such thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go astraye, for thei wone wyckednes hath bynded them. As for the myseries of God, they vnderstande the not: they neither hope for the reward of ryghteousnesse, nee regarde þe worship that holy soules shall ha ue. ¶ For God created mā to be vnderstode, yee after þe ymage of hys owne lyche made he hi. ¶ Neuertheless thowout cunye of the deuill came deatch in to the world: and they that holde of hys lyche, do as he doth.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The construction and assurance of þe ryghteous.
¶ The reward of the sayntull.

¶ All the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of deathe shall not touch the. In the syght of þe vntowle they appeared to dye, and they: ende is taken for very de struction. ¶ The waye of the righteous is iud ged to be vnto destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is there hope full of immortalltye.
¶ They are punished but in fewe thynges, nee uertheless in many thynges that they be well rewarded. ¶ For God prometh them, and fyn deth them mere for him selfe: yee as þe golde in the fornaue doth he trye them, and reea ueth the as a vnto offeringe, and when the tyme cometh, they shall be looked vpon.

The ryghteous shall vyne as þe sparke that renne thorow the red busse. ¶ They shall iudge the nacyns, and haue dominion ouer the people, and they: Lord shall raygne for euer. ¶ They that put they: trust in him, shall vnderstande the trueth, and soch as be fap full, will agree vnto him in loue: for his cho sen shall haue gyfte and peace. But the vn godly shall be punished accordyng to they:
owne ymaginacions, for they haue despyed the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lord.

Who so despyser wyckednes & murther, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of soche, it is but vayne, they: labours vnto fowle, & they: woordes vnto fowle. ¶ They: wycked are vndiscrete, and they: chylde most vn godly. ¶ They: creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the barren and vndiscreit, which hath not knowen the synfull seed: she shall haue true

fruite in the reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the erleb, which with his handes hath wrought no vnrightheousnes, ne ymagined wicked thinges against God. For vnto him shall be gūe a speciall gift of sayth, and the most acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorious is the fruite of good labour, and the rote of wyldome shall neuer fade awaye. For the chyliden of aduouaters, they shall come to an ende, & the seide of an vnrightheous bedd shall be rote out. And though they lye longe, yet shall they be nothing regarded, and their last age shall be without honoure. If they dye hastily they haue no hope, neither shall they be spoked in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrightheous.

C The. liii. Chapter.

Of the chaste generacion of the saythfull, and of their salute, and the heade of the vnrightheous, and of the condemnation, of the vnfaithfull.

How saye is a chaste generacion with vertue: The memoiall the-rosimmoztall, for it is knowne with God and with men. When it is present, ite take example there at: and yet it goo a waye, yet they desyre it. It is all waye crownded and holden in honour, and bymerth the reward of the vndeysed baptill. But the multitude of vngodly chyliden is vnprofitable, & the thinges that are plant with wyldome, shall take no depe rote, ne lape eny fast foundation. Though they be greene in the bynches, for a tyme, yet shall they be shaken with the wynde: for they stand not fast, and thow so, byehemencie of the wynde they shall be rote out. For the vnyar-fectre bynches shall be broken, they fruite shall be vnprofitable and so we to rote, yee miete for nothinge. And why: all the chyliden that are borne of the wicked, must beare record of the wyckednesse agaynst their fathers & mothers, when they be asked. But though the rightheous be ouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

Age is an amozable thinge: neuer theles it standeth not onely in the length of tyme, ner in the multitude of yeares: but a man's wyldome is the grāy heare, and an vndeysed lye is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyed suddenly was he taken a waye, to the intent that wyckednesse shulde not alter bys vnderstandyng: & that yppocrit shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftie betwixthyng of lyes make good thynges darke, the vndeysednesse also and wyckednes of volup-tuous desyre turne alwey the vnderstanding of the smpyle. Though he was soone ded, yet fullyllid he much tyme: For bys soule pleased God: therefore hadde he to take him a waye from amonge the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not, they lape not by soche thynges in theyr bettes, howe that the lounge fauoure and mercy of God is vpon his iustices, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen.

Thus the rightheous that is deyd cōdem- neth the vngodly which are lypynge: and p- pouth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lye of the vnrightheous. For they se the ende of the wyle, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyld for hym, and where- fore the Lord hath taken hym a waye. And why: they le him and bespye him, therefore shall God also laughe the to scorne: So that they the felices shall dye here after (but wy- thout honoure) yee in thame amonge the dedd for euermore. For without eny voyce shall he burie those that be putt vp, & remoue the from the foundacions, so that they shall be layed waste vnto the byke. They shall mour- ne, and they: memoiall shall perpe. So they bepyge as they shall remembre theyr synnes, and they: a woe wyckednesse shall bewaie them.

C The. v. Chapter.

The constancie of the rightheous before theyr per- fectures. The hope of the vnfaithfull is vnderable and bagne. The blessings of the sayntes and good.

When shall the rightheous stāde in great credulenesse agaynst soche as haue dealt extremely wpyth them, and taken a waye theyr labours: When they se it, they shall be vexed wpyth horrible feare, and shall wonder at the hardnesse of the sodayne heath-roninge for very dysrele of mynde and shall saye within them felices, hauninge inwarde forowe, and mournynge for very angurth of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in decision, & issted vps. We foolles thought they lyfe very miablenesse, and theyr ende to be with out honoure. But lo, how they are counted amonge the chyliden of God, & theyr por- cion is amonge the sayntes. Therefore we haue erred fro the waye of truthe, the lyght of rightheousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the sonne of vnderstandinge rote not vpon vs. We haue wtered our felices in the waye of wyckednesse and destrukcon. E- dibious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it. What good hath oure pye done vnto vs? What profyt hath the poynte of re- ches brought vs? All those thynges are pas- sed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messānger remynge before: as a shippe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, which when it is gone by, the tract therof cannot be foude neither the path of it in the floudes. As a byde that sleeth thozow in the ayre, and no man can se my token where she is shewen; but onely heareth the noise of her wynges, beatinge the lyght wynde, partinge y ayre, thozow the verbeincupe of her gonyng, and sleeth on shapng her wynges, where as after wards no token of her waye can be founde. Whiche as when an arrowe is shot at a mark, it parteth y ayre, which immediately comineth together agayne, so that a man can not know where it wete thozow. Eue so we in lyke maner as soone as we were bozne, we gannc immediately to dyue to oure ende, & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wyckednesse.

C Such woordes shall they that haue spyned speake in the hell: for the hope of y vngodly is lyke a dye dyffyll floure (oz dust) that is blowen awaye with the winde: lyke a thynne skomme that is feared abrode with the storme: lyke as the smoke which is dispersed here and there w the winde, & as the remembrance of a stranger y farich for a daye, and the byparteth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for evermore: their reward also is with the Lord: and their remembrance with the byest. Therefore, they receaue a glorious kyngdome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for w bys ryght hande shall he couer the, and with bys a wne holy arme shall he defende the. His gelousy also shall take awaye the harme, & he shall weapen the creature to be auyed of y enemies. He shall put on ryghteousnes for a byenll plate, and take sure iudgement in steade of an helme. His invincible shude of quite shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a ycare and the whole compasse of the world shall fyght with hym agaynst the vntypse.

D Then shall the thunder boltes go out of the ligherminges, and come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place appointed: out of y hearde shyn indignacion there shall fall theke hayles, and the water of the see shall be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renner roughly together. Pee a mighty wynde shall stande up agaynst them, and a storme shall cater them abrode. Thus y vnyrghteous dealing of the shall byngne all the lande to a wilderness, & wylkednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellinges of the nightpe.

C The. vi. Chapter.

C The callinge of Kinges, Wynges, and Judges: which are also exhorted to feare the wylkdome.

Wylkdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandyng is moze worth then one y is strong. heare thefoze (O ye Kinges) & vnderstande: O lerne ye that be iudges of the mdes of the earth. Gene care ye that rule the multitudes, & desire in moch people. For the power is geuen you of the Lord, and the strength is of the byest: which shall tye poure work: & searce out poure ymaginacions: how that ye beinge officers of his kyngdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kept y lawe of rightcon: nrs, nor walked after y will of God. Doubtly & that ryght soone shall be appere vnto you: for an harde iudgement shall they haue that beare rule. Whiche ye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctoppe shall be soze punished. For God which is lord ouer all, shall excepte no mans personne, ne they shall be stabe t awe of any mans greatness. For he hath made the small & greater, & careth for all a lyke. But the myghty shall haue the soze punishment.

Unto you thefoze (O ye Kinges) do I speake, that ye maye lerne wylkdome and not go amysse. For they y hepe bys ryghtconscience shall be ryghtously iudged, & they that are leached in righteous thinges, shall fynde to make answer. Wherefoze, let poure lust vpon my woordes, and loue them, so shall come by nourtour. Wylkdome is a noble thinge, and neuer fapdeth awaye: pee the is easily sene of the that loue her, and founde of soche as seke her. She pueneth the that desire her, y she maye fynd the her selfe vnto the. Wylkdome shall tye her vnto the bytymes, shall haue no greater trauaile, for she shall fynde her syttinge & ready at bys dozes. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandyng: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe, ad y soone. For she goeth aboute, sekinge soch as are meke for her. She weth her selfe cheerfully vnto them in their gonynges, and meeteth the with all diligence. For the vnspayed desire of retourncap is her begynnyng: to care for nourtour is lone, and lone is the keepinge of her lawes. Now the keepinge of the lawe is perfection and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familiar with God. And so y desire of wylkdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerslastyng. If poure belyte be the in royall seates and capytols (O ye Kinges of the people) let poure lust vpo wylkdome, that ye maye enygne for ever moze. O loue the lyght of wylkdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wylkdome what she is, and how she came vnto, I will tell you, and will not byde the mytices of God from you: but will seche her out from the begynnyng of the natuue, and byngne the knowledg of her into lyght, & will not kepe back the tyneth. Neether will I haue to do with consuming enyue, for soch a man shall not be partaker of wylkdome. But the multitude of the wyse is the welfare of the world, & a wyle kyng is the vpholdyng of the people. O receaue nourtour then thozow my woordes, and it shall do you good.

C The. vii. Chapter.

Wyldome ought to be preferred before all thynges.

A My selfe also am a moztall mā, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacion of hym that was first made, and in my mothers wombe was I fastyned to be flesch. In the tyme often monethes was I brought together in bloude thow the seide of man, and the commodious appetyte of slepe. With I was bozne, I receaued lyke as other men, & fell vnto the earth (which is my nature) crying and weeping at the first, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadyinge clothes, and brought vp with greate cares. For there is no lig that hath had eny other begynnyng of byrth. All men then haue one entrance vnto lyfe, and one goinge out in lyke maner.

Wherfore I despyed, and vnderstanding was geuen me: I called, and the sperte of wyldome came into me. I sett more by her then by kyngdomes and copall states, and counted rycheis nothyng in comparison of her. As for prynces' honours, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but clape before her sight. I loued her aboue wellfare & beutye, & purposed to take her for my lyght for her lyght cannot be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, & innumerable rycheis thow shee her handes. I was glad in the all, for thys wyldome went before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of all good thynges. Now as I my selfe learned vnspayedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her rycheis fro no man, for she is an infinite treasure vnto me, which who so vnderstande, become partakers of the loue & frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyses of wyldome.

God hath graunted me to talke wyldely, and conueniently to handle the thynges that he hath graciously let me. For it is he, that ledeth vnto wyldome, and teacheth to vnderstande a ryght. In his hand are both we & oure wordes: yee all oure wyldome, oure vnderstandyng and knowledge of all oure wordes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elements: the begynnyng, endyng and myddel of the tymes: how the tymes alter how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfilled, the course of the yere: the ordynances of the starres: the natures & kyndes of beastes: the furciounesse of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the pynapnaciō of men: the diuersities of yonge plantes: the vertues of rotes, and all such thynges as are secrete & not looked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thynges hath taught me wyldome. In her is the sperte of vnderstandyng, which is holy, manyfolde, one only, soflyll, euerlastyng, discrete, quyet, vnderstandyng, playne, true, louyng the thynges that is good, sharpe, which forbiddeth not to do well, gentle, hynde, steadfast, sure: that vnyng all vertues, circumspecte in all thynges: receauyng all spertes of vnderstandyng becominge cleane and sharpe. For wyldome is nygmber then all nygmble thynges: she goeth thow shee & attayneth to all thynges, because of her clemens. For she is the byrth of the power of God, and a pure clare expylyng of the clearnes of Almyghty God. Therefore can no vnderstandyng come vnto her: for she is the byrth of the euerlastyng lyght, the vnderstandyng of the mayesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so much as she is one, she maye do all thynges: and vnyng shee & her selfe shee reneweth all, and amonge the people conuertyeth the her selfe into the holy soules. Shee maketh Goddes frendes and prophetes for God loueth no man, but hym in whom wyldome dwelleth. For she is more beutyfull then the sunne, and geueth more lyght then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye cometh nyght. But wyldomeselle can not ouercome wyldome, and foolishnes maye not be with her.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C The states of wyldome.

Wildome reacheth from one ende to another mightily, & slowlyly both she orde all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen fro my yowth vp: I did my diligence to marry my selfe with her, for I haue had I vnto her beutye. Whoso hath y company of God, cometh with her noblyte, yee the Lord of all thynges him selfe loueth her. For she is the scale maistrisse of the nurture of God, and the choise out of his workes. If a man wold besyge rycheis in this lyfe, what is richer then wyldome, that woldeth all thynges? Thow wilt saye: vnderstandyng woldeth. What is it amoge all thynges, that woldeth more then wyldome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnes, let him labour for wyldome, for she hath grent vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes & prudence, righteounesse and strengthe, which are such thynges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. If a mā desire much knowledge, she can tell the thynges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the secrettes of wordes, and can expounde barthe sentences. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, & smythes of all tymes and and aged. So I purposed after this manner: I wyl take hit into my company, and come louingly with her: no doute the shall geue me good counsell, and I shall come comfortablie vnto one in my carelesnes & griefe. If hereticke shall be well and honestly taken amonge the conuiccs and lordes of the countie. Though I be yonge, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstanding, so that I shall marke well in the sight of greate men, and the fauours of princes shall wonder at me. When I hold my tongue, they shall blyde my leaue, when I speake, they shall lobe vpon me, and if I talke much, they shall lape the bades vpon theer mouth. Therefore, by the meanes of her I shall obtaine immortallitee, and leaue behynd me an encreasling immortall amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in orde, and the mayors shall be subdued vnto me. Forrible examples shall be afraied, when they do but heare of me, amonge the multitude I shall be counted good and myghtie in batall. When I come home, I shall fynde redde with her: for her company hath no deturces, as her felowship hath no redyousselfe, but myn and tope.

¶ Now when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte how that to be toynd vnto wylsome is immortalite, and greate pleasure to haue her frendshipp: how that in the workes of her handes are infinite ryches: how that, who to begeth company with her shall be tope: & that he which falseth with her, shall come to honour: I wente aboute skynning, together vnto me. For I was a ladd of a ryche wyf, and had a good vnderhandvnaue.

But whē I gret to moze vnderstandyn-ge, I came to an vnderfyled body. Fewer the-les when I perceaued that I coulde not ke-pe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wofulsome alfo, to knowe whose gift it was) I crept vnto þ Lord, and besought him, and with my wole herte I sayde after this maner.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ A prayer of Salomon to obtain wisdom.

God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast made all thynges with thy woide, and ordeined man thowto thy wylidome, that he shoulde haue  domynyon ouer the creature which thou hast made: that he shoulde ordeine the woildes accordinge to equite and vrghteousnes, and execute iudgement with a true heert) geue me wylidome, which is euer about thy grace, and put me not out from amonge thy chyldeyn: for I thy seruant and sonne of thy hande mayden, am a feble personne, of a thowte ty me, and to pouge to the vnderstandinge of tubgenite and p labes. And though a man be neuer to perfecte amonge the chyl dren of me, yet yf thy wyldome be not with him, he shal be nothing regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a king vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy countes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to bryde a teple vpon thy holy mount, & an altar in þe cite wherein thou dwellest: a pryncell of thy holy tabernacle wyth thy holy prepared from the begynnyng, & thy bydome wyth the, which knoweth thy wozeches, which also was with the, when thou madest the world & knewe what was acceptable in thy sight and epyght in thy commaundement. & sende her out of thy holy beautes and fro the tribbe of thy masey, that she maye be with me, & labour with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and she shall lede me soberly in my wozeches, and perswade me in her power. So shall my wozeches be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people righteously, and be worthy to syte in my fathers seate. For what ma is he, that may knowe þe counsell of God? Or, who can thinke he what the will of God is? For þe thoughtes of mortall men are miserable and oure focales are but vncertaine. And why? A mortall and corruptible body is heuy vpon the soule, and þe earthy manlyng kepeth do-wne that vnderstandinge that muste vye many thynges. Wee hereby can see the difference the thynges that are vpon earth, & greate labour haue we, & we can fynde þe thynges which are before oure eyes. And howe will then seeke oute the groides of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde, who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandinge and miracles, excepte thou geue thydome, and sende thy holy goost from aboue & the waies of them which are vpon earth, maye be re-founcined: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserved thydome.

Neuetheless. thou sparedest them also (as men) & sendest þ forcriners of thyne hood eue hoynettes to destrope them out by lyle ad lyle. For that þ wast vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto the ryghte battayle.
or w euill beastes. or with one rough word

For so much then as thou art ryghteous thy selfe. þ ordrest all thinges ryghteously * & punishest euen him that hath not deser-ued to be punished. & takest him for a tras-ger and an aleant in the lande of thy power. for thy power is the begynnyng of ryghshest our enmyes diuerse wayes. to þ intet that when we punish. we shuld remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are puni-¶ Wherfore. where as men haue luyed ignorantly þ unpunishedly. thou hast punished the soze. euen thozof þ same thynges þ they wosthypped. * for they were astray very longe in the waye of errour. & held þ bealties: which eue they: enmyes despyled standyng. Therefore hast thou sent a scozne full punishment amonge the: as amonge the children of ignorance. As for such as wolde not be reformed by those scoznes ad rebukes. they felt the wosthy punishment of god for the thynges that they suffered. they bare them vnpatiently. beinge not content in them but vniwillyng. And when they per-shed by the same thynges that they toke for goddes. they knowledged them. that there was. but one true god. whome afore they wolde not knowe: therefore came the ende of they: damnacion vpon them.

The. xiii. Chapter.

All thynges be dampne. except the knowledg of Qdome. oꝝ the lyghthes of heauen which rule the earth. for goddes. But though they had such pleasure in their beuty, that they thought the to haue bene goddes: yet thulde they haue knowne, how much more payper he is that made the.

For the maker of beuty hath ordeined all these thynges. Wherof they marueled at the powte and woꝝkes of them, they thulde haue perceaued therby, that by which made these thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse and beuty of the creature, the maker therof maye playnely be knowne. For withstandinge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, ad woide fynde hym, and yet myse. And why: for so much as they go about in hys woꝝkes and seke after them, it is a token, y they regarde and holde much of his woꝝkes that are seene: howbeit they are not wholly to be excused. For yf they vnderstandunge & knowledg be so greake, that they can discerne the woꝝde and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lord therof?

But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deed is they: hope, that call them Goddes which are but the woꝝkes of mens hādes: golde, syluer, and the thynges that is founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, oꝝ any vayne stone that hath bene made by hande of olde. * Wher as whē a carpenter cutteth downe a tree out of the wodd, and pareteth of the bark of it comynge: and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vied, & dyethen meate with the resydue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profitable for nothyng (for it is a crooked peece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thowto hys vanite, and accordynge to the knowledg of hys connyng) he carueth it some proportion, fygioneth it after the similitude of a mā, oꝝ maketh it lyke some beest: bracheth it out with redde, and paynteth it, & loke what soule spore in it he casteth some colour vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall, & maketh it fast with pyon, prouidyng to for it, lest it happen to fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it selfe. And why: it is but an image, and must of necessity be helpe.

Then goeth he a offeth of his goodes vnto it, for his chyldren and for his wyfe: he sekerh helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hath no soule: for health, he maketh his petition vnto him y is speke: for lpe, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon hi for helpe that is not able to helpe him selfe: & to sende him a good iourney, he prayeth him y may not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hāde (whether it be to optayne any thyng oꝝ, to woꝝke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The dyrtedragon and abominacion of pnyges. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The ruelles that come of Idolatrye.

A Capne, another mā purposing to saple, and begynnynge to take his iourney thowto the rappinge see, calleth for helpe vnto a flock, that is farre weaber then the tree that beareth hi. For as for it, coueteousnesse of monye hath soude it out, & the crafterma made it with his connyng. But thy prouidence, O father, gouerneth all thynges fro the begynnyng: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddel of y waues: declarynge thereby, that thou hast powte to helpe all thynges, perthoug a man wente to the see with out shipp. For theleste, that the woꝝkes of thy wyldome thulde not be vayne, * thou hast caused an arke to be made: and therfore do men committe they luyes to a small peece of wodd, passyng out the see in a shipp, and are saued.

* For in the olde tyme also the proude gyauntes perished, he in whō the hope was left to increa the woꝝde) wente into the shyppe, which was gouerned thowto thy hand, and so leste sede behinde him vnto the wodd. For happye is y trer, where thowto rpghteousnes cometh: but curst is y pbold that is made with hādes, * y boith is he that made it, he, because he made it: and it, because it was called God where as it is but a feaple thyng. * For the vngodly and hys vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. Euen so y woꝝke and he that made it also, shall be punished together. Therfore shall there a place come vpon y pbolds of the heathen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptation vnto the foules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnyuers. And why, y schynge out of pbolds is the begynnynge of wyldome, and the bypnyngge vy of the is the destruccyon of lpe. For they were not from y begynnynge, neither shall they conynue for euer. The welthy pboldnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therefore shall they come thowto to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne y was taken a waye fro hym, he made hym an ymage (in all y hāste) of hys deed sonne: & so began to woꝝshypp hi as God, which was but a deed mā, & ordeined his seruantes to offer vnto hi. Th y by procelle of tyme & thowto an vngacious custome, this error was kepte:

as lawe, and tyrannits compelled men by violence to honour ymagis. As for those y were so farrre of that men myght not wor- shipp them yeclyffe, they picture was brought so farrre (yke the ymage of a king whom they wolde honour) to the intent y with grete diligence they might worshipp him which was farrre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular conuice of the craftesmen gaue the ignorant also a great occasion to worshipp ymagis. For y workman willing to do hym a pleasure y set him a worke, laboured with all his con- ninge to make y ymage of the best fashion. And so: thow the beuty of the worke the comen people was disceined, in so much y they took him now for a God, which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And thus was the erreure of mans lyfe, when men (ether for to serue they a vne affectio, or to do some pialure vnto kynges) ascribed vnto stones and blockes y name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreover, this was not pough for the that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyued in the greates warres of ignorance, those many & greates plagges called they peare. For ether they lue they a vne childen, & offered them, or dyd sacryfice in synnfull season, or els helde vn- reasonable watches: so that they hepte ne- ther lyfe ner marriage cleane: but ether one lue another to death maliciously, or els gre- ued hym neryghbour wth aduoutrpe. And thus were all thynges mixte together, bloud, manslaughter, theft, dissimulation, corrup- tion, vnfaithfulness, sedicion, peiury, dis- quiettinge of good men, vnthankfulness, de- filyng of soules, chaunginge of byrth, vn- belidfulness of marriage, imporder of aduou- trpe and vnclennesse. And why: the honou- ringe of abominable ymagis is the cause, the begynnyng and ende of all euill. For they that worshippe Idols, ether they are mad when they be myce, or prophetic lyce, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghly forswere them selues. For in so much as their trust is in y Idols (which haue nether soule ner vnderstandyng) though they sweare falsely, yet they thynke it shal not hurt them.

Therefore cometh a greates plage vpon them, and that worst: for they haue an euill oppinion of God, geupnge hede vnto Idols, swearyng vnnuly to disceane, and bespyngng epygroulnes. For they swer- inge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euere with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

¶ The hope of the faithfull, prayng the mercy of God, for whome graunce saith they: sene not Idols.

Bless thou (Oure God) art sweet, lge A sufferynge and true, and in mercy o- zell thou all thynges.

Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. If we synne not, then are we lue, that thou regarded vs. For to knowe y, is perfect epygroulnes: Pre, to knowe thy epygroulnes ad power, is the rote of imortalite. As for the thyng that men haue soude out thowd their euill scize, it hath not disceined vs: as the payn- tinge of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage, with diuerse colours, whose lyght enepeth the ignorant: so that he honourerth & loueth the picture of a deyd ymage that hath no soule.

Nevertheless, they that loue such euill things, are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honour them. The potter also taketh ad tempereth soft earth, labourerth it, and geueth it the fallown of a vessel, whatsoener lerneth for oure vfe: and so of one peece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruice, & some contrary. But where to euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his wayne la- bourer he maketh a God of the same claye: this both euere he, which a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and which a lytle while after (whē he deeth) turnerth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not the more because he shall labour, ner because his lyfe is short: but stryuetth to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smythes and cooper smythes, & taketh it for an honour to make wayne thynges. For hym herte is aches, hym hope is but wayne earth, a his life is more vile the claye for so much as he knoweth not his a vne ma- ker, that gaue him hym soule to worke, ad byrthed in him the byrth of lyfe. They count oure lyfe but a passyng, and oure conuer- sacion to be, but a marlet, and that men shulde euere be getryng, and that by euill means. Now he that of earth maketh frag- le vessels and ymagis, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of the people & that holde the in subieccio, are vngodly, vnhappy, and excedyng proude vnto they a vne soules, for they iudge all the Idols of the heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye sight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, nor fyngers of hādes for to gripe: as for they fete, they are to slowe to goe. For mā made them, & he that hath but a borrowed speere, fashioned them. But no mā can make a God lyke vnto him: for sepyng he is but moztall hym selfe, it is but moztall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. he hym selfe is better then they whō he worshippeth, for he luyed

* deit. ch. i. 3. re. i. 14. and. 117. a he pured though he was moztall, so dyd neuer they. Yet, they woold ppyr beastes also, which are most miserable: for compare thynges that cannot fele vnto them and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his syght can beholde eny good thing ne they haue they geue ppyse ne thankes vnto God.

¶ The xvi. Chapter.

The punishment of the beastes, and the benefite that cometh vnto the faghtfull.

But these and such other thynges haue they suffered woorthie punishment and thozow the multitude of beastes are they roted oute. In steepe of the which punishmentes thou hast graciously ordeied thyne awne people, and geue the thep despye þe they longed for: a newe & strange taste, * preparing the quynles to be thep meate: to þe intent that (by the thynges which were thewed and sent vnto the) they that were to greedy of meate, might be withdrawen even from the despye that was necessary. But these withi thozte tyme were brought vnto pouerte, ad tolled a newe meate. For it was requysite þe (without eny excuse) destruction shoulde come vpon those which vsed tyannyng, to thewe ouerly vnto þe other, how thep enemyes were destroyed.

Not withstandinge, thy wythendured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle tyme, that they myght be reformed, haupinge a toke of saluacion, to remembre the comaundement of thy lawe. For he þe converted, was not healed by the thyng þe he sawe, but by the, w saluacion of all. So in this thozte thewedst thyne enemyes, þe it is thou, which despyerest from al euell. As for the * wbe they were bytten w grethoppers and flies, they dyed, for the were woerthy to perishe by such. But neether the teeth of dragons neer of venomous wormes ouer ca thep chylde, for thy mercy was euery the & helpe the. Therefore were they punished to remembre thy woerdes, but hastily were they healed againe, lest they shoul fall ito to depe forgetfulness, þe they myght not vse thy helpe. It was neether herbe neer playster þe rest to the to health, but thy woerde w lozde which healeth al thynges. It is þe w lozde that hath the power of lyfe & deathe: þe thou ledest vnto deatheys doze, and byyngeit vp againe. But ma thozow wickednesse slateth his awne soule, and when his syghte goeth forth, it runneth not agayne, neether maye he call agayne the soule that is tak a waye. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the wngodly that wolde not knowe þe, were punished by þe strength of thyne arme: wist straunge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thozow fyre were they consumed, for it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myght do moze then water which quencheth all thynges: but the woerde is the ouer of the vrghteous. Some tyme was the fyre to tame, that þe beastes which were sent to puny the wngodly, bent not: and that because they shuld fele and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishment of God. And some tyme bent the fyre the water on euery syde, that it might destrope þe vnghteous nacpon of þe carth. * Agayne, thou hast sed thyne awne people to Angells tobe, & sent the byed ready from heaue (withouth thep laboure) beyng very pleasant and of good taste. And to thewe the thynges & sweetnesse vnto the chylde, thou gauest euery one thep despye, to þe euery man might take what lyked hym best. But the knowe and ple a bove the violence of the fyre & melted not: that they myght knowe, that the fyre burnyng in the bayle and rayne, destrope the frute of the enemyes. þe fyre also forgoat his strength agayne: that the vrghteous myght be noryshed. For the creature that serueth the (which are the maker) arise in punyng þe vnghteous, but is as a sp & geile to do good, vnto such as put their trust in the. Therefore dyd al thynges alter at the same tyme, and were al obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nose of al thynges, accordyng to the despye of them that had nebe therof: that the chylde (w lozde) whom thou louest, myght knowe, * þe it is not nature and the growyng of frutes that froth men, but that it is thy woerde, which preserveth them that put thep trust in the. For loke what myght not be destroyed w the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle shone beame, it melted: þe al ne might knowe, that this hee ought to be geuen vnto the before the sunne tyme, and that thou oughtest to be woerthipped before the dape synginge. For the hope of þe wnghtfull shall melt a waye as the wynter pte, and perþe he as water, that is not necessary.

wonderously vexed: for the corner where they myght not hepe them from frace (because the founte came downe and vexed them) yet, many terrible and straunge visions made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myght geue them lycht, neither myght the cleare flammes of p'larres lychten p'horrible myght. For the appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, verp dyedful: At the which (when they lawe nothing) they were so afrayed, p' they thought the thinge which they sawe, to be the moire fearful. * As for p'lozcrp & enchaute'mēt that they vied, it came to derision, and the proude wylsome was brought to shame.

For they that promysed to dyspe a waie the fearfulness and drede from the weake foules, were lycht for fearc them selues, and that with lesone. And though none of the wonderes feared the, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, & at p'hyfpyng of the scriptes. In to much that with p'folunge they to'ned, ad sayde they sawe not p'apre, which no man yet maye escape.

For it is an heuy thynge, when a mans wane conscience beareth recozde of his wickednes and condemneth hym. And why: a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euery cruell thynge in bad. * Fearfulness is nothing els, but a declaring that a mā seeth helpe and defence, to answere for hym selfe. And loke how much lesse the hope is with the moire is the vncertaintye of the matter, for the which he is vniupheld. But they that came in the myghter myght: slepe the slepe fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: sometyme were they afrayed thozow the scare of the wonderes, and sometyme they were so weake that they to'ned with all: for an hasty & sodayne fearfulness came vpon the.

Afterwarde, p'fery of them had fallen, he was kepte and put in p'son, but without charynes. But p'fery dwelt in a byllage, p' he had bene an hearde of husbāman p' suffred intolerable necessity: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darcknesse.

Whether it were a blasfynge wynde, or a sweete songe of the byrdes amonge the thicket branches of the trees, or the vehemence of halfe rūnyng water, or grente noise of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge and cummyng of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghter noise of cōspynge beastes, or the founte that answerech agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them to'ne for very feare. For all the earth wynde with cleare lycht, and no man was byrdered in his labour. Wely vpon them they fell a heuy myght, an ymage of darcknesse that was to come vpon the. Pee, they were vnto them selues the most heuy & horrible darcknesse.

¶ The firste lycht that the p'celler had in Egypte was p'celler of the captyuall. The laste drede all the hye boine of Egypte: the fyne of the people in the byrderes, & aon drede betwixt the fyre and the drede, with his cōfession.

Nexte heles, the saynotes had a be greatly lycht, & p' enemies herbe the p'p' voyce, but they lawe not the figure of them. And because they suffred not p' same thynge, they magnified p' ad they were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanke the, and he sought the (God) that there myght be a difference. * Therefore had they a byrnyng p'p' of fyre to lode them in the vnkownde waie, and thou gauest them the sunne for a fre gylt without any hurt. Reason it was that they shulde want lycht, & be put in the p'son of darcknes, which leste the childen in captiuite, by who the vncorrupte lycht of the lawe of the woylde was for to be geuen. * When they thought to slape the babes of the r'p'gheous (one beinge layed out, and p'celler to be lender vnto the other) * thou broughtest out p' whole multitude of the chylde, and destroyed the in the myghter water. Of that myght were oure fathers certysed afore that they knowyn vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myght be of good cheare. Thus they people receaued the health of the r'p'gheous, but p' vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurte oure enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the r'p'gheous chylde of the good men outred secretly, & ordred the lawe of r'p'gheousnes vnto vnto: that p' iust shulde receaue good and euill in lyke maner, spynge prayles vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herbe an vncōmēt voyce of the enemies, and a p'p'ous crye for chylde that were bewynled. The master and the seruant were punyshed in lyke maner. For they all together had innumerable that dyed one death.

* Aether were p' lycht sufficient to bury p' dead, for in p' r'p'gheous of an eye, p' noblest nacyō of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make the beleue: but the destruction of the p'p' boine they knowledged, that it was p' people of God. For while all thyngs were still & the myght was the myddest of her course, the Almyghty woyle (God) leapt downe from heauē out of the popall throne, as a rough man of warre, the myddest of the lade that was destroyed: & p' charynes were performed the p' strate cōmādemēt, standynge and spyllyn all thynge with death: yet, it rode vpon the earth & reached vnto the heauē. Then the spate of the euill cruell dyeaumes vexed them sorely, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.

Then lape there one here, another there, half dead, half quene, and shewed the cause of his death. For the wyse that vexed the shewed the these thynges afoze: so that they were not ignoraunt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacyō of death touched the ryphe-rous also, and amonge the multitude in þe wyldernesse there was sulturreccion, but the wyath endured not longe. For the blamelesse man wente in all the hast, and toke the bat-tall vpon him, brought forth the deape of his misdeacyon: euen prayer and the censures of reconcilinge: sett him selfe agaynst the wyath, and so brought the multy to an ende: declaringe therby that he was thy ser-uaunt. For he overcame not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weapons of myght: but with the wyde he subdued him that vexed him, puttynge them in remembraunce of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deede were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddel, pacified the wyath, and parted the waye vnto Ispunge. * And why in his longe garment was all the beu-ty, and in the foure robes of the bones was the gloze of the fathers grauen, and thy ma-iesty was wyrtten in the crowne of his hea-de. Vnto these the deffroper gaue place, & was afraied of them: for it was onely a tes-tation wrothy of wyath.

¶ The .xix. Chapter.

The birth of the wypprane, and the grente sorow of the wypprane. The meate that was geuen at the begyne of people. The elementes were not onely to þe wyll of god, but also to the wyll of man.

A So for the vngodly, the wyath came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knewe before what quilde happen vnto them: how that (when they had consented to lett them go, and had sent out with greute diligence) they wolde repete, and folowe vnto them. * For when they were yet moornyng and makinge lamentacion by the graues of þe dede, they deuyded another foolys-nes: so that they persecuted them in theyr floures, whom they had cast out afoze with prayer. Moosthy necessity also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afoze. But the thynges that was wantynge of theyr punysshment, was requy-site so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormentes, that the people myght haue a mar-uelous passage thowto, & that these might fynde a strange deeth.

¶ Then was euery creature fallypponed agayn-ne of newe, accordyng to þe wyll of theyr maker, obepenge the commandementes that the chylde myght be kept without hurte, for the cloude ouer shadowed theyr tentes, & the dype earth appeared, where afoze was water: so þe in the reed see there was a waye without impediment, & the greute depe became a grene felde: to the thowto all þe people wente þe were defended wth the hand, seige the wonderous and maruelous wokes. For as þe hoyses, so were they fedd, and leapte lyke lambes, prapynge þe (w loze) which hadde deliuered the: and wth they were yet mynderfull of the thynges, þe hay-pned to þe they dwelt in þe lande: how the grounde brought forth fflycs in ftrade of ca-tell: & how the spure fcreaued with the multitude of frogges in ftrade of fflycs.

* But at the last they sawe a new creatiō of byrdes, what tyme as they were disceaued with lust, and despyed delicate meates.
For when they were speakinge of theyr appetite, the quaples came vnto them sed the see, and punysshment came vpon the spynners, not without the tokes which came to passe afoze by the vehemence of the ftra-mes: for they fustred woostlye accordyng to theyr wickednesse, they dealt so abhominably and churlyshly wth strangers. Some re-creaued no vnkowne gesses, some brought the strangers into bondage that byd them good. Welyde all these thynges there were some, that not onely recreaued no strangers with theyr willes, but persecuted those also, * & byd them moche euell, that recreaued them gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with * vlyndnesse, lyke as they that were couered with sobayne darknesse at the dores of the rypheccion, so þe euery one fought the entraunce of byrde.

¶ Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tyme is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyck, and yet all the residue kepe theyr melody: which maye easily be perceaued, by the syght of the thynges that are come to passe. The dype lande was turned into a water, and the thynges that afoze swamme in the water, were now vpon þe rypheccion. The fyre had power in the water: contrary to his awne verue & the water forgot his awne kynde to quench the. Agayne, the flammes of the nopsome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that wte with them, neither melted theyr pyle, which els melteth lyghtly. In all theges haþ thou promoted the people (w loze) and brought them to honour: thou haþ not be-sed the, but all waye & in all places haþ thou sande by the.

The Prologe of Iesus the sonne of Syrach vnto hys boke.

Amp and greate me haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the p[ro]phetes and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges I srall oughte to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it and reade it, shuld not onely them selues be w[is]e, se thes tho[se]w, but lerne other also with teachyng and wysepyng.

After that my graunde father J C S had geue diligent labour to reade the lawe, the p[ro]phetes and other booke that were left vs of oure fathers, ad had well exerce[de]d hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wyte some thyng of wysdome a good maner, to the intent that they which were wyllyng to lerne and to be w[is]e, myght haue y more vnderstandyng, and be the more apte to lerne a good conuersacion.

Wherfore, I exhorte you to receaue it longyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng y is wyrtten in the hebreue tonge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another speache. For onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the p[ro]phetes ad other boke sounde farr other w[is]e, then they do, wher they are spokn in their awne language.

Now in the xxxviii. yere when I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerge[us] a continued there all my lyfe, I gat libertie to reade and wyte many good thynges.

Wherfore, I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauaile to interpret this boke. And consydepyng that I had tyme, I laboured and byd my best to perfourme this boke, and to wyte it vnto lycht:

that the straungers also which are dyspoled to lerne, myght applye them selues vnto good maners and lerne accordyng to the lawe of

strength and wisdome the herte, and geueth myrrh & gladnesse. Who so feareth J Lord shall be happy, and when he hath neede of comfort, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh rich, and bringeth all good with her. She filleth the whole house with her graces, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plentiful peace and health. He hath sene her a nombred her: (both these are the giftes of God) knowledge and vnderstandinge of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne, and the that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

P The feare of the Lord is the rote of wysdome, and her branches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandinge and deuocyon of knowledg, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of J Lord dyueth out fyre: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wylfull boldnes is his wile destruction. A patient man wyl suffre vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue prewarde of hope. A good vnderstandinge wyl hys wordes for a tyme, & many meyns typpes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is J declaration of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the wordes of God. My sonne, if thou desire wysdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lord is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in sapth and louinge mekenesse, & he shall fill the treasures ther of. He not obdurate and vnspafull to the feare of the Lord, and come not vnto hym with a double herte. He not an hypocrite in J syngbe of me, and take good hede what thou speakest. Whereby well these thynges, lest J happy to fall and bypunge thy soule to dishonour, and so God discouer thy secretes, and call the downe in the myddelt of the congregation: because thou woldest not reuerence feare of God, and because thy herte is full of saynctnes and discease.

The. ii. Chapter.

Whe reprotheth the seruante of God to wyghtenousnes, loue, vnderstandinge, and patience, & reprotheth him that hurteth God, so beine, to hope, and to loue because God neither confoundeth ner forsaketh them J trust in hym. A curse vpon the fowle, feare, and impatience of herte.

M P Sonne, & if thou wilt come into J seruice of God, stande fast in righteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule to rescapon: lettie thynne herte and be patient: bothe downe thyne care: because the wordes of vnderstandinge, and thynneke not a waye, wyl thou art entyled. Holde the fast vnto God, ioyne thy selfe vnto him, and suffre that thy life maye successe at J last. What doest thou happeneth vnto J reuerence it: suffre in heuynesse, and be patient in thy trouble. * For lyke as golde & spynne are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable me in J forme of aduersite. Beloue J God, & he shall helpe the: adue thy waye a tryghe, and put thy trust in him. Hold fast his feare and growe therein. Whe that feare the Lord take sure holde of his mercy: myncke not a waye from him, that he fall not. Whe that feare J Lord, beloue him, and your reward shall not be emptye. Whe that feare J Lord, put your trust in him, and mercy shall come vnto you for pleasure. Whe J feare J Lord, set poure loue vpon hym, and poure herces shall be lyghtened.

Consydre the olde generacions of me: W 23 ye chyldren: & marcke them well: * Was theyre cuer any one confounded, that put his trust in the Lord: Who cuer continued in his feare, and was forsake? W whom dyd he cuer despise, that called faithfully vnto him: J for God is gracious & mercifull, he forgiveth synners in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the truth. Who be vnto him, & hath a double herte, wylled typpes and euell occupied hande, and to the sunner that goeth two maner of wayes. Who be vnto the J are loose of herte, which put not their trust in God, & therefore shall they not be defended of hym. Who be vnto the that haue lost patience, forsaken J right wayes, and are turned backe into forwarde wayes. What will they do, when the Lord shall begynne to vyset them?

Whe that feare the Lord, wyl not mistrust his word, and they J loue him wyl kepe his commaundement. Whe that feare the Lord, will seke out the thynges, that are pleasaunt vnto him, * & they that loue him: shall fullfill hys lawe. Whe that feare the Lord, wyl prepare theyr herces, and humble their soules in his sight. Whe that feare J Lord, kepe hys commaundements, and will be patient tyll they se him self, saying: * better it is so: vs to fall vnto J handes of J Lord, then into the handes of men: for hys mercy is as grete as hym selfe.

The. iii. Chapter.

Who that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father & mother, and doth the scruples, as it were vnto the Lord him selfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in woide & in all pacifice, that thou mayest haue Gods blessing, & his blessing shall abyde with the at the last.

¶ Who that

* Seke not out the thynges þat are aboue thy capacite, and searce not the grounde of such thynges as are to myghte for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the: thynke vpon that all waye, and be not curyous in many of his woiches. For it is not needefull for the, to seke thyne eyes the thynges þat are secrete. Ask not thou to moche searce in superfluous thynges, and be not curyous in many of his woiches: for many thynges are shewed vnto the all ready, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlinge of such hath begyled many a man, and tangled their wittes in vanite. Not þe that loueth parell, shall perishe therein.

An hardy herte shall fare euell at the last: (and he that loueth daunger, shall perishe therein) an hert that goeth two wayes, shall not profpere: and he that is froward of hert will euer be woyle and woyle. A wycked hert shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner will heape one synne vpon another. The couisel of þe proude bathen health for the plante of synne shall be eoted out in the, and not knowne. The deert of hym that bath vnderstandinge shall perceaue the thynges, and a good race will gladly herken vnto wisdom. An herte that is wile and bath vnderstandinge, will abstayne from synnes, and increaseth the woiches of righteounesse. Water quencheþ burnynge fyre, & mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respect vnto him that is thankfull: be thyngked vpon him agaynst þe tyme to come: so that thou be fallest, he shall fynde a stronge holbe.

C. The .iiii. Chapter.

¶ Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The scope of thynges is her fruit. Almes ought to be merciful, and exhortation to righteouse and to good.

No come, * defraude not þe poore of thy almes, & turne not awaye thine eyes fro hym that hath neede. Despise not an hongry soule, and desie not the poore in his necessite: greue not the herte of him that is helpelesse, and with drawe not the gifte from the needfull. Refuse not þe prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the wep. Call not thyne eyes asyde from þe poore, for anye euill wyl, that thou greue hym not occasion to speake euell of the. For þe be complaine of the in þe bytternesse of his loue, his prayer shall be herde: euen he that made him, shall heare him. Be curteous vnto the company of the poore, habile thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy head to a man of woishippe. Let it not greue the to bowe downe thine eare vnto þe poore, but paye thy deert, and geue him a frendly answer, and that with mekenesse.

* Deluyet him that suffereth wronge from the þe harte of the oppresoure, and be not fayne harted when thou spitest in iudgement. Be mercifull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, & be in steade of an husband vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an oberdyne sonne of the hieft, and he shall loue the more the thy mother doth. Wisdomme dyetheth lyfe into her children, recrauth them that seke her, & will go before the in the waye of righteounesse. He that loueth her, loueth lyfe: and they that seke her diligently, shall haue greatesoye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where the entree in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue hye, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge þe hearde: and he that bath respect vnto her, shall dwell safely.

Jesus the sonne of Syrach. Ho. xxxviii.

C He that beleueth her, that haue her in possession, and hys generation shall endure: for when he falleth, the doth go with hym, and choiceth him among the best. Feare, dyede & temptation shall the bynyng vpon him, and trye him in her doctrine: till the haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he commytt his soule vnto her. Then shall he stablish the hym, bynyng the ryght waye vnto hym, make him a glad man, the we him her secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnder standinge and ryghteoulines. But yf he goe wrong, the shall forsake him, and geue hym ouer into the handes of hys enemye.

D Whp sonne, make moch of thy tyme, eschue the thinge that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to save the trouth. For there is a shame that bynyeth synne, and ther is a shame that bynyeth wozthyppe and fauour. * Accepte no person after thynne awne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thynne awne decaie. Be not a chaunced of thy neryghbour in his aduersite, and kepe not back thy coucell when it maye do good, neither byde thy wyl-dome in her bewty. For in the toge is wyl-dome knowne, so is vnderstandinge knowledge and leuynge in the talkinge of y wise, & bestadme in the woordes of ryghteoulines. In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be a chaunced of the lyce of thine awne ignozance. Shame not to cōfesse thynne erreure, and submyt not thy selfe vnto euery man because of synne. Withstande not the face of the mighty, & stryue yf not agaynst yf dreame. But for ryghteoulines take paynes with all thy soule, & for the trouth stryue thou vnto deathe, and God shall fyghe for the agaynst thynne enemyes. Be not halfe in thy tonge, neither slacke and negligēt in thy woordes. Be not as a lyon in thynne awne house, desctroyng the housholde folkes, and oppressing the that are vnder the. * Let not thynne hande be stretched out to receaue, and that when thou shouldest geue.

Wherethyns maye we not put any confydence. The vengeance of God ought to be feared, and so our profanities maye be not so flowe.

Rust not vnto thy riches, & saye not: tudy, I haue enough for my lyfte. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptacion.) For alowe not the lust of thynne awne heart in thy strength, and saye not: tudy, how haue I had strength, or who will bynyng me vnder because of my woordes: for doubtles God shall avenge it. And saye not. I haue commyted no synnes, but what euell hath happened me? For the almyghty is a pay-ciller rewarder. * Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therefore without feare, neither heape one synne vpo another. * And saye not: tudy, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgue me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is merciful, so goeth he wozth from hym also, and hys indignacion cometh doctone vpon synners.

Take no taryng to turne vnto y Lord, and put not of from daye to daye: for suddenly shall his wozth come, and in the tyme of vengeance he shall desctroye the. * Trust not in wozth riches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punishment & wozth. * Be not intocured about to euery wynde, & goo not into euery wynde: for so both the synner that hath a double tounge, & the fast in the wynde of the Lord, be desctroyd in thy vnderstandinge, abyde by the wynde, and folowe the wynde of penit and ryghteoulines. Be gentle to heare the wynde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, & make a true answer with wisdom. * Be swift to heare, but slowe & patient in geuynge answer. If thou halt vnderstandinge, shawe thy neryghbour an answer: If no, saye thine had vpo thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscreet wynde, and so confounded. Honour and wozthyppe is in a mans wyse talkinge, but the tounge of the vndiscreet is his awne destruction. * Be not a pryuy accuser as long as thou lyuest, and be no slanderer woth thy tounge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the chere, & an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but yf yf is a pryuy accuser of other men, shall be hated, enuyed and confounded. For yf thou wylstifie the small and geaue a lyke.

It is yf propere of a synner to be well tongued. The doctrine & good counsel of yf wyse men be emburyed, wozthyns shuld be stretched for the pfect chere.

Be not thy neryghbours enemye for thy frendes sake: for who fol is cruel that be the hepe of rebuke and dishonour, and whosoeuer beareth enuye & a double tounge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuyce of thynne awne vnderstandinge (lest thy strength be hurt by foolphyness, and lest thy leaues wither, and thy frute be desctroyed, and so thou be left as a bare tree (in the wilderness.)) For a wozthed soule desctroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laught to scoone of his enemyes, & bynyng hym to the poze of the vngodly. * Be swift wozde multiplyeth frendes, and pacifieth them that be at variance, & a thakfull tounge will be pleyntous in a good man. Holde frendshippe with many, neuere theles haue but one councler of a thousande.

If thou gettest a frend, & proue him fyt, and be not halfe to geue hym credence, for some man is a frend, but for a tyme, & wyl not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some is some frende that turneth to enemye, and taketh parte agaynst þe: & yf he knowe thy hurt þy þe he telleth it out. * Agayne, some frende is but a companion at the table, and in the daye of neede he continueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne awne selfe, & deale faithfully with thy hono- rable folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduer- sityte, he is with the, and hydeth not hym self from the. We wynter from thine enemye, pee and beware of thy frendes.

C A faithful frende is a stronge defence, who to thyselfe forche one, fildeth a treasure. A faithful frende hath no peare, þe weight of golde and syluer is not to be compared to þe goodwille of his faith. A faithful frende is a medicine of lyfe, and thep þe feare the Lord, shall fynde þe. Wyll to feareth þe Lord, shall prosper with frendes: and as he is him self, so shall his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine from thy pouth vp, so shalt thou fynde wyldome tyll thou be olde. So to hys as one þe plover, and so to the, and wayte patiently for his good frutes. For thou shalt haue but litle labour in his worke, but thou shalt eate of his frutes right soone. How exceeding sharpe is wyldome to vnderstand men: an vnderstande body tyll not remayne in her. Vnto such, he is as it were a rough stone, and he caeth her from him in all the haste. For wyldome is with him but in name there be but fewe þe haue knowledge of her. (But with them þe know her, the apdeth euen vnto the apperpyce of God.)

Gue care my sonne receaue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy fore into her synckes, & take her pock vpon thy neck: bowe downe thy shoulde under her, heare her patiently, and be not wery of her bades. Come vnto her with thy whole hert, & kepe her wordes with all thy power. Seeke after her, and she shall be betwixt the: and when thou hast her, so take her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy great tope. Then shall her setters be a stronge defence for the, and her pock a glorious rayment. For þe bewtpe of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the cou- plynge together of saluacio. See a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, and þe fame of lyfe of tope shall thou weare.

My sonne, yf thou wilt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstanding, and yf thou wilt applye thy mynde, þe shalt be wyle. If thou wilt bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, and yf thou desire in heart, thou shalt be wise. So take wel the multitude of such elders as haue vnderstandinge, and consente vnto their wysdome with thy hert: & þe thou mayest heare all godly sermons, and that þe worthy sentences eschape the not. And yf thou sayst a man of discreete vnderstandinge, gett the soone vnto hym: & let thy fore treade vpon the stappes of his do- res. * Let thy mynde be vpon the comma- dements of God, and be earnestly occupied in his lawdes: so shall he stablysh thy herte, & geue the wysdome at thine awne desire.

The vii. Chapter.

Woe must forsake euell, and get not dwelle our fel- lowe. The behauiour of the wyse to murther his wyfe, his frende, his chyldren, his seruantes, his fel- lous and mother, the pletes, &c.

Do no euell, so shall ther no harme happen vnto the. Departe awaye from the thyng that is wycked, & no mystrytie shall medle with þe. My sonne, towe no euell thynges in the fo- rowes of vnyghtynousnes, so shalt thou not reape the seuen folde. Labour not vnto ma- for any lordshyppe, neyther vnto the hyng for the seat of honour. * Justitie not thy self be- fore God (for he knoweth the herte) and de- fire not to be reputed wyle in the ptesence of þe king. Make no labour to be made a iudge excepte it so were, that thou couldest mpy- getly put downe wyckednes: for yf thou shuldest stande in a we of the ptesence of þe myg- tyre, thou shuldest faile in geuyng sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the citey, & put not thy selfe amonge þe people. * Zynde not two tymes together, for in one tyme shalt thou not be vnympyshed. Shape not: tuth, God wyll loke vpon the multitude of my oblations, and when I offer to the byest God, he will acceptet it.

De not saynt barred when thou makest thy prayer, neyther lack in geuyng of almes. Laugh no man to scoone in the wyspnes of his soule, for God (which seyth all thynges) is he * that can byynge downe, and set vp agayne. Accepte no lesyng agaynst thy wy- ther, neyther do the same agaynst thy frende. Use not to make any manner of lye, for the customes therof is not good. Make not ma- ny wordes, when þe act amonge þe elders: * Wyl thou prayest, make not moch babylng. * Let no labourious worke be tedious vnto the, neyther the honybandie wyche the all- mighty hath created. Make not thy bond in the multitude of thy wyckednes, but hable thy selfe eue from thine herte: & remember þe the wrath that not be longe in tartynge, and that the vengeance of the felth of the v- godly is a very fyre & worme. Geue not ouer thy frende for any good, ner thy faithful brother for the best golde.

Departe not fro a discrete and good wo- man, that is fallen into the for thy portion in the seate of þe Lord, for þe gift of her home- ty is above golde. * Wylle as thy seruante worke the trul, in teate him not euell, ner the dwelinge that is faithful vnto þe. Now when thou hertest his wordes, make þ as though thou werest in a dycane, and walke vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpo him in thy nebe. Every beast loueth his like, eue so let euery mā loue his neyghbour. All flesh will reioyce to their lyke, and euery man will kepe company with such as he is him self. But as þ wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth þ vngodly with the righteous. * What sefelythpp shuld an holy man haue with a dogge. how can the ryche & the poore agree together? He wilbe a lle is the Lyons prape in the wyldernesse, euen so are poore men the meate of the ryche. Lyke as the proude maie not a wepe wyth lowyness, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore: If a ryche man fall, hys frenedes let hym vp agayne: but when the poore faileth, hys acquaintance forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an erreuer, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

ii. Cor. xii.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is pynnyshed: yet though he speake wyllye, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speaketh euery body holdeth his tōge: and loke what he saileth, they prayle it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore mā speake, they sape: What felowe is this? and yf he do anyple, they shal deströpe him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerte is a wicked thing in the mouth of the vngodly. The herte of man chaūgeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euell. They that haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealt wylly in wordes, haue vnderstande the truerh & ryghteousnes, and haue fought out wylle sentenre and iudgements. * Howe not thy luste, but turne the from thyne aunc weyll. For yf thou geuest thy soule her despayre, it shall make thyne enemyes to laugh the to scoyne. Take not thy pleasure in greates voluptuousnes, and meble not to moch wythful. Wise and indosome byng men to pouertie In thyng must thou be discreet. The discreet of the wyrdome of god and man, whiche I maye knowe what is in a man. Concreetness must be dyed without anger.

A Labourynge man þ is geuen unto bronchines, shall not be reche: and þ hat maketh not moch of small rynges, shall fall by lytle & lytle.

* He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyght mynded, & doth agaynst him selfe. Who to reioyseth in wyckednes, shall be punyshed: he þ haterh to be reformed, hys lyfe shall be shortned, & he that abhorreth babyling of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. He that offendeth agaynst hys aunc soule, shall repent it: and he that reioyseth in wyckednes, shall be punyshed.

Rehearte not a wycked & charlysh word twyle, and þ shalt not be hyndered. When thy secretes nether to frendner foo: and yf thou hast offended, tell it not out. Tell thy neyghbour his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery word. A man falleth sometyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For

* what is he, that hath not offended in hys tonge: geue thy neyghbour warninge, before thou threaten him, & geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is all wyldome, and he that is a ryght wyse man, kepeth þ lawe. As for the doctrine of wyckednes, it is no wyldome, and the pauidere of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednes, & abhominacion & a blasphemynge of wyldome. A simple man of small vnderstandynge þ feareth God, is better then one þ hath moch wyldome, & trasgreddeþ þ lawe of þ lytel. A crafty sorcell man can be wylle, but he is vnryghteous, & doth hyfles he wasteth the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can beaue hym selfe humbly, and can douke with his head, & yet is he but a vyseauer wyrtyn. He þ doth his face, & dysguyleth it: because he shulde not be knowen, he preuenteth the.

The. xx. Chapter.

God correcten and repentance, of the grete of the wyrdman, and of the foue exyng.

Some man & reproueth his neyghbour oft tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some wil holdeþ his tonge, & he is lytle & dyscrete. It is moch better to geue warninge and to reprove, then to beare euill wyll: for he þ knowledgeth him selfe opely, shall be preserued fro hurt & destruction. Lyke as when a gelded man thowto desyre & lust desyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence: and vnryghteousnes in þ lawe. How good a thyng is it, a man that is reproved to shew openly his repentance: for so shalt thou escape wyllful synne.

* Eccl. xii. d.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wylle: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeþ hys tonge, because he hath not þ vnderstandynge of the language: & some man kepeth silence, waytynge a convenient tyme. * A wylle man wyll holdeþ hys tonge tyll he se oportunitie, but a waton and vndercrete body shall regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shall hurt his aunc soule: & he that kepeth auctoretye vpon hym vnryghtously, shall be hated. Some ma hath oft tymes proferre in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moch, and hath harme & losse. There is some gift þ is nothyn worth: Agayne there is some gyft, whose reward is doubte. Some man getteth a fal for beynge to proude, & some cometh to tothyng & to lowe estate.

* Eccl. xii. d.
and. xxi. a

estate. Some man byeth moch for a lytle payre, and must paye for it scuen folde.

B * A wylle man with hys woordes maketh hym selfe to be loved, but the fauour of fooles shalbe poured out. The gyfte of the vnyuersyte shall do the no good, for hys eyes are seuenfolde. * He shall geue lytle, and saue he gaue moch: he openeth hys mouth and creepeth out, as it were one that creepeth out wyne. To daue he lideneth, to morow alsaeth he agayne, and such a man is to be hated. The foolle sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yet euen they þat eat my bread, speake no good of me. O how oft, & of how many shall he be laughed to scorn. He taketh a more percion fall by such woordes then þe he fell vpon the grounde: euen to shall the fall of wycked men come hastily. In þe mouth of hym that is vntaught, are many vconuenient & vmete woordes. A wylle sentence shal not be allowed at þe mouth of the foolle, for he speaketh it not in due season.

C Some man spinneth not, because he hath not wher withall, and in his reast he shalbe spinged. Some man there is þe destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnyuersyte bodys sake destroyeth he it, and with acceptyng of persones shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man promisseth his frede a gyfte for very shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lyte is a wycked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnyuersyte. A thete is better, then a man þe is accustomed to lye, but they both shall haue destruccyon to herpage. The condicions of lyers are vnhonest, and theye shame is euer with them.

D A wylle man shall bypnyng hym selfe to honour with hys woordes, * and he that hath vnderstādyng, shall be set by aynge great men. * He that spileth his labe shall encrease hys heape of coine: he that worketh rpyghtuousnes, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth great men, shall escape mocheuill. * Rewards and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wylle, & make hym domine, that he can not tell men theye fautes. * Wylldome þe is hyd, and treasure that is hoarded vp, what profit is in them both? Better is he that kepeth hys ignouance secreete, then a man that bybeth hys wylldome.

¶ The xlii. Chapter.

¶ Of the vntyngnes of synne, the map not heape synne vpon synne. The vntyngnes of an heretike. The ende of synne, wch is the soule of the wylle man, wch hym that cansthe be deuyll.

M Some, þe thou hast synned, do it no more: * but praye for thy fore synnes, that they maye be forgyuen the. Flee from synne, euen as from a serpent: for ye thou comest to npe her, she wylly bite the. The tethe therof are as the tethe of a lyon to slep the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh such woundes that they can not be healed.

Steppe and wrongeous dealinge shall walke awaye a mans goodes, & thou wyldest a reche house shalbe brought to naught: so the riches of þe poure shalbe rored out. * The prayer of the poure goeth out of the mouth, and cometh vnto the carce, and hys vgeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastily. Whoso hateth to be reformed, it is a token of a vngodly personne: but he þe feareth God, wylly remembre hym selfe. A myghty man is knowne a farre by þe riches: but he that hath vnderstādyng, perceauneth that he shall haue a fall.

Whoso buybeth hys house wyth other mens coll, is lyke one that gathereth stones in wynter. * The congregacion of þe vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, theye ende is a shame of fyre. The waue of þe vngodly is set with stones, but in theye ende is hel, darthnes, & paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wylly holde fast the vnderstādyng therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wylldome & vnderstādyng. He that is not wylle, wylly not be taught in good: but þe vnto him an aboundyng in wyckednesse: and wher byternes is, there is no vnderstādyng. The knowledg of a wylle shall flode lyke water that runneth out, & his coll is lyke a fountayne of lyte.

The hert of a foolle is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wylldome. Whē a man of vnderstādyng heareth a wylle woide, he that commēde it, and make moch of it. Wt þe voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therein, but cast it behynde hys back. The talykynge of a foolle is lyke an heuy burthen by þe waue: but to heare a wylle mid speake, it is a pleasure. Wher a doute is in the congregacion, it is aske at the mouth of þe wylle, and theye shall poure hys woordes in theye hertes. A lyce is a house that is descoped, euen so is wylldome vnto a foolle. As for the knowledg of þe vnyuersyte, it is but darke woordes. Wocryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstādyng, euen as setters aboute hys fete, and lyce manipels vpon his rpyght hand. * A foolle lyfeth wylly his voyce with laughter, but a wylle man shall scarce laugh secretly.

Lernynge is vnto a wylle man a Iewel of golde, & lyke an armylet vpon hys rpyght arme. A foollye mans fote is soone in hys neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shalbe ashamed at þe personne of the myghty. A foolle wylly pepe in at þe wyndow into þe house, but he that is wel noughted, ffeff his wylly wyll stande without. A foolysh man standeth berkenynge at the doore, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The boke of

The lyppes of the unwyse wyll be telling foolysh chynges, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstādyng, shall be weyed in the balancer. The hert of fooles is in thier mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in thier herte. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemet he curseth hys awne soule. * A pypur accuser of other men shall desyre hys awne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that kepeth hys tonge & is dyscrete, shall come to honour.)

* Eccl. xij. b.

¶ The xxii. Chapter:

¶ For purgacion of the mouthfull. of a foolysh sonne and daughter, the muth shal dyscrepon how and to whom we ought to speake, of forswyng upon o berd. A foole is not to be much talke with all. Inturies and wynges doo rather frenshyng and amptre.

A Mouthfull body is moulded of a stone of clape, and euery man wyll speake to his dyspasse. A mouthfull body is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth him must wash hys handes agayne. A synner toke some is the dysphour of p father. A foolysh daughter shall be lyte regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she that cometh to byghoness, byngeth her father in heuynes. A daughter that is past shame, dyshonoureth both her father and her husband: vngodly shall regarde her, but they both shall bespise her. The playenge of a wyse speke is not mette where heuynes is, eue so is the correccion and doctrine of wylsome euer displeasunt vnto foolis.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one pgle with a potterde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth him not, & as one that rapeth a man out of an heuy lyfe. Who so telleth a foole of wylsome, is euen as a man, whych speakech to one that is a slepe. When he hath tolde hys tale, he saith: what is p matter? When one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym, because the lyght saplech hym: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstādyng. Make but lyte wepyng because of p deed: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is wofle then p death. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is ded, but p lamentacion ouer p vngodly & vngodly shuld endure all the dayes of hys lyfe.

Talke not much with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstādyng. Beware of him, lest it turne the to traunple, and thou shalt not be despyled whys synne. Departe from him, & thou shalt fynde rest, and shalt not be bynden back into hys tolyshnes. What is heuier then leader? And what shuld a foole be called els but leader

* Sande, salt, & a lump of yron is easly to beare then an unwyse, folysh, & vngodly man. Lyke as p band of wood shoulde together in p solidacion of p poule canot be losed: euen so is it with p hert that is stablyshed in p thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse shall netter feare, net be offendid at any tyme.

Lyke as a nyne playstred wall in a toun: dter house, & an hys byppling, may not abyde p wynde & storme: euen so is a foles hert astrayed in his ymaginacion, he seareth at euery thyng, and cannot endure. A vaueryng hert in p ymaginacion of a foole wyll not euer stond in awe, but he that abydech in p comaundementes of God, wyll allwayne feare. He p nyppeth a mans eyre, byngeth forth teares; and he p pycketh p hert, byngeth forth p meaning & thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, rapeth them awaye: & he p blasphemet hys frend, breakech the frendshyppe: though thou brewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dyspaye not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowrely, seate not, for pe maye be agreed together agayne: excepte it be that p blasphemet him, dyspayne him, open his secretes and woude him traxpoudly: for all such thynges shall dyspaye awaye a frende.

Be saythfull vnto thy neyghbour in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperite. A lyde ledest vnto hym in the tyme of hys trouble, that thou mayest be heye with hym in hys heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen befoze p fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threathynges go befoze bloudsheddyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer heareth it, shall beware of hym. * Who shall set a watch befoze my mouth, & a sure scale vpon my lyppes, that I fall not with them, and that my tonge descepe me not?

* Psal. c.

¶ A prayer agaynst wyre, lechery, and glotony. of other blasphemie, and of wyse charyty. of the chyrchen of synners, and synners pceders of aduourte, of the feare of God.

A Lyde, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theye ymaginacion and counsell. Whet me not fall in loch reproche. Who wyll kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctrine of wylsome in myne herte: that be spere not myne ignoraunce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignoraunces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and p my synnes excede not: lest I fall befoze myne enuyres, & to my aduersarye reioyse. A Lord p father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in norke the pynagracpon. ¶ Let me not haue any thinge looks, but turne at wpe all volu pteuyned fro me. Take fro me p lustes of p body. Let not the hel ptes of vndernes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnwhyssefull goddlyne mynde.

Hear me, O ye chylde. I wyll geue you a doctrine, how ye shall orde your mouth: who so keepeth it, shall not perishe thowow his lyf, ne he hurt thowow wicked wo ches. And for p synner, he shall be taken i his awne vantage; he p is proud & cursed, shall fall & begin. ¶ Let not thy mouth be accusomed to swearing, for in it there are many falles. ¶ Let not the naming of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not w the names of sayntes, for p shall not be excused of the) for lyke as a seruaut which is oft put vpon the cannot be without some soze, even so whatsoeuer he be p sweareth nameth god, shall not be cleane pouged fro synne. ¶ I mā that vseth much swearing, shall be fylled w wickednes, & the plage shall neuer go from his house. ¶ If he begyle his brother, his fau te shall be vpon hym: yf he knowledg not his synne, he maketh a doble offence, & yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be foude rph: reous for his house shall be full of plagis.

The wordes of the sweare byngeth deeth (God graunte p it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschue all such, & tye not welterunge i synne. ¶ Let not thy mouth be vnholist and falsly chalking, for in it is p worde of synne. Remembze thy father & thy mother, when thou art let among great men: lest God forge the in thep: spight, and lest thou do tynge in thy custome, suffer rebulke, & wylt not to haue bene bozne, and so curse the dape of thy natyuite. ¶ The man p is accusomed with the wordes of blasphemie, wyll neuer be reckoned all the dayes of his lyfe. To synne thowp is to moch, but the thyz byn ger wythes destruction. An hote stomack cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll it haue swallowed vp somethynge: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in hys flesh, tyll he haue kyndled a fyze.

All bzed is swete to an whowmonger, he wylt not leaue of, tyll he haue hys pur pose. ¶ A man that byratch wedlock, & regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: * Cuth, who seyth me? I am compassed aboute with darcknes, p waltes couer me, no body seyth me: whom nedde I to feare? The hysell wylt not reme mbe my synnes. He vnderstandeth not p his eyes is all thynges, for all such feare of men byrth abaye the feare of God from hym: for he seyth only the eyes of men, and co tyngeth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clayer then the sunne, beholdinge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secreete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges: ouer they were made, and after they he brought to passe also he loketh vpo the all.

The same man shall openly pynched in the stretes of p cyte: & shall be chased abode lyke a ponge hoile foale: and when he thynketh lest vpo it, he shall be taken. ¶ This shall he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstade p feare of the Lorde. And thus shall it go also with euery wyfe, that leaureth her husbnde, & getteth cuert rtaunce by a straunge mariage. ¶ First, she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of the hysell: Secodly, she hath forsaken her adone husbnde. Thyzly, the hath played the whoze in aduoutre, and gotten her chylde by another man. ¶ She shall be brought out of the cōgregacpon, and her chyliden shall be looked vpon. Her chyliden shall not take rote: as for frute, her bzaunches shall byp: ge forth none. ¶ A shamefull repote shall the leaue behynde hys, and hys bypdonour shall not be put out. And they p remaine, shall knowe, that there is nothyng better, then the feare of God: and that there is no thyng sweeter then to take hede vnto the cōma dementes of the Lorde. A great woorthpysse is it to folowe the Lorde, for loze lyfe shall be receyued of hym.

¶ A pape of wylsome pteachinge froth of the mouth of God. O her wothes: a place where he reardeth.

Whosome shall pape her self, and be honoured in God, & reioice in the myddest of his people. In the cōgregacpon of p hysell shall he open her mouth, and resaipe in the beholding of his power: In the myddest of her people that he be craled, and wondered at in the help fulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen the shall come: ded, and amonge such as be blessed he shall be prayled, and shall saye: I am come out of the mouth of the hysell, fyrt bozne before all creatures. I caused p lyght that fastly not to aryle in p brauen, and couered al the earth as a cloude. My dwelling is aboue in the hepht, and my seate is in p yller of the cloude. ¶ My selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute p eopale of beauen, & pearced p grounde of p depe: I haue walked in p routes of the see, and haue stonde in all landes: my domynion is in euery people & in euery nation, & with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of al, both hye & lowe.

In all these thynges also I sought rest, and a dwellinge in some subteritance. So the creatoz of all thynges gaue me a cōmā demet: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, & thyne inheritance

The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whō shall he be lykened, that keepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnyng of sapth is to cleue fast vnto it. The heuiness of the hert is al the iunpment, & the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al. All punishment & plage is nothing in comparison of the plage of the hert, euen so all wyckednes is nothyng to the wyckednesse of a woman.

What fouer happeneth vnto a mā is no thyng in cōparison of it, that his euell willers do vnto hym: and all vengeance is no thyng to the vengeance of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heade then the heade of the serpent, & there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a womā. * I wyl rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a womā chaungeth her face, the shal mouel her countenance as it were a Beare, & as a sack that she weie it amonge pnegh- bours. Her husbande is brought to shame amonge his neighbours, and whē he heareth it, it maketh him to fyghe. A wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman, the porcion of the vngodly shal fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clymme vp a sandy waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a shyly quyet man. * Loke not to wrath vpon the bewtye of a womā, lest thou be prouoked in desire toward her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusion. If a woman get the masterye, she is the contrary to her husbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a sojy herte, an heuy countenance and a deyd woide. * (When he had and feble knees is a womā that hy: husband is not the better for.) * If the woman came the begynnyng of synne, & thowde her we all are deyd. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, ne her geue a wycked womā her wyl. If the drinke not after thy hande, she shal confounde the in the syght of thy enemyes. Cut her of then fro thy fleshy, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

¶ The .xxvi. Chapter.

¶ The people of a good woman, w^{ch} the frace of thy thynges and of thy fourth, w^{ch} the jelousy ad vron: then woman, w^{ch} two thynges that cause to woe, and of the thynges which moueth to ioy.

A wyfe is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombze of his yeares shal be dubble. An honest woman maketh her husbande a topyll man, & she shal fyll p yerres of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyft, which shal be geau for a good porcion vnto such as feare God: Whether a mā be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery herte, and a chearefull countenance. There be thye thynges that my hert feareth, and my face is astraped of p fourth. Treason in a cypre, a seditious people, and nysome tonges, all these are better then p death. But whē one is jelous ouer his wyfe, it bypnyeth payne and sorowde vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thynges, is a scourge of p tunge. Whē one hath an euell wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke payre of oxen must draw together, * he that getteth her, getteth a scorpyon. A dyonchri woman is a greete plage, for she cannot couer her aboue shame.

The whoridome of a womā maye be known in the pybe of her eyes and cpe lybdes. * If thy daughter be not chamefast, holde her straitlye, lest she abuse her selfe thowd ouer much lyberte. Beware of all the dyuolnesse of her eyes, and natuall not p the do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the wyne & is thristie, so that she ope her mouth and dyspyche of euery nerre water that she maye get. By euery bedde shall the syt her downe, and open her quyre agaynst euery arrowe. A lounge wyfe reioyseth her husbande, and fedeth hys bones with her wyl- domne. A womā of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, and to al well nurtured in pndes maye nothyng be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft aboue other gyftes, and there is no wyche to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornaime in the hye heauē of p Lord, so is a vertuous wyfe the bewtye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lpghe is vpon the holy candlestick, so is the bewtye of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpon the sockettes of spluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetual are the founda- cions p be layed vpon a whole stonpe rocke so are the commandementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

There be two thynges that greue my hert and in the thirde is a dyspale lye come vpon me. Whē an excrete man of warre suffereth fearlens ad pouerte. Whē men of vnder- standynge & wylloome are not set by: And when one departeth from pgherousnes vnto synne. Whō so both such, the Loide hath prepared him vnto p sword. There be two maner of thynges, whych me thynke to be herde and perplous. A marchaunt can not lpghtly kepe him from wyche, neether a ta- uerner hym selfe from synne.

Jesus the sonne of Syrach. Ito. lvi.

seteth he at variance. The thynde tonge hath disquieted many one, and diuyn them from one lande to another. Stronge cyties of the riche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greute men. (The strenght of þe people hath it brought downe, and bene the cause of myghtynacyons.) The thynde tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, & robbed the of theyr labours. Wilho so berkeneth vnto soch thal neuer fonde rest, & neuer dwel safely. The stroke of the god maketh oddes, but the stroke of þe tonge smyteth the bones in sunder. There be many that haue perished with the sword but many mo theowde the tonge.

D Well is hym that is kepte from an euell tonge, and cometh not in the anger thereof. Whiche diueth not the pock of soche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pock thereof is of pyon, and the bande of it of lele. The death thereof is a very euell death: hell were better for: one, then soch a tonge. But the feye of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flamme thereof maye not burne the. Soch as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to queneche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leoparde. Thou hegeth thy goodes wth thynnes: why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and syluer: why dost thou not wepe thy wordes also vpon the balace? Beware, that thou spye not in thy tonge, and so fall before thyne enemyes, that lape waite for the. (and thy fall be incurable, euen vnto death.)

the halfe agayne, and rekeneth the other to be founde. And yf he with holde no other moene yet hath he an enemy of hym, and that vnderstand.

He payeth hym with cursynge and rebure, and giveth him euell wordes for his good dede. There be many one which are not glad for to lede, not because of euill, but they feare to lele the thynge that they leme. Yet haue thou pacience wth the simple, and with holde not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundmentes sake, and let hym not goo emptye from the, because of his necessity. Lete thy money for thy brother and neygbbours sake, and burpe it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth ad corrupteth. * Ca. agath. bi. 1. Tim. vi. 19. ther thy treasure after the commaundment of the hyest, and so shall it bying the more profyte then golde. * Lape up the almes in the bande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euil. * A many almes is as a purgatory hym, and that kepe a many fauour to the apple of an eye: and after warde shall it arpe and paye euery man his rewarde vpo his head. It shall fyghe for the agaynst thyne enemyes, better then the dyloce of a gy-aunte or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest ma is suertie for his neygbour, but a wycked perfonne leteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshipp of thy suertye, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suertie, and the vnthankfull and ignoraunt leaueh his suertie in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neygbboure: ad whē he hath lost his honesty, he shall forsake him. Suertithippe hath bestrope many a riche man, and remoued the as the waues in the see. Myghrie people hath it ouercome wth force, and caused the to wandre in straunge countreys. An vngodly man transgredynge the commaundment of the Lorde, shall fall into an euell suertithippe: and though he force him self to get out, yet shall he fall into vngement. Helpe thy neygbbour out after thy power, and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in soch dett. * The chiefe thynge that he peth in thy lyfe, is water, ad byrd, clorbynge and lodgynge, to couer the shame.

Better is it to haue a poore lpyng in a mans awne house, then delycate fare among the straunge. * Be it lyte or moche that thou hast, holde the contrite wythall, & thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabonde: for a myserable lyfe is it, to go from house to house: & where a man is fcernde, he darre not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, ad haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vndoorthy, and heare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: So thy waite thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou hast. * Waite is a wyse man with a lytle wyne: so that in slepe þu shalt not be speche therof, ner felle eny payne. A wyse wolsonne slepe shall soch a one haue, ad felle no in ward grete. herseyth vp by tynes in the moornyng, & is wel at ease in him selfe. But an vnclacable eater slepeth vnquyetly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou fellest that thou hast eate to moch, aryle, goo thy waye, calst of thy stomack, and take thy rest: and it shall ease the, so that thou shalt vyngne no synchelle vnto thy body.

C My sonne, hence me, and despyse me not: & at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue told the. * In all thy woekes be diligent & quicke, so that there no synchness happeth vnto þe. * Who so is liberal in dealing out his meate, many men shall blesse him, & praye hym with theyr lippes: ad the sonne is a sure token of his loue ad faythfulness. But he that is vnpaythfull in meate, the whole citie shal complayne of hym: and that is a sure experience of his infidelite ad wyckednes. * We not thou a wyne bybler, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth the hard yron, eue so both wyne proue bettes of the proude, when they be dronken.

* Wyne solyly droncketh, quyketh the lyfe of man. If thou bynckest it meaurable, thou shalt be temperate. What lyfe is it, that maye continue without wyne? (What taketh a waye the lyfe euen death.) Wyne was made for the begynnyng to make mē glad (ad not for dronkenness) Wyne meaurably drinke is a reioyng of þe soule & body. (A meaurable drynkynge is health to soule and body.) But if it be dronken with excess, it maketh by excesses and forowde vnto the mynde. Dronkenness fylleth the mynde of the foolys with thune and ruyne, multiplyeth the strengthe, and maketh woundes.

Rebuke not thy neyghboure at the wyne, ad despyse him not in his myght. Goe hym no despyrefull woordes, and preece not vpo hym with contrayp sayenges.

¶ The xxxii. Chapter.

¶ Of the discrecion and prays of the preacher, and of the heare. ¶ Of the feare, fage, and confidence in god.

If thou be made a ruler, * proude not thy selfe therein, but be thou as one of þe people. * Take diligent care for the and loke wel thereto: when thou hast done all thy dewtye, yet the downe, that þu mayest be mercy wyth the, and receaue a crowne of honoure. Take wysely and honestly, for wyldome becometh the eyght well. Bynder not muske. Speake not, where there is no audience: & poure not forth wyldome out of tyme, at an impoysonite. A ke as þe Car-buncle stone thyneth that is set in golde, so doth a longe garmyth the wyne fealt: and as the Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the sweetnes of iusticie by the myght of wyne. (Goe care, and be still, and for thy good behaueour thou shalt be loued.)

¶ Thou yonge man, speake that becometh the, and that is profitable, & yet cense the thou art wyse al ke. Competende moche with fewe woordes. In many thynges be as one that is ignorant, geue ease, and holde thy tonge withall. If thou be amonge men of hyer auctorite, despyse not to compare thy selfe vnto them: ad when an elder speaketh make not þu many woordes therein. Before þe thondre goeth lyghtheinge, and before wtour and Hametallnesse goeth loue ad fauoure. Stande vp by tynes and be not the last: but get the home lone, & there take thy pastime, & do what thou wylt: so that thou do no euell, & despyse no man, but for all thynges gene thackes, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

¶ Who so feareth the Lorde, wyl receaue his doctrine: and they that get them to him by tynes, shall fynde grace. He that feleth the lawe, shall be fylled withall. As for him that is but fayned, he wil be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde shall fynde the iudgement, and theyr ryghtconsses shal be kindled as a lpyght. An vngodly man wyl not be reformed, but can helpe him self with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstandynge despyseth no good counsell: but a wyld and proude body hath no feare. (Pe eue when he hath dealt rashly w another man, but his awne dopnynges shal be his rebuke.) My sonne, do nothing without an aduysment, so that it not repent the after þe dede. So not in the waye wher thou mayest fal, ner where thou mayest stombe aganst the stone. Goe not thy self into a laborious slippery waye, and beware of thyn awne chyldren, (and eue hede of them that be of thyn awne howsholde.) In all thy woekes put thy trust in God, for thy whole lyf, for that is the keepynge of the commaundemēt. Who so beleueth Gods woerde, taketh hede to the commaundemēt: and he that putteth bys trust in the Lorde, shall wante nothinge.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

C Of concame, disuinations, and enchauntemetes, we ought to confute vayne hope, and lygare. The prayse of them that feare God, & of vperer woordes of men. God doth not allowe the woordes of an vnsefulfull man.

V A wyse people begile them selues with vayne & discreitfull hope, ad soles trust in dzeames. Whofore gardeth dzeames, is like him that will take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde: Euen so is it with the appeyringes of dzeames. Befoze the face is the lyknes of a face. Alho can be clenfed of the vncleane? What trouth can be spoken of a lyar? Sothslayinge, wythcraft, forcery and dzeamyng is but vanyte: lyke as when a woman traupleteth with childe, & hath many fantasies in her hert. Alhere as soch vylis come not of God, set not thine hert vpo the: for dzeames haue disceained many a man, and they sayled, that put theyr trust therein.

The ladw shall be fulfilled without lyge, & wylidome is sufficient to a fapthful mouth. What knowlege hath he that is not tryed? A wyse man that is well instructe, vnder standeth moch: and he p hath good experiance, can talke of wylidome. He that hath no experiance, knoweth lyke, and he that erret, cauleth moch wyldednes. He p is not tryed, what thynges knoweth he: Alho so foloweth no rule, is full of wyldednes.

When I was yet in erreure, I learned moch also: pee I was solenced, that I could not expelle it all, and came oft in parell of death therfore. tyl I was depured froit (thozow the grace of God.) Now I se, that they which feare God haue the right wyte: for they hope standeth in him, that ca helpe them. And the eyes of the Loyd are on them that loue him. Alho so feareth p Loyd baweth in awe of no man, and is not affayed, for the Loyd is his hope and comforte.

Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth p Loyd: In whom putteth he his trust: who is his strength: * for the eyes of p Loyd haue respecte vnto them, that loue hym. He is their myghtie protectiō, and stronge grounde: A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hope hote none daye, a succore for Gombyng, ad an helpe for fallinge. he setteth vp the soule, and lpyghemeth the eyes: he geueth lyfe, and blessinge. he that geueth an offering of vnrighuous good, his offering is refused: the scornfull dealynge of þ vnryghtuous please not God. The Lorde is they onely p'aciently abyde hym in the waue of the truerth of rightrounes. The hyghell doth not allowe the gyftes of the wyched.) And + God hath no helpe in the offeringes of þ vngodly, nerher maye synne be reconciled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bringeth an offering out of the goodes of þ poore, doth eue as one that kyleth þe sonne before the fathers eyes.

The used of the needfull is the lyfe of the poore: he þ defrauderh hym therof, is a man of bloude. Who so robberh his neyghboure of his lpyng, doth as great synne as though he slewe him to death. * The þ defrauderh the laboer of his hye, is a bloud shedder. Whiche one buyeth and another beareth downe, what praye haue they then but laboure? Whiche one prayeth ad another curseth, whose voyce will þ Lorde heare? * he þ walbeth hym selfe because of a deed body, s then toucheth the deed agayne, what doth hys waynyng? * So is it with a mā that fasteth for hys synnes, and doth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer? What doth his fasting helpe hym?

C The xxxv. Chapter.

It is well done to praye, and to do sacrifice. The prayer of the fatherlesse, and of the wyddowen: and hym that humblyth hym selfe.

Who so kepyeth þ lawe, * bynggeth offeringes p'ough. he that holdeh fast the commaundement, of freeth the ryght healt offeringe. he that is thankfull and recompenseth of freeth synne floure. * Who so is mercifull and geueth almes, that is ryght thank offering. God hath pleasure when one departeth fro synne, and to forsaie vnryghtounes, recopleth vs with hym.

* Thou shalt not appeare empty before þ Lorde, for all for is done because of the commaundement of God. * The offering of þ ryghteous maketh þ faulte far, a swete smell is before þ hpyell. The offeringe of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto God, and shal neuer be forgotten. Guee God his honour to a chearfull hart, s kepe not backe the fruytynge of thy labours. In all thy gyftes be a mercifull countenance, s halowe thy thythes vnto God w gladnes. Guee vnto God according as he hath encreased and prospered the: * s loke what thyne hande is able, guee to a chearfull eye: for þ Lorde recompenseth, s geueth þ sear times as moche agayne.

Seue no vnryghteous gyftes, for soche wyl he not receiue. Beware of wydegeous offeringes, for the Lorde is a ryghteous iudge: and regardeth no mānes person. he accepteth not the personne of the poore, but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. * he despyeth not the desyre of þ fatherlesse, ner the wyddowen, when she poureth out her prayer before him. Doth not God be the reuerce, that reme dothne the chekes of þ wyddowen? he heareth he not the complaine, ouer soche as make her to wepe. For from hys chekes do the teares go vnto heauen, s the Lorde which beareth them, doth accepteth them. Who so serueth God after his pleasure, shal be accepted: and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of hym þ habbleth hym selfe, goeth thowen the cloudes, tpyll the come nye. Shew wil not be comforted, ner go her waye, tpyll the hpyell. God haue respect vnto her, geue true sentence, and perourne the iudgement. And the Lorde wyl not be slack in comynge, ner tary longe: tpyll he haue smytten in sonder the backes of the vnmercifull, and aunged hym selfe of the heathen: tpyll he haue taken awaye þ multitude of the cruell, and broken the cepter of the vnryghteous, tpyll he geue euerp man after his woekes, and rewarde the after: thei downe: tpyll he haue deliuered his people, maintained thei cause, and reioiced them in hys mercy. What saye a thing is mercy in the tyme of angusthe and trouble? It is lyke a cloude of rayne that comyneth in the tyme of a drouth.

C The xxxvi. Chapter.

It is prayer to God in the person of al faithful men with the prayer of a good woman.

Be mercie vpon vs, O Lorde, thou God of all thynges. haue respect vnto vs, thewe vs the lyght of thy mercies, s sende thy feare amonge the hya then and straungers, which iske nor after þ that they may knowe, how that there is no God but thou, and that they maye shew thy wonderous woekes. A phe as thou art halowed in vs before them, lo bynyng to passe, that thou mayest be magnified also in them before vs: that they may knowe the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God but onely thou O Lorde. Keue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous woekes. Shewe thyne hande, ad thy ryght arme gloriously. Rayse vp thyng magnacion, and poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the abusers, and smyte the enemye. Make the tyme of the, remembre thy countenance, that thy wonderous woekes maye be prayfed. The hely deuourer all mentes, yet is one meate better then another. Like as þ tonge to steth denyth, & so doth an herte of vnderstandinge in a childe falle woordes. A frowarde herte geueþ heynes, but a man of experyence liffeth hym vpagapne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better the another. I saye wyse reioyleth her husband, & a man loueth nothing better. Þf he be loupynge & vertuous with all, then is not her husband lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe, and ppyler wherup he relyeth. Where no hedge is, ther þ goodes are spoyled: & where no bulwyc is, ther the frendeles mouneth. Lyke as there is no credite geue to a robber, that goeth from one cytie to another: So is not the man beloued, that hath no nest, ad must turne in, where he maye abyde in the nyght.

C The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ How to a man shulde knowe frendes & counsellors, and search the company of a holy man.

I My frendes sayeth: I wyl be frendly vnto hym al so. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayne they there not heynes vnto death, when a copanion & frende is turned to an enemye? Most wickid presumption: from whence art thou spronge vp, to couer þ earth with falshe & dilcates? There is some copanion which in prosperite reioyleth with his frende: but in þ time of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is some copanion þ mouneth with his frende for the hely sake: but whē trouble cometh he taketh holde of the wynde. For getteth thy frende in thy mynde, and thinke vpon him in thy tyes. Seke no council at thy kynsmen, and hyde thy council fro such as beare the no good wyll. A euery counsellor bypnyeth forth his council. Beweteles, there is some þ counsellor, but for his awne pofite: Beweteles of the counsellor, and be aduised afore wher to thou wilt vse him, for he wil counsell for him selfe. Lett he cast the lot vpon the, & saye vnto the. Thy waye & purpose is good, & afterwarde he shal agaynst the, and loke what shal become of the.

* Ezech. xiii. and. i. c.

The no council at him, that suspecteth þ for an enemye, and hyde thy council fro such as hate the. There no council at a woman concerning þ thynges that the longest for: not at a fearful and saynt herted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchant, how deare he will cheape thy wares to warde þ: or at a byer, of sellynge: or at an enuious mā, of thankesgeuynge: or at an vnmercifull, of louynge kindnes: or at an vnhonest man, of honestye: or at þ thoughtfull, of woorkynge: or at an hyeelyng which hath no house, or pofite or wealth. A nyple body wolde not gladly heare speake of much labour. Calie no fochfolkes to counsell, but be diligent to seke counsell at a vertuous mā that feareth God, for none as thou knowest to be a keeper of the commaundmentes, which hath a mynde after thyne awne mynde, and is soze for the when thou stondest.

And holde thy counsell fast in thynne herte: for there is no mā moze saythful to kepe it: then thou thy selfe. For a mā mynde is so: tyme moze disposed to tell oute, then seven watchmen that syt aboue in an hye place lokeynge about the. And aboue all this praye the thyself, þ he wyl lede thy waye in faythfulness and trueth. Before all thy woorkes aske counsell fyrst: ad ouer thou doest eny thyng, be wel aduised. There be foure thynges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout thre spryngeth euell and good, deathe lyfe, and a masterful songe that bableth morde. Some mā is apte and well instructe in many thynges, ad yet herp vnprospitable vnto him self. Some man there is, that can geue wyse and prudent counsell, and yet is he paret, and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geue him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wyddome, yet is he wyse vnto him selfe, and the frute of vnderstandynge is commendable in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wise, & the frutes of his wyddome sayle not. A wyse mā shal be plentifully blessed of God: & al they that se him, shal speake good of þ. The lyfe of man standeth in the nomtye of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable.

¶ A bypyscion in speches ought to be charye, and to feare a bypyscion which breath by prayer. The bypyscion of the deed, shal becom wyldome. Rectifiers of crafted men.

¶ Honour & bypyscion: honoure him because of necessite. God hath created hym (for of the bypelle commeth medycine) and he shall receaue giffes of the kyng. The wyldome of & bypyscion bynggeth hym to great woorthynesse, & in & syght of the greute men of thys worlde, he shall be honozably taken. The Lord hath created medycine of the earth, and he that is wyse, will not abhorre it. * Was not the bytter water made swete with a tressy men myght learne to knowe & vertue thereof. The Lord hath geuen men wyldome, and vnderstandynge, & he myght be honoured in hys wonderous woorkes. With such doth he heale men, and taketh awaye theyr paynes: Of such doth the Apothecary make a confection: yet can no man performe all his woorkes. For of & Lord cometh prosperous wealth ouer all the earth.

¶ Thy sonne, despyse not thys in thy sycknes, but & praye vnto the Lord, and he shall make the whole. Leane off from synne, and orde the handes a ryght, cleanse thine herte fro all wychednes. Geue a swete sauoured offeringe, and & syue flour for a token of reuerbance: make the offeringe fat, as one that geueth & syue fentes, and geue rovine to the bypyscion. For the Lord hath created him lett him not go from the, for & hath nede of hym. The houre maye come, that & syue maye be helped thozow them, when they praye vnto & Lord, that he maye recover, & gett heath to lyue longer. He that synneth befoze his maker, shall fall into the handes of the bypyscion.

¶ Thy sonne, & byng forth thy teares ouer the deed, and begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddest suffred greute harme thy selfe: and then come his body after a chuenist maner: & despyse not his burpall. Enforce thy selfe to wepe, and prouoke thy selfe to mourne, * and make lamentacion expedytly, & that a wyse or thow, lest thou be euill spoken of:

and then cōfōrte thy selfe because of & heuyness. * For of heuyness cometh death, the heuyness of the herte breaketh strength, heuyness and pouerte enueth the herte in reuincyon & offence. Take no heuyness to herte, byue it a wyse, and remembre the last thynges. Forget it not, for there is no turninge agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remembre his iudgement, thyne also shall be lyke wyse: vnto me peller daye, vnto & to daps. * Let & remembrance of & deed ceasse in his rest, & cōfōrte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, lepyng his spate is departed from hym. The wyldome of & scrib is at cōuenient tyme of rest: and he & ceareth from exercise and labour, shall be wyse. He that holbeth the plough, and hath pleasure in ploddyng, & daryng & oxen, and goeth aboute with such woorkes, he can speake of oxen: he setteth his herte to make forowes, & is diligēt to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also a woorkmaster, & labour: eth still nyght & daye: he carueth, graueth & cutteth oute, & his desyre is in sondrye cōpyng things, his hert ymagineth, how he maye conyngly cast an ymage, his diligēt also & watchynge performeth the woork. The prynciply in lyke maner bybeth by his styche, & doth his diligēt to labour the prync. The vapour of the fyre kymeth his flesh, & he must syght w the heate of the for nace. The noyle of & hammer soundeth euer in his cares, & his eyes loke still vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set hys mynde there vpon, that he will make out his woork, and therefore he watcheth, how he maye set it out, & byng it to an ende.

So doth the potter by his woork, he turneth & whele aboute with his fete, he is diligēt and carefull in all doynge, and his labour & woork is without nombre. He fashioneth & clape with hys arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. Hys herte ymagineth how he maye make it pleasant, & his diligēt is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope in their handes, and euery one thynketh to be conyng in his woork. Without thes maye not the ctycs be mayntayned, imbayted ner occupied: yet come they not by e the congregacion: they vnderstande not the cōuenant of & laue: they cannot declare equyte and iudgement: they cannot fynde out the darke sentēces, but thozow them shall the creature of & woork be mayntayned: the papper concerneth onely the woork and labour of conyng.

¶ A wyse man. The woorkes of God. Vnto the good, good thynges to do, but vnto the euill, euen good thynges are euill.

A That appleteth hys mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, both diligently seke out the wylldome of them of the olde tyme, and exercepeth hym selfe in the p[ro]pheters. he heareth the saynges of famous men, & p[re]acheth to the vnderstandyng of barch sentences of wylldome. he sekerth oute the mysterie of secrete kapinges, & exercepeth hym selfe therin continually. he doth seruice amōge greute mē, & appereth beforē p[ri]nce. he goeth into a straunge countre, & traunapeth thowto it: loke what good of euell is amōge men, he p[ro]ueth it, & lechereth it out. he purpoiseth hym herte, to resoize early vnto the Lord y[es] made hym, & to praye beforē the hyell God. he openeth his mouth in praye, & prayeth for hys synnes. Althē p[ri]ncē greute Loide wyl, he qualbe fylled with p[re]p[ar]ete of vnderstandyng, that he maye then poure out wylde sentēces, & geue thankes vnto the Loide in hys

25 prayer. he shall orde his deuice, and lede his knowlege a ryght, & geue hym vnderstandyng of secrete thynges. he shall thewe forth p[re]science of his lernynge, and reioyce in the conuauant of p[er]son of p[er]son of Loide. The whole congregacyon hall commende hys wylldome, and it shall neuer be put out. The remembrance of hym hall neuer be forgotten. his name shall cōtinue from one generacyon to another. * hys wylldome shall be spoken of, amonge the people, and the whole congregacyon hall openly declare his prayse. Althē he p[ro]ueth, he hath a greater name then a thoutande besyde: and after hys death, p[er] fame name remapeth vnto hym. Per wyl, I speake of his lernynge, and reioyce in the conuauant of p[er]son of p[er]son of Loide. I am full as the Moone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chylde[n]) bynyng forth frute, as the rose p[er] is plāted by the brokes of the selde, and geue ye a swete smill as I dauidus. Flozish as p[er] rosegarden, syng a songe of prayse. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his workes. Geue gloze and honoure vnto the Loide, shew his prayse with your lyp[er]s. See enē with the songe of your lyp[er]s, with harpes and playnynge, and in geunynge thankes vnto hym, lase after this maner. * All p[er] workes of the Loide are excedynge good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season.

D A man nebe not to sape: what is p[er]? what is that? for at tyme conuēnt they shall all be sought. At his commaundēt the water was as a wall, & at the word of his mouth the water stode still. * In his commaundement is every thyng acceptable and reconcyed, and his healeth cannot be mynyshed. The workes of all flesh are beforē him, and there is nothyng hysed his eyes. he leved from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, & there is nothyng to wnderfull of hys vnto hym. A man nebe not to sape then, what is thys, or that? for he hath made all thynges to do good vnto man. his besyngne shall cōtinue ouer as the stream, and mooueth p[er] earth lyke a founte of water. Althē as he maketh the water for dyouth, so shall his wyrt fall vpon the weathen.

* his wyrtes are playne & ryght vnto the iust, but the vngodly shoulde at them. for the good, are good thynges created from the begynnynge, & euell thynges for p[er] vngodly.

* All thynges necessary for the lyfe of man are created from p[er] begynnynge: water, fyre, p[er]son, a salt, meel, wheate, and hony, mylke & wyne, oyle & clothynge. * All these thynges are created for the best to the faythfull: But to the vngodly shall all these thynges be turned to the hurt and harme. There be spetres that are created for vengeaunce, & in their rygozousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. * In the tyme of the ende they shall poure out their strength, and pacifye the wrath of hym that made them. * Fyie, hable, hunger & death: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce.

The teeth of wylde norfome bestes, the scorpions, scorpentes, and p[er] swerbe are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruction of p[er] vngodly. They hall be glad to do his commaundementes: and when nebe is, they hall be ready vnto earth: & when they honore is come, they hall not ouerpasse the commaundement of the Loide.

Therefore haue I taken a good corage vnto me from p[er] begynnynge, and thought to put these thynges in wyrtynge, & to leaue them behynde me. * All p[er] workes of p[er] Loide are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, & when nebe is, so p[er] a man nebe not to sape: thys is worse then that. for in due season they are all pleasant & good: And therefore praye p[er] Loide to whole hert and mouth, & geue thankes vnto his name.

Euery myncreas lyght in a mannes lyfe. All thynges pale away, but a tyme and stable fast remapeth. At the bydynge of the eyghten, and p[er]son of the frate of God.

A Greate traunaple is created for all men, and an heuy pork vpon all men chylde[n, from the dape that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buryed in the earth: the mother of all thynges: namely, their thoughtes, and ymaginacions, feare of the hert, Conscience, meditacions, longynge and desyre, the dape of death: from the byell that lyeth vpon the glozous seat, vnto the lowell and most symple vpon the earth: from hym that is gozgroundly araped and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is, but home: and

ly and simply clothed. There is nothyng but warb, zeile, fearfulness, quietnes, and feare of death, ppyrour, anger and stryfe. And in the nyght when one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaunged hys vnderstandyng and knowlege. A lytle or nothyng is hys rest, in the slepe as well as in the daye of labour.

B The feareth is dyspoyeted in the dyspon of his hert, as one that renneth out of a batayll: and in the tyme of healt he awaketh & marveleth that the feare was nothyng. Such thynges happen vnto all keth, both man and beest: but leuen folde to þe vngodly. Howeouer, death, bloudshedding, stryfe and swerde, opprelltyon, hogger, bestuccyon and punychemet: thesē thynges are all created agaynst þe vngodly, & for they take came þe soule also. * All þe is of þe earth, shall turne to earth againe: & all waters ebbe againe in to þe see. All thynges & vncyghecoulnes shall be put away, but fapthfulnes & trueth shall endure for ever. The substance & goodes of the vngodly shall be dyed by and spynke awaye as a water houte, & they shall make a sounde lyke a gratee thoder in the capne.

C Lyke as the pygmyous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressours be fapine, when they goddes vanysh and consume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodly shall not obtayne many banches and the vncleane rottes vpon þe rocks shall be rote out before the grelle by the water syde & vpon the ruuer banches.

Secondlynes and liberalite in the increase & blessing of God, is lyke a paradys and garden of pleasure: such mercy also & kyndnes endureth for ever. * To labour & to be content wth that a man hath, is a swete pleasure: and that is to fynde a treasure aboute all treasures. To beger chyldren and to repayre þe pte, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is moze worth then they both. Wyne and mynstrelspe reioyseth the hert, but the loue of wysdome is aboute them both.

D Wpppyng & darypnyng make a swete nops, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Chyne eye delreth fauoure and bewtye, but a grene seide tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companion come together at opozurme, but aboute them both is a wyse & agreeeth with her husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shall deluyue moze then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good counsell is moze pleasant then they both. Tempozall substantiaunce and strenght lyft by þe mynde, but the feare of the Lorde moze then they both. The feare of the Lord wanteth nothyng, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lorde is a pleasant garden of blessing, & nothyng so betwepfull as it is. Wyssonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begg. And so loke to another mans table, each one thought for his owne spuyge how to vpholde hys lyfe, for he feareth hym selfe to other mens meat. But a wyse and well nurtured man wyll betwene therof. Weggynge is swete in the mouth of the vngodly cast, but in hys bely there burneth a fyre.

W of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the alme of god. Good name and fame. An exhortacion to geue herte vnto iust come. What thynges a man ought to be acheyue.

D Death, both bytter is the remembrance of þe, to a man that is chere rest and comforte in hys substantiaunce & ryches, vnto þe man that hath nothyng to vexe him, and that hath prosperite in all thynges, þe vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate. Death, how acceptable and good is the iudgement vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strenght faileth, and that is now in his last age, & that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulness: vnto him also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope ner patience. Be not thou afraied of death: remembre them that haue bene before the: and that come after the: theys is the iudgement of the Lorde ouer all flesh. * And why woldest thou be agaynst thys pleasure of the hysert? Whether it be ten an hundred, or a thousande yeares: death after that how longe one hath lyued.

The chyldren of þe vngodly are abhominable chyldren, & so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritance of vngodly chyldren shall come to naught, & they possidite shall haue perpetuall shame and confusyon. The chyldren clayme of an vngodly father, and why: for his sake they are rebuked & dyspyssed. Alas be vnto you (O ye vngodly) whych haue forsaken the lawe of the hysert God: þe be bozne, þe shall be bozne to cursyng, þe be dpe, & curle shall be poure porcyon.

* All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of the curle into destruccyon. The sorowe of men is in theyr body: but the name of the vngodly shall be put out, for it is nothyng worth. * Labour to get the a good name, for that shall contynue surer by the, then a thousande grete treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nombre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

* Chyldren, kepe wysdome in prync: for wysdome that is hye and a treasure is not leste, what profit is in the body? A man that dyeth hys folowynge, is better then a man that hybeth hys wylsdoine. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges and all waye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue a measure it.

Be ashamed of whosoome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge, before the pyntee and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacion of a people: Of unrepentousnes, before a companyon and frende: Of theft, before thy neyghbours. * As for the trust of God & hys counsaunt, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes upon y bar: Be ashamed to loke upon his lotes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take & not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke upon another's mans wyffe, and to make many trespassing wordes with her mayden, or to stabe by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vnderpaye thy frende: when thou guest eny thyng, cast hym not in the rethe withall.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

Secretes maye not be kept. The lawe of God must be taught. A daughter. A woman. God knoweth all thynges, for such the secretes of the heart.

Hearke not a thyng trysle, & disclose not the wordes, y thou hast herde i secretes. Be shamefast and well manerred in dede, to shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, and accept no personne to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the counsaunt, of iudgement: to bypunge the vngodly from hys vngodlynes vnto repyteousnes, & to make hym a good man: to deale faithfully woth thy neyghbour and companyon: to by distribute the heritage vnto the frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weryghe: to be content, whether thou gettest much or lytle: to deale truly with tēporall goodes in bypunge and sellynge: to bypunge wycheyldren wyllyngence: to correcte an euell seruaut: to kepe that thyng is from an euell wyffe: to sett a locke where many handes are: what thou helpeth & geueth out to be kepte, to tell it, and to wepe it: to wyte by all thy outgeynge and receauynge: to cōfourn the vnderne and vnderpe: Of the aged, that are iudged of the ponge. Of y be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be lerned & wyse and accept of all men.

The daughter maketh y father to watch secretly: and the carefullnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: per in y outh, lest the quide ouergrowe hym: And when the hath an husbande, lest the quide be hated: lest the quide be despyed or rayshped in her virgynite, or gotten w chylde in her fathers house: (When the cometh to the man) lest the behaue her self not right, or be tūne vnfruitfull. * If thy daughter be waton, kepe her straitly, lest the cause thynne enemies to laugh the to scoone, & the whole cytie to geue y an euell repute, & to thou be sayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before all the people. * Be holde not euery bodys detour, & haue not much dwellyng amonge women. For lyke as the wozine & mothe cometh out of clothynge, * so doth wychednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wyffe y putteth one to shame and rebulte. I shall remembre y wordes of y Lord, and declare the thyng y I haue seene. In y wordes of the Lord are his wordes. The sunne ouerlooketh all thynges with his shynne, and all his wordes are full of y clearnes therof. hath not y Lord brought to passe, y his sayntes quib tell out all his wonderous wordes, which the Almyghty Lord hath stablyshed: All thynges shure in his gloiy. he sekereth out y grounde of the depe and y heart of men, and he knoweth all the ymaginacion of a wylsome. For y Lord he knoweth all secretes, & he locherinto the token of the tyme. he declareth the thynges that are past and for to come, and discloseth thynges y are secretes. * No thought maye escape hym, neither maye eny worde be hyl from hym. he hath garnished y hye excellent wordes of his wylsome, & he is fro curclastynge to euerlastynge. vnto hym maye no thyng be added neyther can be diminished. he hath no de alio of eny mans counsell. How amiable are all his wordes, and as a sparke to loke vpon. Thep lue al, & endure for euere: when fouer nede is, they are all obedient vnto hym. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothing y hath faute or blemish. * he hath stablyshed the goodes of euery one: who maye be satisfied w his gloiy, when he seyth it.

The summe of the creatioun of the worldes of God.

The gloiy of the byrgth, is * the fapere & cleare firmament, the bewee of the heauen is hys glayous cleannes. The sunne when it appeareth, declarer the dape in y goynge out of it, a maruelous worke of the hyest. At noone it burneth y earth and who maye abyde for the heate therof? Whoso keepeth an ouen when it is hote, the tymes more doth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, when it byetheth oute the fyre beames & syneth, with the byghthenes of it, it blinndeth the eyes. Great is the Lord that made it, and in his commaundment he causeth it to cōme hastily.

uen, the apparell that p. Lozde lyghteneth in the heygth. In his holy worlke they costume in theyr ordre, & not one of them sayleth in hys watch. * Loke vpon the caryne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: verp bewtiful is it in hys tyme. he compaseth the heauen aboute wth hys clearnes & glori-e, the handes of the hysell haue benedict it. Tho-

Et vs comende the noble famous men, and the generacyn of oure foz eldres and fathers. Many more glorioys actes hath the Lozde done, and shewed his great powere euer seie raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In theyr wylde domes & vnderstādyng, they folowed p. counsell shewed in the propheces. * They led p. folke thorow the counsell and wylde domes of p. scribers of the people. Wylde sentences are founde in theyr instruccyn. They fought p. swetenes and melody of musycke, and brought forth the pleasante songes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coulde conforste and carpe those that dwelt with them. All these were verp noble and honorable men in theyr generacyons, and were wot repored of in theyr tymes. These haue left a name beynde them, so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Afterward they were some, who se remembraunce is gone. * They came to naught & perished, as though they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene borne, yet and theyr chyldren also with them.

25 Auertheless these are louyng men, whose ryghteousnesse shall neuer be forgotten, but cōpnyue by theyr posterite. Theyr chyldren are an holy good heritage. Theyr seide endured fast in the conuainit. For theyr fathers shall theyr chyldren & seide cōpnyue euer, & theyr prayse shall neuer be put downe.
Theyr bodies are buried in pece, but theyr name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of theyr wylde domes, & the congregacio can talke of theyr prayse. * Euery walked ryght & acceptably before the Lozwas a stedfast & ryghteous man, and in the Therefore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, when y^e floude came. In euellastynge couenaunt was made wth him, that all flesch shulde * perishe nomore wth the water. & Adam was a * greates father of many people, in gloyp was there none lyke vnto him. He kept the lawe of the bysshe, and came into a couenaunt wth him. He sett y^e couenaunt in his fleshe, and when he * was y^euoued, he was founde fapshull. Therefore w^{ro}te God vnto him wth an othe, that he wolde blesse all people in his seide, that he wolde multiplie and increate him as y^e dust of the earth, & to exalte his seide as the starres: per & that his seide shulde haue y^e possession, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see and from y^e p^ryncer vnto the borders of the world.

Chap. xlv.

The prayse of Moses, Aaron, and Ishmaels.

Moses * be loued of God & men, who is remembrance is in hys prayse: him y^e Lord made lyke in y^e gloyp of the sayntes, and magnified him, so that the enemyes fode in a we of hym, thoro his wordes he dyd greates wonders. He innde hym greates in the syght of kynges, gaue hym commaundementes before hys people, & shewed hym his glorioys power. * He stablyshed hym wth fapshulnes & mekenes, and chose hym out of all men. For he herbe his voyce, and he led him in the darcke cloude, * and there he gaue him the commaundementes, per the lawe of lyfe and wyldome that he myght teach Jacob the couenaunt, and Israel hys lawes.

25 He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the tribe of Levi, exalted him, & made him lord lyke. * An euellastynge couenaunt made he wth hym, and gaue hym y^e presthode in y^e people. He made hym glorioys in bewtyfull arape, and clothed hym wth the garment of honoure. He put perfecte iope vpon hym, and gyrded hym wth strenght. He decked hym wth lyde clothes, and a tuncple, wth an ouerbodye cote also & a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym belles of golde, and that man: * that when he went in, the sounde myght be herde, y^e they myght make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue y^e people war nyng. The holy garment was wrought and broderd wth golde, pallow spicke and purple. And in the byssellape there was a goodly worche, wherein was shaddowlyght and perfectnesse.

* Alpon the same also there was a worche fastened, & set wth colly p^recious stones, all bounde wth golde: and thus he brought in his ministracion. The stones were fastened for a remembrance, after the nombre of the twelue tribes of Israel. Alpon hys mytre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous and noble worche, garnished, and pleasant to loke vpon. Before hym were thersceno such sayre ornaments, and these it behoued hym alwaye to vse: There might none other put them on, but onely his chyldren & his chylders chyldren perpetually. Moyle perforce, me be hys buntoferrynges two tyms. * Moyle spyled hys handes, and anoynted hym wth holy oyle.

Thus was now confirmed hym wth an euellastynge couenaunt, and to his seide, as the dayes of heauen, namely: that hys chyldren shulde alwaye minystr before hym, and performe y^e office of the presthode, and wythe the people good in hys name. Before all men lypunge chose he hym, y^e he shulde offre incense before the Lord, and make obours for a swete sauoure & remembrance, that he shulde reconyle the people of the Lord wth hym agayne. * He gaue him auctorite also in hys commaundementes and in the couenaunt, that he shulde teach Jacob the statutes and testimones, and to enfourme Israel in his lawe.

* Therefore there fode vncertayne agaynst hym, & had enuye at hym in the wyldernes: namely, they that were of Dathan, & Abiram lyde, and the furoys congregacyon of Chore. Thus the Lord sawe, and it displeased hym, and in his wofull indignacyon were they consumed. A greates wonder dyd he vpon them, and consumed them wth the fyre. * Besides thus, he made Aaron per more honozable and glorioys. He gaue hym an heretage, and parted the fyre frutes vnto him. * Vnto him specially he appointed the byrd for sustenance, (for y^e prestes dyd eat of the offspringes of the Lord) thus gaue he vnto him a hys seide. * Eys had he no heretage ner poceyon in the lade and wth the people. For the Lord hym selfe is hys poceyon and enderptance.

The thirde noble & excellent man is * Whithnes y^e sonne of Eleazar, which pleased the God of Israel, because he had the zeale & fere of the Lord. For when the people were couried backe, he put hym selfe togyth ryght soone, and y^e wth a good will, to pacifie the wrath of the Lord towards Israel. Therefore foze was there a couenaunt of peace made with him, & he shulde be p^rincipall among the r^eygthous & the people, that he a his posterite shulde haue the office of the presthode for euer. (Lpke as there was made a couenaunt with Dauid of p^rtybe of Iuda, that from amonge his sonnes onely there shulde be a kyng:) And that Aaron also & his seide shulde be the herpitage, to geue vs w^rthdome in oure herte, to iudge hys people in r^eygthousnes: that his goodes shulde not come in to forgetfulness, and p^r their honoure myght endure for euer.

¶ The xlvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophete of Josue, Caleb, and Samuell.

And p^ro^rphete i barta p^rll * was Jesus p^r sonne of Naue, which in t^rade of w^roles the prophete was geuen to be captayne of p^r people, which accordyng vnto his name was a great sauourer vnto the clerke of God, to punysh p^r enemies that rose vp agaynst Israel, & Israel myght oytayne the p^r inheritance. ¶ How greate, noble, & excellent was he, when he lyft vp his hand, and dycted out his w^rorde agaynst p^retics: Who stode so manly before hym? For the Lord him selfe brought in p^r enemies. * And to de not the sunne shyn at his commaundement, and one day was as longe as two: he called vpon the hysell and most myghty when p^r enemies prealled vpon hym on euery syde, and the Lord herde hym with the hysle stones. They smote the wyethenly people myghtely, & in fallynge downe they slew all p^r aduerclaries, so that the heathen knewe his hoost, and all his defence, that p^r Lord hym selfe fought agaynst them, for he folowed vpon p^r myghty men of them.

* In the tyme of w^roles also, he & Caleb the sonne of Iephune, dyd a good worche, which stode agaynst p^r enemies, with helde the people from synne, & spyled the wyched murmuring. * And of lyce hundred thousande people of sote, they two were preferred, to bypnyng them ino^r p^r heritage, namely, a lande that floweth w^rth mycke & honp. ¶ The Lord gaue strenght also vnto Caleb, which remayned with him vnto his age: so that he wente vp into p^r hye places of plade and his seide conquered the same for an herpitage: that all the chylidren of Israel myght se, how good a thynge it is, to be obediēt vnto the Lord. And the iudges o^r rulers (euer one after his name) w^rholc hert wete not a whypnyng, ner departed from p^r Lord, and that forsoke not the Lord vnfaithfully, w^rholc remembraunce hath a good reposer: P^ree their bones flourish oute of their place, and their names shall neuer be chaunged,

Samuel p^r prophete beloued of the Lord, ¶ ordeyned a kyng, & anoynted the pyppres ouer the people. In the laste of the Lord ruled he, and iudged p^r congregacion, and the Lord had respecte vnto Jacob. The prophete was founde diligit in his faithfulness: p^ree in his faithfulness was the faithfulness of the visyon knowne. * He called vpo the Lord p^r all myghty, when p^r enemies persecuted vpo him on euery syde, what tyme as he offered p^r suckynge lambes. And p^r Lord thouded fro heauen & made his voyce to be heard w^r a greate noyse. He discomfeyt p^r pyppres of Egipt, and all p^r rulers of the Philistines. * Before his last ende he made p^r congregacion in p^r syght of the Lord, & his anoynted, that he toke nerther substance ner good of eny man, no not so much as a shoo, & no man myght accule him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, & the w^rthdome also his ende a death, and from the earth lyft he vpo hys voyce in the prophete, that the vngodly people shulde p^rerpe, ¶ The prophete of Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

After warde in the tyme of hyng Dauid, there rose vp a prophete called Nathan: for lyke as far is taken awaye from p^r offering, so was Dauid chosen out of p^r chylidren of Israel. He tolde his pastyne with the lpones, as w^rth hyddes, and with beares lyke as w^rth laves. * And he not a graunte when he was yet but yonge, and toke awaye the rebuke from his people: what tyme as he toke p^r stone in hys hande, and smote downe proude Goliath with the spynge: for he called vpon the hysell Lord, which gaue him strenght in hys r^egth hande, so that he ouerthrew the myghty graunte in the battyll, that he myght set vp the borne of hys people agayne. * And brought he hym to w^rorthye aboue all princes, and made hym to haue a good reposite in the payre of the Lord, that he shuld weare a crowne of gloyp. * For he destroyed the enemies on euery syde, rote out the Philistines his aduerclaries, and brake they^r horn in sunder, lyke as it is broken per thyng daye. In all hys worsches he prayfed the hysell and hysell, and aspryed the honoure vnto hym. ¶ With hys whole hert dyd he payre the Lord and loued hym that made hym. * He set fyngers also before the aulter, and in their tyme he made sweete songes. He ordeyned to kepe the holy dayes w^rthynfully, and that the solempne festes shoulde the whole peare shulde be honorably holden, with prayfynge the name of the Egg gill Lord, Lorde, and with spyngynge by tymen in the morning in the shanckar.

C * The Lorde toke awaye his synnes, and enlarged his horne for cuer. He gaue hym the councail of þy kyngdome, and the thron of worshippe in Israel. * After hym there rose vp þy wyle sonne called Salomon, & for hys sake he deuote the entences awaye farte of this Salomon raygned w peace in his tyme: (for God gaue him rellie fro his enemyes on euery syde, that he myght buyde him an house in his name, & prepare the sanctuary for cuer) lyke as he was well instructed i his youth, & fylled with wysdomme & vnderstandynge, as it were w a water floude. He couered & fylled the whole lande with similitudes & wyle prudent sentences.

D hys name wente abode in þy Iles, because of his peace he was beloued. All landes marvelled at his songes, prouerbes, similitudes, and at his peace, and at the name of the Lorde God, which is called the God of Israel. * He gathered golde as tynne, & he had as much siluer as leade. * He was moued in inordinate loue towarde wemen, and was overcome in affection. He starved hys honoure & worshippe, for his posterite despyled he also, in byngynge þy wyath of þy Lorde vpon his chyldren, and tozowe after hys wyse: * so that his kyngdome was deuoyded, and Ephraim became an unfaithfull, and an vnconstant kyngdome. * Neuertheless God forsoke not his mercy, neither was he vterly destroyed because of hys wyckednes, that he shulde leaue him no posterite.

E As for þy sebe þy came vpon him, which he loued, he brought it not vterly to naught but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, and a rote vnto Dauid out of him. Thus rested Salomon with hys fathers, and out of hys sebe he left behynde hym a very foolyschness of the people, and chose one as had no vnderstandynge: * euen, Roboam, which turned awaye the people thowt his counsell, and Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat: * which caused Israel to spurne, & shewed Ephraim the wyse of vngodlynes: In so much that their synnes and myghtednes had the upper hande so soze, that at the last they were depuen out of the lande for the same: For he fought out and brought vp all wyckednes, tyll the vengeance came vpon them.

The xlviii. Chapter.

C The people of Eliah, Eliseus, Iheremias, and Esay.

A den rode vp * Eliah the prophet as a fyre, & his wyrd bent lyke a cresier. He brought an hunger vpon them, & in his zeale he made them ferre in nombe. For they myght not awaye w the commaundmentes of the Lorde.

Thezowe the wyrd of the Lorde be that the heauen, & the tymen brought he the fyre downe. * Thus became Eliah honozable in his wonderous dedes. Alþo maye make his boast to be lyke him: * One that was deed rayled he vp from death, and in the wyrd of the byett he brought him out of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynnes and destroyed them, & the honozable fro their statute. Vpon the mounte Synay he berde the pynshement, & vpon bozeth the iudgement of the vengeance. He propheted recompyng vnto kynnes, * ordeined prophetes after hym: * he was taken vp in þy hoyme of fyre, in a chariot of horses of þy Lorde. He was ordeined in the reynoungnes in tyme to pacifye the wyath of þy Lorde, * to turne the hertes of the fathers vnto the chylidren, and to set vp the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blesed were they that sawe the, & were gnyghed in loue: for to lyue in fyre: (but after death we shall haue no such name.)

* Eliah was couered in þy hoyme, but he-lyseus was fylled w his sperte. * Alþy he lyued he was afayed of no pyynce, and no man myght overcome hym. There coude no wyrd diseaue hym, * & after his death his body propheted: * he vndr todzers i his lyfe, and in death were his wyrdes maruelous. For all this, þy people amfend not, neither departed they fro they synnes: * tyll they were carped awaye prysoners out of þy labe, & were scattered abode in all countrees, so that of them there remained, but a very lytle people, and a pyynce vnto the house of Dauid. howbeit some of them vndr pyght, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Iheremias made his cryte dregge, couered w water into it, dygged thowt þy sonny roche with yron, & made vp a well by þy water lyde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib by, & sent Rablahas, lyft by his hande agaynlyk Syon, and destroyed them with grente pynde. Then crymbled they: hertes and bades, so that they folowed lyke a woman tranayling with chylde. So they called vpon the Lorde, which is mercifull, & lyft vp they bandes before hym. Immediately the Lorde berde the out of heauen: (he thought nomore vndr they synnes, ne gaue them ouer to they enemyes:) but deliuered them by the hande of Elap. * He smote the dook of the Assyrians, and his angell destroyed them. * For Iheremias had done þy thyng that pleased the Lorde, & remained feidlyly in the wyse of Dauid his father. Which Elap was greater a faithfull in his visions. * In his tyme the Sonne wente backwarde, and he lengthened the kynnes lyfte. Alþy a pyght sperte propheted be, what shulde come to passe at the last: and to chose as were sozowful in Syon he gaue consolacion, wderwith

In the remembraunce of * Josiah is lyke as when the apocryph maketh many precious sweete smellynge thynges together. his remembraunce shalbe sweete as honny in all mouthe, and as the playng of a lute at a bachel of wyne. he was appointed to turne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abominacions of the vngodly, he directed his yete vnto the Loyde, and in the tyme of the vngodly he let by the worshippe of God agayne. All kynge (excepte Dauid, hezechias and Josiah) comit-ted wickednes, for euen the kinges of Iuda also forgotte the lawe of God. for they gaue they honny vnto other, they honoure and So was Jesus also * sonne of Josede: these men in they tymes buylded the house

Simon * the sonne of Onias the hye prieste, wherbye in hys tyme sett vp the house agayne, and in hys dayes made fast * temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge, and the hye walles of the temple. In hys dayes the welles of water flowed out, and there creadyng full as the see. he take care for hys people, and deliuered them fro destruction. he kepte his cyrie and made it strong, that it shuld not be desceyde. he dwelt in ho-noure and worshippe amonge his people, * enlarged the entraunce of * house, and the court. he gaue lyght as the moonyng starre in the myddel of the cloudes, and as the moone whan it is full. he opened as the sun-ne in the temple of God. he is as bygh as the rayne bowe in the faye cloudes, and do-rith as the flowers ad roses in the spring of the peare, and as lyght by the ryuers of water: lyke as the bryanches vpon the moist Libanus in the tyme of Sommer: as a fyre and incense that is hymnid. lyke as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones, ad as an olyue tree that is fruitful, ad as a Cyprus tree which groweth vp an hye.

When he put on the garment of honoure, * and was clothed with all betwene: when he went to the holy altar, to garnish the couerng of the Sanctuary: when he take * portions out of the bestes clowde, he hym selfe stode by the hert of the altar, and his bretheren rounde about in orbye. As the bryanches of Cedre tree vpon * mount Libanus, to stode they rounde about him. And as the bryanches of the Olyue tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in theyr gloze. And * he myght sufficiencye perfourme byr seruce

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to syng, and to blowe with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and praple vnto the Loyde. Then were the people asfrened, and fell downe to the earth vnto their faces, to worship the Loyde their God.

he wolde be mercyfull, tyme of honoure of * Loyde were perfourmed, thus ended theyr * mi-nistacion & seruyce. Then went he downe and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue praple and thankes out of their lippes vnto the Loyde, & to restorpe in his name. he beganne yet once also to praye, that he myght openly shewe the thankelgeuyng before þe hysself, namely thus: O geue praye and thakke: ye all vnto the Lord our God, which hath eue done noble and great thynges: which hath increased oure dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealt wyth vs according to his mercy: that he wyll geue vs the comfortes of hert, and peace for oure tyme in Israel. Whiche faithfully keepeth his mercy for vs euermore, and alwaye deliuereth vs in due season.

¶ There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people. They that sate vpon the mountayn of Samaria, the Philistynes, and the foolys people that dwell in Sichem.

¶ Iesus the sonne of Synach Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue toched vpon these informacions and doctrynes of wysdomme and vnderstanding in this booke, and poured out the wysdomme of my hert. Blessed is he that receyvethe hym selfe therein: and who so taketh soch to hert, shall be wyse for euer. If he do these thynges, he shall be strong in all. For the lyyght of the Lorde ledeyth hym.

¶ The. li. Chapter.

¶ Departure of Iesus the sonne of Synach.

¶ I will thanke the, O Lorde ad hng, and praye the, O God my sauoure. I will praye praye vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, ad hast preserued my body from destruction, from þe snare of trayturous tonges, and fro the lyyes that are occupied with lyes. Thou hast bene my helper, fro soch as rode vpon agaynst me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, & for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the conspyng of the that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the bades of soch as sought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them þe troubled me, and went aboute to sett fyre vpon me on euery lyde, so þe I am not brent in the myddell of the fyre: from the depe of hell, from an unclean tongue, from lyege wordes, from the wycked hngge, and fro an vnyghteous tongue. My soule shall praye the Lord vnto death, for my lyfe berye nye vnto hell downewarde.

¶ They compassed me rounde aboute on euery lyde, and there was no man to helpe me. I looked aboute me, yf there were eny man þe wold socoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O Lorde, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, that thou deliuerest soche as put the: trust in the, and ryddest them out of the handes of the breache. Thus lyfe I vpon my prayer from the earth, ad prayed for de-lyuerance fro death. I called vnto the Lord my father that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble and in þe tyme of the proude: I prayed thy name continually, yeldyng honoure & thankes vnto the: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauest me from destruction, and deliueredest me from the vnyghteous tyme. Therefore, wyll I a knowledg and praye þe, and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

¶ When I was yet but yonge, as euer I went astraye, I despyed wysdomme openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the temple, ad sought her vnto the last. Then flopped she vnto me, as a grape that is soone ripe. My hert reioyced in her, then went my fote the ryght waye, yee fro pouth by, sought I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me much wysdomme: ad prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyll I ascrybe the gloze vnto him, that geueth me wysdomme: for I am aduised to do thereafter. I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thyng þe is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath dwelled with her, & I haue bene diligit to be occupied in her. I lyfte vp myne handes an hye, then was my soule lightened thow wysdomme, that I knowledged my follynes. I adored my soule after her, she and I were one heart from the begynnyng, and I founde her in cleynesse. And therfore shall I not be forsaken.

¶ My hert longed after her, and I gatt a good treasure. Thow her the Lorde hath geue me a new tinge, wherwith I will praye hym. * O come vnto me ye vniuerne, and dwell in the house of wysdomme: withdrawe not your selues from her, but talke and comen of these thynges, for your soules are berep thynges. I opened my mouth, and spake. O come ad hye wysdomme without money, howe dothue your neck vnder her yoke, and poure soule shall receaue wysdomme. She is harde at hande and is content to be founde. Behold, with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle labour, and yet haue founde much reast. O receaue wysdomme, ad þe shall haue plenteousnes of lyuer ad golde in possession. Let your mynde reioyce in his mercy, & be not ashamed of hys praye. More the hys wo:ke by tymes, and he shall geue you pout rewarde in due tyme.

23 beareth and not aboue, because we haue synnered agaynst the Lord our God; & haue not bene obediēt vnto his voyce. * Therefore the Lord our God is ryghteous, and we wyth our fathers (as reade is) are brought to this shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagis that are come vpon vs al ready, the Lord had drupied the foz vs: yet wolde we not praye vnto the Lord our God, that we myghte euery man turne fro his vngod-ly wayes. So þ Lord hath caused such plages to come vpon vs: for he is ryghteous in all his wayes, which he hath commaunded vs: which we also haue not done, nee heeked vnto his voyce, for to walke in the commaundmentes of the Lord, that he hath geuen vnto vs.

* And now, O Lord God of Israel, thou that hast brought thy people out of þ land of Egypt with a myghty hande, wyth to-nings and wonders, wyth thy great power & out stretched arme: ad hast gotten thy self a name, as it is come to passe thyss daye. O Lord our God, we haue sinned, we haue done wickedly, we haue behaued our selues vngodly in al thy ryghteousnes. Turne thy wrath from vs (we beseeche the) for we are but a few left among the heythens, where þ hast scattered vs. * Heare our prayers (O Lord) and our petitions, bringe vs out of captivitye, for thyne awine sake: gett vs fa-uour in the sight of the, which haue led vs awayne: that all landes maye knowe, þ thou art the Lord our God, and that Israel and his generacyon callethe vpon thy name.

O Lord, loke downe from thy holy house vpon vs: encline thyne ear, and heare vs.
* For the deed that be gone downe to theye grauis, ad whose soules are out of their bodies, * ascribe vnto the Lord, neither praye neer righteously: but the soule that is vered for the multitude of her sinnes, which goeth on heuily and weakly, whose eyes begynne to faile: yee loch a soule ascribeth prayer and ryghteously vnto the Lord.
O Lord, we pourte our prayers befoze the, ad requyre mercy in thy sight, O Lord our God: not for any godlynes of our forefathers, but because thou hast sent oute thy wrath and indignacion vpon vs: according as thou thyself threatenest vs, by thy seruau-tes the prophetes, saynge:

* Thus sayeth the Lord: Some do bene your shoulders and neckes, and serue þ kyng of Babylon, so shall ye remayne tyll in the lande, that I gaue vnto your fathers. If ye will not do thys, nee heare the voyce of the Lord your God, to serue the kyng of Babylon: I shall bestowe you in þ cyties of Juda, within Iherusalem and wythout. I will also take from you the voyce of myght & the voyce of ioye, þ voyce of the bypde grome ad the voyce of the bypde, and there shal no ma-dwell moze in the lade. But they wolde not hearken vnto thy voyce, to do the kyng of Babylons serpyce: and therefore hast thou perfoumed þ wordes that thou spakest by thy seruantes the prophetes: namely, that the boies of oure fathers shulde be translated out of theye place.

And so, now are they layde out in þ heat of the sunne, and in the colde of the nyght, & died in greute mysery, wyth hunger, wyth sweard, with pestilence & are clene cast forth.
As for the temple wherin thy name was called vpon, thou hast layde it wast, as it is to se this daye: & that for the wickednes of the house of Israel and the house of Iuda.
O Lord our God, thou hast intreated vs after al thy goodnes, & accordyng to all that great longyng mercy of thine, yke as thou spakest by thy seruant Hoies, in the daye whan thou thyself commaunde hym, to wyte thy lawe befoze þ chyldre of Israel, sayng:
* If ye will not hearken vnto my voyce, then shall this great multitude be turned into a very small people, for I will scatte them abroad. Now wythstandyng I am sure that this folke wil not heare me: for it is an hard necked people. But in the lande of their capityte, they shall remember them selues, ad lerne to knowe, that I am the Lord theye God, whan I geue them an herte to vnderstande, and eares to heare. Then shall they praise me in the land of their captivitye: ad thyneke vpon my name. Then shal they turne them from theye harde backes, and from their vngodlynes. Then shall they remember the thynges, that happened vnto theye forefathers, which I sinned agaynst me. So will I bringe them agayne into the lande, which I promysed with an oath vnto theye fathers: Abraham, Isaac, ad Jacob: & they shal be lordes of it, pre I will increase them, and not minsh the. * And I will make another couenaunt with them: soch one as I endure for euer: namely, that I will be theye God, and theye shal be my people: and I will nomoze bypue my people the chyliden of Israel, out of the lande that I haue geuen the.

O Lord almighty, thou God of Israel: hence now thy people * of the seed Israelites and of theyr chyldren, whych haue synned before the, and not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lord be thy God, for the which cause these plagues hang now vpon vs. O Lord, remembre not the wickednes of our forefathers, but thinke vpon thy power ad name now at this tyme: for thou art O Lord our God, and the O Lord: wyl we prayse. * For thou hast put thy feare in oure heretes, to the intent that we shuld call vpo thy name, and praise the in our captiuitie: a that we myght turne fro the wickednes of oure forefathers, that synned before the.

Behold, we are yet this daye in our captiuitie, where as thou hast scattered vs, to be an abhominacion, curse, and speme: * lyke as it hath happened vnto our fathers also, because of all theyr wickednesse and departinge from the.

O Israel, heare the commaundmentes of lyfe: ponde the well with thyn eares, that thou mayest lerne wysdome. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thyn enemyes land: thou art waxe olde in a straunge countrye, ad despyed with the heeb. Why art thou become lyke them, y go downe to thei graues: Cuse because thou hast forsake the well of wysdome. For yf thou haddest walked in y waye of God truly, y shuldest haue remyned still safe in thyn owne lande.

* Where then wold discrecion is, where vertue is, where vnderstandyng is: that thou mayest knowe also from whence cometh longe lyfe, a necessary lpyng, the lyght of the eyes, and quyetnes. Who curer founde out her place / o: who came cuer into hys treasures.

Where are the princes of the heathen become, and soch as ruled the beastes vpo the earth: They that had their pastyme with y foules of the ayre, theyr that boorded vpo silver and gold: (wherein men trust so much) ad made no cube of thei gatheringe: What is become of thei that copened spluer, and were so careful, and coude not byng their wozhes to passe: Theyr be cored out, a gone downe to hell, and other ne are come vp in their steads. Ponge us haue sene lyght, a dwelt vpon earth: but the waye of reformacio haue they not knowne, ne vnderstande the pathes thereof: neither haue theyr chyldren receaued it, per right farre is it from the. It hath not bene herde of in the lande of Canaan, neither hath it bene sene at Cheman.

The Agarenes sought after wysdome, but that which is carthy, lyke as the merchantur of the lande do. They of Cheman are conyng also, and they labour for wysdome and vnderstandyng: but the waye of true wysdome they knowe not: neither do they thinke vpon y pathes therof. O Israel how great is the house of God: a how large is the place of his confellio: * Great is he, a hath none ende: pe a vnmessurable. What is become of those famous gyautes, that were so great of bodies, and so wozthy men of warre: Those had not the Lord choosen, neither haue they founde y waye of refozacion, therefore were they destroyed: ad for so much as they had no wysdome, they perished because of theyr foolyshefle.

Who hath gone vp into heauen, to take wysdome there, and brought her downe fro the cloudes: Who hath gone ouer the see to synde her, and hath choosen her aboute golde, ad so brought her hither: A man knoweth the wayes of wysdome, neither is there cny that can seke out her pathes. But he y wozterth all thynges, knoweth her, and he hath founde her out to his forknowledge. * E hye same is he which prepared the earth a y beginninge a spyled it with all maner of foules a beastes. * What he sendeth vpo y lyght, it goeth: and when he calleth it agayne, it obepeth hym wyth feare. The fowles kepe theyr watch, and geue theyr lyght, per and that gladly. What he calleth them they saye: here we be. And so wyth chearfulness they shewe lyght vnto hym that made them.

* This is oure God, a there shall none other be compared vnto hym. It is he that hath founde out all wysdome, and hath geuen her vnto Jacob his seruauit, and to Israel hys beloued. * Afterward vpo he shew him selfe vpon earth, and dwelt amonge men.

pe greued, O Ierusalem.

23 When the lawe þ the wyath of God was comynge vpon you, the sayde: hearken O pe that dwell aboute Syon, for God hath brought me into great heuynesse: and why? I se þ captiuite of my people, of my sonnes and daughter, which the euellastynge God will bringe vpon them. With hope vnd I noyþ the, but now must I leane the wyth weppynge and sorow.

Let no man reioyce ouer me wyddowe & forsaken: which for the synnes of my childre am desolate of enery man. For why: they departed from þ lawe of God: they wold not knowe his rpyghtounesse, ner walke in the waye of his commaundementes: and as for the pathes of the truth and godlynesse, they had no lust to go in them.

C O pe dwellers aboute Syon: come, and let vs call to remembrance the captiuite, þ the euellastynge God hath brought vnd my sonnes & my daughter. * He hath brought a people vnd the from farre, all vncircumcised people and of a straunge langage: whyche neither regarde the olde, ner vntie the pong.

They haue carryed awaye the deare beloued of my wyddowes, leauynge me alone, both desolate and childles. But alas, what can I helpe you? Nowe be that hath brought these plagis vpon you, deliuer you also fro the handes of our enemyes.

So your waye (O my children) go your waye: for I am desolate & forsaken. * I haue put of the clothyng of peace, ad put vnd me the sack cloth of payer; and for my tyme I will call vpon þ innocēt byest. Be of good cheare O my children: crye vnto the Lord, and he shal deliuer you from þ power of the pysses, your enemyes.

For verely, I haue euer a good hope of your prosperous health: þe a very gladnes is come vpon me from the holy one, because of the mercy that þe shall haue of oure euellastynge laynoure.

D With mourning and weppynge vnd I let you go fro me, but with hope and perpetuall gladnes, shall the Lord be byng you agayne vnto me. Lyke as þ neygbbours of Syon sawe your captiuite from God. Eue so shal they also se shortly poure health in God, which shal come on you with great honour and euellastynge woxyppye.

O my chylde, suffre patiently þ wyth that shall come vpon you. For the enemye hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se hys destruction, and shalt treade vpon hys necke. My derlynges haue gone rough harde wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scattered abrode wth the enemyes. But be of good comforte: O my children) and crye vnto þ Lord: for þe that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembrance:

and lyke as þe haue bene mynded to swarue from your God, * so shall þe now endeavour your selues, & cryme more, to turne agayne and to seke hym. * For þe that hath brought these plagis vnd you, shall byng you euellastynge agayne with your health. Take a good herte vnto the, O Ierusalem: for he which gaue the that name, choyseth the so to do.

* The wycked doers that now put the to trouble, shal perishe: and such as haue reioyed at thy fall, shal be punyshed. The cryed whom thy chyliden seue, and that haue cryed awaye thy sonnes, shal be correct. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decaye (and reioyce at thy fall) so shall they mourne in theyr atone destruction. Theioure of theyr multitude shal be taken awaye, and theyr cheare shal be turned to sorow. For a tyme shal fal vpon the from the euellastynge God longe to endure: and it shal be inhabited of deuis for a great season.

C The .v. Chapter.

O Ierusalem is moued into gladnes for the reioyence of her people, and vnder the figure thereof, the church.

Ierusalem, loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde the iope that cometh vnto the from God. For lo, thy sonnes (whiche thou hast forsaken, and that were scattered abrode) come gathered together, from the east and west, reioysynge in the woide of the holy one, vnto the honour of God.

Put of thy mourning clothes (O Ierusalem) and thy sorow, and dede the wyth the woxyppye and honour, that cometh vnto the from God, with euellastynge glory. God shall put the garment of rightounesse vpon the, and lett a crowne of euellastynge woxyppye vpon thine head: for vnd the will God declare hys byghthnesse, that is vnder the heauen. See an euellastynge name shal be geuen the of God, wth pence of rpyghtounesse, and the honour of Goddes feare.

23 Aske, O Ierusalem, stande vp on hye: loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde thy chyliden gathered from the east, vnto the west: whyche reioyce in the holy woide, haupnge God in remembrance. They departed fro the onfoure, and were led awaye of theyr enemyes: but now shal the Lord be byng them carryed with honour, as chyliden of the kyngdom. For God is purposed to byng downe all foure mountaynes, þe and all þe rockes, to fyll the balleys, and so to make them euen wth the grounde: that Itrael maye be diligit to lye vnto þ honour of God. The woddes and all pleasaunt trees shal ouersadow Itrael, at the commaund.

Chapter. vi.

A Copie of the speache that Jeremie sent vnto the Iewes, whiche were led awaye prisoners by the king of Babylon: wherein he comforteth them of the thyng, that was commaunded hym of God.

BEcause of the synnes that ye haue done agaynst God, ye shall be * led awaye captiue vnto a Babylon, cust of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. So when ye become into Babylon, ye shall remaine there many yeres, ad for alge season: namely seven generacions: and after that will I bypynge you awaye pre-ciously from thence. Now shall ye se in Babylon, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wood and of stone, boyme vpon mens shoulders, to cast out a fearfulnesse before the heathen. But holie that ye do not as the other: be not ye afraid, and let not the feare of them overcome you.

25 Therefore, when ye se the multitude of people wo: bypynge them beynode ad be-foze, saye ye in your hertes: O Lord, * it is thou, that oughtest only to be wo: bypynge: Thyne Angel also shall be with you, and I my selfe will care for your soules. As for the tymber of those goddes, I carpenter hath polished them: pee gynted be they, ad layed our with siluer, yet are they but wayne thinges, and cannot speake. I like as a wech that loneth peramours is tremply decaie, eue so are these made & hanged with golde. Crow-nes of golde verely haue they: goddes vps their heades: so the prestes them selues take golde: and syluer from them: and put it to they: a wne vses: pee they geue of the same vnto harlots, and trymme they: whores withall: agayne, they take it from the whores, and decaie they: goddes therewith. * Yet cannot these goddes deliuer the selues fro rust and mothes. When they haue couered them with clothyng of purple, they wype their faces for the dust of the temple, wher of they: is moche among the. One hath a sceptre in hys hande, as though he were iudge of the coltre: per can he not shape socha of fende him. Another hath a sword: or an are in his hande, for all that is he nether able to defende hym selfe from battaylle, ner from murthers.

C By this ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: therefore se that ye nether wobyppe them, nor feare them. For lyke as a vessel that a man vseth, is nothyng worth when it is broken, euen so is it with they: goddes. When they be set vp in the temple, they: eyes be full of dust, tho: owe the feet of those that come in. And lyke as y dozes are out in rounde aboute vpon hym that hath offended the kyng. So as it were a dead body kepte by the graue. Euen so the prestes kepe the dozes with barres and lockes, lest their Goddes be suppled with robbers.

They set vp candels before them: pee vere-ly and that many: wherof they canot se one but eue as blackes, so stand they in the temple. It is sayde, that the serpentes and wo-mes, whiche come of the earth, gnawe out their hertes, eatyng them and they: clothes also, ad yet they fele it not. They: faces are blacke tho: owe the smoke y is in the temple.
The oules, swalowes, and byrdes flye vpon they: pee y cattes runne ouer they: heades.

By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therefore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them be wyfull: for all that, excepte some body bypynge of their rust, they wyll geue no hyne: and wher they were cast into a fourme, they felt it not.

They are bought for money: & haue no berch of lyfe within them. * They must be boyme vpon mens shoulders, as those that haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothyng worth. * Couden be they then that wo: byppe the. For if they sal to the grounde, they cannot rylt vp agayne of them selues. Pee though one helpe them vp and set them ryght, yet are they not able to stande alone: but must haue byrdes set vnder the lyke beed me. As for the thyng that is offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, and a vnto it: pee the prestes wyues take therof, but vnto the lycke and poore they geue nothyng of it, the weime with chylde and the mentrous lape bandes of their offrynges: By this ye maye be sure, that they are no goddes, therefore be not ye afrayed of them, from whence commeth it the, that they be called goddes: The women syt before the goddes of syluer, golde and wood, and the prestes syt in they: temples, haupinge ouer clothes, whose heades ad beccres are shaw and haue nothyng vps their heades: resting and cxyng vpon the goddes, as me do at the feast, when one is beed.

The prestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymagines, and deck their wyues ad chylde withal. Whether it be good or euell that any man do vnto, the they are not able to recompence it: they can nether sett vp a king ner put hi downe. In lyke maner they maye nether geue ryche, ner rewarde euell.

* Though a man make a voue vnto them and kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it.
They can saue no man from deat, nether deliuer the weake from the myghty. They cannot restore a blinde man to his sight, ner helpe any man at hys neede. They can shew no mercy to y wyddowe, ner do good to the fatherlesse

The Booke of Baruch.

fatherlesse. They? goddes of woodd, stone, golde, and syluer, are but euen as other stonies, that be hewn of the mountayne. They that wo? apppe them, shall be confounded. How shuld they then be taken for goddes? Pee how darre men call them goddes? And though the calbers wo?hpypped them not, hearing that they were but domme? could not speake. Yet they them selues offe? unto Well, and wolde sayne haue hym to speake: as who sape, they coulde fele, that maye not moue. But when the men come to vnderstanding, they qual forsahe the, for their goddes haue no felynge. A greatesoite of women gyde wyth coardes, spt in the strettes, and burne olyue berres. Now yf one of them be couceped a waye, and lye wyth any such as cometh by: he calleth her neyghbour in s?eth, because she was not so wo? thelpe reputed, ner her coarde broken. Whatsoeuer is done for them, it is but in vayne and lost. How maye it then be thought by sayde, that they are goddes? Carpenters and goldsmithes make them, nether be they any other thinge but eue? what the wo?lmen wyll make of them. Pee the goldsmithes the selues that make them, are of no longe continuance. How shuld then the thinges that are made of them, be goddes? Clapne therfore are the thynges (pee very name is it) y they leaue beynde them for the? prosperyte. For as soone as there cometh any warre or plage vpon them, then the prestes ymagin, where they maye hyde them selues with the. How can men thynke then that they be goddes, which nether maye defende them selues fro warre, ner deliuer them from mysfortune? For seynge they be but of woodd, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynge? shall knowe hereafter that they be but vayne thinges: pee it shall be openly declared, that they be no goddes: but eue? the very wo?kes of mens handes, and that God hath nothing to do with them. (It is manifest then that they are no goddes, but the wo?kes of mens handes, and no wo?ke of God in the.) They can set no kynge in the lande, ner geue rayne vnto men. They can geue no sentence of a matter, nether defende the lande fro byong. For they are not able to do so moche as a crowe, y they betwixte heauen and earth.

¶ When there happeneth a fyre into the house of those goddes of woodde, and syluer, and of golde, the prestes wyll escape and saue them selues, but the goddes burne as the balles therein. They cannot withstande any kynge or battel: how maye it the be thought or graunted, y they be goddes? Whereouer, these goddes of woodd, of stone, of golde and syluer maye nether defende them selues fro theues ner robbers: pee the very wicked are stronger then they. The? stripe them out of their apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take they? golde and syluer from the, and so get the a waye: pee can they not helpe the selues. Therfore it is moche better for a man, to be a kynge, y so to thewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherein he that oweth it might haue pleasure: pee or to be a doze in a house, to thepe such thynges safe as be therein, the to be for a vayne god. The Sunne, the Moone and all the starres, seynge they geue the? hyne and lyght, are obediet, and do men good. When the lyghtenynge glysteth, all is cleare. The wynde bloweth in euery countre: and wha? God commaundeth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the whole world, they do as they are bydded. When the fyre is sent downe from aboue ad commaunded, it burneth vpon hylls y wooddes: But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thinges, nether in bewty nether strength. Altherfore men shuld not thynke ner sape that they be goddes, seynge they ca? nether geue sentence in iudgment, ner do me good. For so moche now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not. For they can nether speake, nee ner good of kinges. They can thewe no tokens in heau? for the hepthe, nether appne as the Sunne, ner geue lyght as the Moone: pee the vnrasonable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rose, and do the selues good. So can ye be certified by no manner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare them not. For lyke as a scarcrowe in a garden of herbes hepeyth nothing, euen so are they? goddes of wood, of syluer and golde: that euery byrde sitteth vpon: pee lyke as a deed body that is cast in the darcke. Eue? so is it wyth those goddes of woodd, syluer and golde. By the purple ad scarlet wypph they haue vpon them, and soone fapeth a waye, ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: pee they them selues shall be consumed at the last, wypph shall be a great confusion of the land. Wlsted is the goby man, that hath no ymages and wo?hpyppeth none, for he shall be sarre from reppose.

And they walked in symd-best of flāme, prayfynge Gōds magnifyce p̄ Lozē.
Aneias stode vp, & praye on this manner. Euen in the myddell of fyre opened he his mouth, & sayde: Blessed be p̄ (O Lozē God of oure fathers) ryght worthy to be prayfed & honoured is p̄ name of thyne for euermore: for p̄ art ryghteous i all the thynges p̄ thou hast done to vs: Per, sayethfull are all thy woekes, thy wayes are ryght, ad all thy iudgements true. In all p̄ thynges p̄ p̄ hast brought vpo vs, & vpo p̄ holp epte of oure fathers (euen Ierusalem) p̄ hast executed true iudgement: yee accoutyng to ryght ad equyte hast p̄ brought all these thynges vpo vs because of oure synnes.

For why: we haue offended, & done wy-kedly, we partypnge fro the: * In all thynges haue we trespayed, ad not obeyed thy coma-ndementes, nee kepte the, neether done as p̄ hast byddē vs, p̄ we might prosper. * Alther foze, all that thou hast brought vpo vs, and euery thyng that thou hast done to vs, thou hast done the in true iudgement: As in hely-uerynge vs into p̄ handes of oure enemyes, amonge vngodly and wyched abhomynt ons, & an vnrightheous hyng, yee p̄ most frowarde vpon earth. And now we maye not open oure mouthes, we are become a shāme & reppose vnto thy seruantes, ad to the that woethye p̄. Per for thync naines sake (we beseeche the) geue vs not vpo for euer, hycke not thy couenaunt, and take not a waie thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abraham sake, for thy seruaut Isaac sake and for thy holp Israels sake. To wpo thou hast spoken & promysed * that thou woldest multiplye the p̄p̄e as p̄ starres of heauen, and as the sambe that lyeth vpon the see tho-re. For we (O Lozē) are become lesse then cny people, and be kepte vnder thys daye i all the world, because of oure synnes: So p̄ now we haue nether p̄p̄nce, duke, p̄p̄phet, buent offering, incense, oblation, incense, nee sanctuare before the.

Reueret belesse, in a contrarye herte and an duble sytete let vs be receaued, p̄ we maye opteyne thy mercy. Lyke as in p̄ burnt offeryng of rammes and bullockes, & lyke as in thousandes of fat lambs so lett oure offeryng be in thy syght this daye, that it maye please p̄, * for there is no oblation vnto the, p̄ put there trust i the. And now we folowe the with all our: herte, we feare the, & seche thy face. But vs not to shame, but deale to vs after thy loupinge kindnesse, & according to p̄ multitude of thy mercyes. Welauer vs bp thy myracles (O Lozē) and get thy name & honoure: that all they which do the seruantes euell, maye be confounded. Let them be ashamed thorow thy almygdye power, & let they strength be broke: that they maye knowe, how p̄ thou only art the Lozē God, & honoure worthy thorow out all p̄ world.

And the kynges seruantes that put the in, called not to make the oven hotte with wyde fyre, dize strawe, pitch and fagottes so that the flāme wete oute of the oven vpo a xlii. cubytes: yee it toke awaye & byt vp those Caldees, that it gat holde vpo besyde the oven. But the Angell of the Lozē cam downe into the oven to Asarias and bys felowes, and smote the flāme of the fyre out of p̄ oven, and made the myddell of the oven as it had bene a colde wynde blowyng: so p̄ the fyre nether touched them, greued them, nee, vpo them hurte. Then thei thei (an out of one mouth) prayfed, honoured, and blessed God in the furnace, sayenge,

* Blessed be thou, O Lozē God of oure fathers: for thou art p̄p̄le and honoure wo-thy, yee and to be magnified for euermore. *
Blessed be p̄ holp name of thy glory, for it is worthy to be prayfed, and magnified in all worldes. Blessed be thou in the holp temple of thy glory, for aboute all thynges thou art to be prayfed, p̄ & more the most p̄p̄ to be magnified for euer. Blessed be p̄ i tro-ne of thy kingdome, for aboute all p̄ art wo-thy to be well spote of, & to be more then ma-gnified for euer. Blessed be thou, that lokest thorow the dnye, and sytete vpon p̄ Jerusalem: for thou art worthy to be prayfed, ad aboute all to be magnified for euer. Blessed be thou in the firmament of heauen, for thou art p̄p̄le and honoure worthy for euer.

The story of Susan.

in, whych is the xxiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

There dwelt a man in Babilon, called Joachin, & toke a wyfe, whose name was Susanna, & daughter of helchia, a very faire woman and loch one as feared God. Her father and her mother also were godly people & taught thei daughter accordyng to the lawe of Moyses. Now Joachin (her husbande) was a grete ryche man, and had a fayre orcharde ioynyng vnto his house. And to him resored the Jewes comely, because he was a ma-of reputarion amonge them. The same yea-re were there made two iudges, toke as the Lord speakech of: All the wyke endelle of Babilon, cometh from the elders (that is) from the iudges, whych seme to rule the people. These came oft to Joachims house, and all such as had eny thyng to do in the lawe came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna went into her husban-des orcharde, to walke. The elders sence this, that she went in daye, and walked: they burned for lust to her, yet they were almost out of thei wytes, and cast downe thei eyes, that they quid not be seene, nor remembre, that God is a ryghteous iudge.
 For they were both wounded with the lone of her, neither durst one the other his greif, And for shame, they durst not tell her thei ioynture lust, that they wolde sayne haue had to do w her. Yet they layed wayte for her cruelly from daye to daye, that they myght (at the lest) haue a lyght of her.
 And the one sayde to the other: Wy, lett vs goo home, for it is byner tyme. So they wet thei waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquerieng of þe matier betwixte them selues: yet the one tolde þe other of his wicked lust. Then appoynted they a tyme, when they myght take Susanna alone.

It happened also þe they syed out a conuenient tyme, when she went forth to wal-ke (as her maner was) & no body wyth her, but two maydens, & thought * to walch her selfe in the garde, for it was an hote season.
 And there was not one person there, excepte the two elders, that had byed them selues to beholde her. So the sayde to her maydens: go for me oyle and sope, and shut the orcharde doze, that I maye wash me. And they dyd as he bad them, and shut the orcharde doze, and went out them selues at a backe doze, to set the thyng that he had commaunded: but Susanna knewe not, that the elders laye there byd with in. Now when the maydens were

Were gone forth, the two elders gat the vp: and came vnto her, saying: now the orchard doeth are hnt, that no man can se vs: we ha ue a lust vnto the, therefore consent vnto vs. and lye with vs.

If thou wylt not, we shall bypasse a testimoniall agaynst thee: that there was a pidge lovede with thee, and that thou hast sent awaye the maydens for the for the same cause. Sulanna lyghed, & sayde: Alas. I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe your mynde, it will be my death. & yf I co-sent not vnto you, I can not escape your hades. Well, it is better for me, to foloio your habe without the deere dopyng, then to synne in the sight of the Lorde: and with that, they cryed out with a loude voyce: the elders also cryed out agaynst her.

Then came there one to the orchard dore, and knote it open. Now when the ser-uants of the house heard the crye in the orchard, they rushed in at the back doore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tomed, they seruauntes were greatly alba-med, for why? there was neuer such a revolute made of Sulfania. And the morow aftee came the people to Joachims her husbando, ¶ two elders came also, full of myghte, ¶ magnificancy and power. Sulfania, to vyrgne her vnto death, a spake thus befoze the people: Sende for Sulfania þe daughter of helchias, Joachims wyfe. And immediately they sent for her. So she came wyth her father & mother, her chyldren & all her kynred. Now Sulfania was a tender person, and meruelous fayre of face. Therefore the wycked commanded to take of the clothes fro her face, for she was conuered that at the lect, they myght be satisfied i her beutie. The her seruices, per and al they that knewe her, became to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, & layed thei's handes vpon the heades of Sufanna: which wepte, and loked vp towards heauen, for her herte had a sure trust in the Lord, And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with her two mapdens: whom she sent awaye from her, & spae red þe orcharde doores: with þa ponge felowe (which ther was hyd) came vnto her, and saye with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And when we sawe this pechebines, we ranne to her: and perceraued, þe they had medled together. But we coulde not holde hym, for he was stronger then we:
thus he opened the doore ad cast hym awaye.

Now when we had taken this woman, we asked her, what pounge felowe this was:
but she wolde not tell vs. This is the matter, and we be wytnelless of the same.

The comē softe beloued them, as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, ad so they cōbened her to deatly. Susāna cryed out with a loud voyce, and sayd: O euerlasting God, & thou sēker of secretes, y^e that knowest all thinges afoze they come to pa-se: thou wotest, y^e they haue bene falsē witnesses against me: & beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer byd eny such thynges, as these men haue maliciouly inuētēd agaynst me.

 And the Lord herde her voyce. For whē he was led forth to deatly, the Lord rāpyd up to the spere of a yōge child, whose name was Daniel, whych cryed wth a loud voyce: *
 I am cleane from this bloude. ¶ Heall y^e people turned them towarde by, & sayd: What meane these wordes, that thou hast spokē?
 Daniel stode in the myddst of them, & sayd vnto each foolis, O ye children of Israhel, that ye can not discerne ne knowe the truthy: Ye haue here condēmd a daughter of Israhel vnto deatly, and knowe not the trutly wherfoze: Soo fye on iudgemēt agayn, for they haue spokē falsē wytnesses agaynst her.

Wherefore the people turned againe in all the harte. And the elders (that is, the princi-pall heades) sayd vnto hi: come f^r downe here among vs, and be wth vs in this matter, seeing God hath giuen vs great honour as an elder. And Daniel sayd vnto the^m. *if. reg. iiii. d.
But these two ayde one from another, and yet shall I heare the^m. And he they were pur aⁿsidering one from another, he called one of them and sayd vnto hym: O thou olde cancherbe carle, that hast vsed thy wickednes to lig:

ne afore, are now come to lyght. For thou hast giuen fals iudgements, thou halt oppressed the innocent, s^o letten the gyfte go dyddest thou them talking together: he answered: vnder a Holberry tree. And Daniel sayde: very well, now thou yelst euen vpon thine head. Lo the meassaunger of the Lord hath recreated the sentence of hym, to cut the in two. Then put he hym asyde, & called for the other, & sayde vnto hym: O thou feare of Canaan, but not of Iuda: fapsummes hath dyspayned the, ad thus hath subuerst thine here. Thus deale ye afors with the daughter of Israel, and theye (for feare) conformed vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolbe not a dyde poure wycheuells. How tell me this vnder what tree dydest I take this, fapsumpe together: he answered: vnder a Pogranate tree. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very well, now thou yelst also eue vpon thine head. The meassaunger of the Lord standeth waiping with the weede, to cut the in two and to slaye you both.

25 Then the knyng was wyth, & called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: If ye tell me not who is this, that eateth vp the expensies, ye shall dye: but if ye ca certifie me that Bel eateth this, then Daniel shall dye, for he hath spokē blasphemyp agaynst Bel.
And Daniel sayd vnto the kinge: let it so be accordinge as thou hast sayde: The prestes of Bel were. lxx. besyde theyz wyues & children. And the knyng wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bel prestes sayd to, we wyll go out, and let thou the incense there (O knyng) and poure in the wyne: the quitt the doze fast, and scale it wyth thyne abuse sygnet: and to morow when thou camest in, p thou spendest not that Bel hath thought them selfes sure enough, for vnder the altare they had made a penyntance, and there wente they in euery, & dyd ente vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the king set menes before Bel. Now Daniel had ca-maunded his seruaunts to bringe asses, & these he spyled thorow out all the temple,

Daniel wyth hym. And the knyng sayd: Daniel, are the scales wpoile yet: he answered: Yee (O knyng) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened p doze, the king looked in to the altare, and cryed wyth a loude voyce: Greate art thou O Bel, & with the is no knyng that he shuldenot go in, and sayd: We holde the pauement, marke well, whose fo-tessheppes are these: The knyng sayd: I se the fortessheppes of men, women and chyldren.

Therefore the knyng was angrie, and to-ke the prestes, with theyz wyues and chyldren, and they shewed hym the penynt doze, where they came in, & dyd ente vp loch thyng thou that this is but a God of metall also: lo, he luyeth, he eateth ad dryncketh: so that thou canst not save, p he is no luyngge God, therefore worshyppe hym. Daniel sayd vnto the knyng: I wyll worshyp the Lorde my he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (O knyng) and I shall destroye this Dragon without swearde or staffe. The knyng sayd: I geue leave. The Daniel toke pitch the Dragon, and put the prestes to death. So they came to the kyng, and sayd: let vs haue Daniel, or els we will destrope the and thynghouse.

Now when the kyng sawe, that they refused in to soze vpon hym, and that necessity constrained him, * he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast hym into the Lyons denne, where he was syce dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons, and they had geurn them eueri daye two bodies & two shepe: whych then were not geuen them, to the intent that they myght deuoure Daniel.

There was in Jerusly a Prophete called Abacuc, which had made potage, and broked in a depe platter, and was gong into the selde, for to hyngie it to preapers. But the Angell of the Lorde sayde vnto Abacuc go carie the meate that thou hast to Babylon, vnto Daniel, which is i the Lyons denne. And Abacuc sayde: Lorde, I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. * Then the Angell of the Lorde toke him by the toppre, and bare hym by the heare of the head, and thow to a myghtie wynde, set him in Babylon vpon the denne. And Abacuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel * þ seruant of God, haue, take þ breake fast, that God hath sent the. And Daniel sayde: O God, halt þ thought vpon me: well, thou neuer fastest them that loue the. So Daniel arose, & dyuere: and the Angell of the Lorde sett Abacuc in his owne place agayne immediately.

Upon the seuenth daye, the kyng wrote to be wepe Daniel: and whē he came to the denne, he looked in, and beholde, Daniel sat i the myddest of the Lyons. Then cryed the kyng with a loude voyce, sayig: Create art thou, O Lord God of Daniel: * & he deliuered hym out of þ Lyons denne. * As for those that were the cause of hys destruction, he dyd cast the into the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kyng vnto all people, kynredes and tinges, that dwelt in all countreys, sayenge: peace be multiplyed vpon you. My commandement is, in all the dominio of my realme: that men feare & shode in awe of Daniels God, * for he is þ slymyng God, whych endureth euer: hys kyngdome abyrdeth incorrupte, and his power is euerlastyng. It is he that can deliuer and saue: he both wonders and marvellous workes in heauen and in earth, for he hath saued Daniel from the power of the Lyons.

The prayer of Manas les kyng of Iuda, when he was holden captiue in Babylon.

Lorde Almyghtie, God of oure fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and of the ryghteous seade of them: whych hast made heauen and earth, with all the ornament therof, whych haste ordered the see by the woorde of thy commandement: whych hast quyte vp the depe, and hast sealed it for thy fearfull and laudable name, whych all men feare, and tremble before the face of thy vertue, and for the anger of thy threatening, the which is importable to spymers. But þ mercy of thy promes is great and vnspeakable: for thou arte the Lorde God most hyghe, aboue all the earth, long suffryng, & exceedingly mercifull, & repentant for the malice of mē. Thou Lorde after thy goodnes hast promysed repentaunce of þ crymles of synners: and thou that arte the God of þ ryghteours, hast not put repentaunce to the ryghteours Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, vnto them that haue synned agaynst the: But because I haue synned aboue the number of the sandes of the see, and that myne iniquities are multiplyed, I am humbled with many bandes of yron, and there is in me no brethyng. I haue prouoked thyne anger, and haue done euell before the, in comytinge abhominacions and multiplying offences. And now I bothe the knes of my hert, requyryng goodnes of the O Lorde I haue synned, Lord I haue synned, and knowe myne iniquyte. I desyre the by prayer, O Lorde forgiue me: forgiue me and destrope me not with myne iniquytes, neither do thou alwayes remembre myne euilles to punish them, but saue me (whych am vndoorthy) after thy great mercy: and I will praye the euerlastyngly, all the dayes of my lyfe: for all the vertue of heuen prayeth the, and vnto the be: longer gloire, worlde with oute ende. Amen.

The fyrst boke of the Maccabees.

The fyrst Chapter.

After the death of Alexander the kynge of Macedonia, Antiochus reigned the kingdom. Many of the children of Israel made covenant with the Gentiles. Antiochus subdueth Egypte and Jerusalem vnto his domination. Jerusalem beinge burned maketh lawes of his own, and forbiddeth to keep Goddes lawes. Antiochus followeth an idle over the sulter of God.

After that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, hige of Macedon, wente forth of the lade of Cethim, a fewe dayes kynge of the persyas and Medes. It happened, that he toke greates warres in hand, wane verp many stronge cytyes. A fewe many kynge of Parth: goyng thowto to p ends of p world, and gettyng many ppoles of p people. In to much, p the world lade in greates woe of hym, * & therfore was he proude in his herte. Now when he had gathered a myghty stronge host, & subdued Flaundes & people wth theyz pnces, to p they became tributaryes vnto him: he fel syck. And wth he perceaued p he must nedes dye, he called for his noble estates (whych had bene brought vp wth hym of chyldren) * & parted his kyngdome aynge the, wth he was yet alue. So Alexander raygned. xii. yere, and then dyed.

After: hys death fell the kyngdome vnto hys pnces, and they optayned euery one in hys rowme, and caused them selues to be crownd as kynge: and so dyd theyz chyldre after them many yeres, and moche wyckednesse increased in p world. Out of thet came the vngreuous rote, noble Antioch the sonne of Antiochus the kynge (* whych had bene a pledge at Rome) and he raygned in the C. xxviii. yere of the empyre of the Grekes.

In those dayes wete there out of Iscaell wycked men, whych moued moche people wth theyz counsell. Sayge: * Let vs go & make a couenaunt wth the heathen, p are rounde about vs: for since we departed fro them, we haue had much sorow. So thes deuce pleased them well, and certayne of p people toke wth theyz for to go vnto p kynge, which gaue the licence to do after the ordynance of p heathen. * Then set they vp an ope scole (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the heathen & were nomore cypumfuted: but for toke p holy Celsamente, a tyned them selues to p heathen, * & were cleane solde to do myschete. So when Antiochus beganne to be myghtie in hys kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne plase of Egypte alre that he myght haue the dompnio of two realmes. * Upon this entred he into Egypte w a stronge host, wth charrettes, elephantes, hozsmen and a greates nombe of shyppes, and beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomey the kynge of Egypte. But Ptolomey was a fayne of hym, and fled: and many of hys people were woked to death. Thus Antiochus wane many stronge cytyes, & toke a waye greates good out of the lande of Egypte.

* And after that Antiochus had smyptten Egypte, he turned agayne in the C. lxiij. yere, & wente towardes Israel, & came vp to Jerusalem wth a myghty people: & etred poudly into the Sanctuare, and toke awaye the golden altare, p candylsticke and all the ornamentez therof, the table of the shewbryd, the pouerpyng vessel, the chargers, the golden spones, the vayle, p crownes, and golde apparell of the temple, & brake downe all. He toke also the siluer & golde, the precious Jewels, & the secrete treasuries that he founde. And when he had take awaye all together, caused a greates murthar of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pyper, he departed fro hys awne lande.

Thus there arose greates heynesse and miserye in all p lande of Israel. * The pnces & the clercs of the people mourned, the pouer men and the maydens were despyed, & the fayne beute of women was chaunged: the bydegrome and the wyde toke them to mournynge: the lande and those that dwelt therein, was moued for all the house of Jacob was brought to confusion.

* After two yeres the kynge sent hys chere treasurer vnto p cities of Juda, whiche came to Jerusalem wth a greates multitude of people, speakinge peaceable wordes vnto the, but all was disceite for wth they had geue hym credence, he fel suddenly upon the cytye, & smote it sore, & destroyed moche people of Israel. * And when he had spoyled the cytye, he set fyre on it, & bynged downe houses and wallen on euery syde. The women and their chyldre toke theyr captiue, & led awaye theire catel. Then bynged they p cite of David wth a greates dycke wall, & wth myghtie towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Wherbye all this theyr set wycked people and vngodly me to kepe it, feared it wth beapens & vntayles: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem, & layed them vp there: thus became it a thewpyr castill.

And thes was done to take wayte for the people that went into the Sanctuare, and for the cruel destruction of Iscaell. * Thus they the innocent bloude on euery syde of p Sanctuare, and despyed it: In so much that the cytyens were fayne to departe, and the cytye became an habytacion of straungers, beinge desolate of her awne lede. For her awne natyons were fayne to leave her. * Wth this cuary was cleane wasted, her holy dayes were were turned into mourninge, her Sabbathes were had in despayre, and her honoure brought to nought. Loke howe great her glory was afore, to greate was her confusio, & her hope turned in to sorrowe.

C Antiochus also the kynge sent out a co-mission vnto all hys iugdomes, that al the people shuld be one. The they left euery ma-nys lawe, and all the heathen agreed to þ commauement of kynge Antiochus. Pre-many of the Israelites consented there vnto, offerynge vnto Idols, & despyling the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus let his melsaungers wyth hys commissyon vnto Jerusalem, & to all the cyties of Iuda: that they shuld folow the lawes of the heathen, and forbad ether burnt offerynge, meat offeryn-ge, or peace offerynge to be made in the temple of God, and that there shulde no Sabbath ner hye feaſt daye be kepte: but commaunded, þ the Sanctuare & the holy people of Israel shulde be despyled.

He commaunded also that there shulde be set by other altars, temples & Idols: to offer by swynes flesch & other vncleane beastes: that men shulde leaue thes chyldren vncircumcised, to despye thes soules with al maner of vncleaneſe and abhominacyons: þ they myght lo forgoe the lawe, & chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of God: & that whosoener wolde not do accordyng to the comaundement of kynge Antiochus, shulde suffer death.
In þys maner commaunded he thow out all hys realme, and sett rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do thes thynges commaundyng the cyties of Iuda to do lacrosse vnto Idols.

Then wrote the people vnto the heath by heapes, for to kepe the lawe of the Lord, ad compytted inoch euell in the lande: per ad cha-ced out þ secrettes of Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and prey places.

Che xv. daye of the moneth Casleu, in the ff. Cxlv. yere, sett kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idol of desolacyon vpo the altare of God, and they burned altars thow out all the cyties of Iuda on euery syde, be-foze the doores of the houses, and in the stre-tes: where they bent incense, and vpo sacrifice. * And as for þ booke of þ lawe of God, they bent them in the fyre, and ret them in pyces. What sooner he was that had a boke of the Testament of the Lord founde by hi, per whosoener endowged hymselfe to kepe the lawe of the Lord, the kynge comaundement was, that they shulde put hym to death. And thow his nectoyle they executed thes thynges euery moneth, vpo þ people of Israel that were founde in the cyties.

Che fyue and thentye daye of the mo-neth what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpo þ altare (wher stode in þ heade of þ altare of the Lord) accordyng to the commaun-dement of kynge Antiochus, they put certaine women to death, which had caused the chyldren to be circumcised: For on ly þ, but they hanged vpo the chyldren by the necke thow out all thes houses, and stowe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, wher determined in them selues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thynges: but chose rather to suffer death, then to be des-piled wth vncleane meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruellly slayne. And thes great tyranny increased verp loze vpon the people of Israel.

Che. ii. Chapter.

The mourning of Machabias and hys sonnes for the destruction of the holy cytie. They reuise to do sacrifice vnto Idoles. Forseye of Machabias to: the lawe of God. They are slayne and burned in the same because of the Sabbath daye. Machabias dyng in ma-neth hys sonnes to dyke by the wyse of God after the example of the fathers.

In those daies there dyd stode by one Machabias the sonne of Symeon the prest, out of þ kynred of Iosias from Ierusalem, and dwelt vpon þ mount of Modin, & had v. sonnes: Thon called God-dis Symeon, called Thas: Iudas, otherwys called Machabees: Eleazer, otherwys called Iudas: and Jonathas, whose syma-me was Apphus. These saue the euil, that was done amoge the people of Iuda ad Jerusalem. And Machabias sayd: wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se thes misfe-re of my people, and the piteous destruction of the holy cytie: and thus to se to the, it being deliuered into the handes of the enemy-es. * hys Sanctuare is come into the power of straungers: her temple is, as it were a ma-that hath lost hys good name: hys precious ornamentes are carped awaye captiue.
Her olde men are slayne in the stretes, & her younge men are fallen thow vpo swerde of the enemyes.

What people is it, that hath not some posselyon in her kynngdome: Who hath not gotten some of her peoples? All her glory is taken awaye. She was a free woman, & now she is become an handmaide. Beholde oure Sanctuare, oure betwye & honoure is wasted awaye, & despyled by þ Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Machabi-as rete his clothes, he and hys sonnes, & put sackcloth vpon them, & mourned verp soze.

Then came the men thither wher they were sent of kynge Antiochus, to despyle such as were fled into the cytie of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, and for to sake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclened vnto the, but Machabias and his son-nes remayned steadfast. Then spake þ com-myssyoners

mp'poners of kynge Antiochus, and sayde vnto Athathias: Thou art a noble man, of thy reputation and greate in thy cptic, hauping saye chyliden and bethye. Come thou therfore fyth, and fulfill þ' kynges comaundement, lyke as all the heathen haue done, yet and the men of Iuda, and soch as remaine at Jerusalem: to forsake thou and thy chyliden be in þ' kynges fauoure & enriche thyselfe with golde, syluer & greate rewardes.

Athathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce. Though all nacions obeye þ' kyng Antiochus, and sal awaye euery man from hepyng the lawe of the fathers: though they consente to his comaundementes, yet will I and my sonnes & my bethye, nor fall from the lawe of oure fathers. ¶ Act. v. b.

* that we shoulde forsake the lawe and obedinaunce of God, and to agree vnto the comaundment of kynge Antiochus. Therefore we wyl do no such sacrifice, neither breake þ' statutes of oure lawe, * to go another waye.

¶ Jer. x. liii. c.

And when he had spoken these wordes, there came one of the Iewes, whych open in the i'p'g't of al, d'p'd sacrifice vnto the Idols vpon the aulter in the cptic of Athathias, acordyng to the kynges comaundement.

When Athathias sawe this, he geued hym at the dore, so that hys raynes shoke wythall, & hys wyath kyndled for very ze-le of the lawe. Wherby that he stant vp, & kyled the Iewe whiche the aulter: See & slewe the kynges comp'poner, that compelled hym to do sacrifice, & destroyed the aulter at the same tyme: soch a zeile had he vnto þ' lawe of God * lyke as phinehas d'yd vnto & left all that curer they had i the cptic. Many other godly mē also departed fro þ' wyl-dernesse with the chyliden, they wyues & the chyliden, and remayned there: for þ' tyrāny increased forre vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruantes, and the host, whych was at Jerusalem in þ' cptic of Dauid berde, & certayne men had b'ho-ren the kynges comaundement, and were gone they waye to the wyldernesse into secrete places: & that there were many depared after them: they folowed vpon them, to fyght agaynst them i the Sabbath daye, & sayde: wyl þe yet rebell. Serpou hence, and do the comaundement of kyng Antiochus & ye shall lyue. They answered: * We wyl not go forth, neither wyl we do the kynges comaundment, to breke the Sabbath daye.

¶ 2. Cor. x. c.

Then beganne they to fyght agaynst them, neuertheless they gaue the none other answer, neither cast they one stōne at the, neither made fast they any places, but sayde: we wyl be all in oure innocency, heauen and earth shall testifie with vs, that we put vs to death wrongfully. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath daye, & slewe both men & catell, they wyues & the chyliden, to the nombre of a thousande people.

When Athathias and his frendes herde this, they mourned for them wyth foie and sayde one to another: If so be that we all do as oure b'ethren haue done, & fyght not for oure lyues & for oure lawes agaynst þ' heathen: then shall they the tēter rote vs out of þ' earth. So they concluded amonge the selects at the same tyme, sayinge: whot locure he be that cometh to make battail wyth vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyl fyght agaynst hym, & not dye al, as oure b'ethren þ' were murdered so hapynusly. W'p'd thus came the shynagoge of the Iewes vnto the stronge men of Israel, all soch as were feruent i the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stande by them: In so much that they gatherd an host of men, and slewe the wyched doctes in the synagoge, and the vngodly mē i the synagoge. Some of the wyched fled vnto the heathen, and escaped.

Thus Athathias his frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the aulters, and circycled the chyliden, that had not yet receaued circuncision: as many as they founde within the colles of Israel: and tolowed myghtely vpon the chyliden of pyde, & this acte prospered i the synagoge. In so much, that they kepte the law agaynst the power of the Getilis & the kynges, and gaue nor ouer the synagoge vnto the wyched doctes.

After this when the tyme dycted on last, ¶ that Athathias shoulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Flowis pyde and persecucion increased, now is the tyme of destruction & wyathfull dyspleasure: wherfor? (W'p'd I saynes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and i'oparde your lyues for the Testamēt of the fathers call to remembrance what actes oure fathers d'yd in the synagoge, so that ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastyng name.

* Remember Abahā, was not he founde fapthfull in resencyon, and it was reckened vnto hi for f'p'gheousnes? * Joseph i tyme of hys trouble kepte the comaundement & was made a lord of Egypt. * Whiche oure father was so feruent for þ' honoure of God, that he obtayned the couenante of an euer-lastyng synagoge. * Josue for fullyllige þ' wyde of God, was made the captayne of Israel. * Caleb bare recorde before þ' cōgregacion, and receaued an heritage. * Dauid also in his myercyfull kynedesse, obtayned the throne of an euerlastyng kyngdome.

¶ Judas to make ruler ouer the Iewes. The fourth Ap-pollonius a Seron y^e prince of Syria. The cont. be-of Judas to make God. Judas deere: I wish to fight agaynst Syria, whom Antiochus had made captayne ouer his host. The prayer of the aduersaries.

1. Mach. vii. c. When lode vp Judas Machabeus in his fathers stede, & all hys brethren seld hym: and to fopdall they that helde wth hys father, & fought wth chere-fullnesse for Israel. So Judas gat hys people great honour: he put on a dynt plate as a gaunte, & arrayed hym selfe with hys harnelle, and defended the hoste wth hys swe-orde. In his actes he was lyke a Lyon, & as a Lyons whelpe roaringe at his praye. * he was an enemye to the weyward, & hunted the out: & bent vp those that weked hys people: * So that hys enemyes fled for feare of hym, & all the voyces of vngodlynes were put to trouble: such lucke and prosperyte was in hys hnde. C. his greued diuers kynges, but Jacob was greatly reioyced tho-row his actes, and he gat hym selfe a greate name for euer.

he wente thowto the cityes of Iuda, destroyng the vngodly out of them, turning awaye the wrath from Israel, and receauynge such as were oppressed: and the same of him were vnto the bettermost parte of the earth. Then Apollonius (a pynce of Syria) gathered a myghty greate host of the heathen & out of Samaria, to fyght agaynst Israel. Whych when Judas perceaued, he wente forth to meete hym, fought wth hym, slewe him, and a great multitude wth him, the remanant fled, & he roke their substaunce Judas also toke Apollonius a tyme to car-de, and fought wth it all hys tyme longe.

Now wth Seron another pynce of Syria) herde lode, y^e Judas had gathered vnto him the congregacyon a church of the faith-full, he sayde: I will get me a name & a pray-se thowto ouer y^e realme: for I will go fyght wth Judas, & them that are wth hym, as many as haue despyled the kynge's commaundemnt. So he made hym ready, and there wte wth hym a greate myghty host of y^e vngodly, to stande by him, and to be auen-ger of the children of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Judas wente forth agaynst them wth a small company. And when his people sawe such a great goost before them, they sayde vnto Judas: how are we able, beinge so fewe, to fyght agaynst so great a multitude and so stronge, seinge we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye?

* But Judas sayde: It is a small matter for many to be overcome w^e fewe: yete there is no differenc to the God of heauen, to de-liuer by a greate multitude or by a small company: * for y^e victory of the battell standeth not in the multitude of the host, but the strength cometh from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude, to destroye vs, ouerthrowe and ouerchylde, and to robbe vs.
 But we will fight for oure lynes, & for oure lawes, & the Lorde hym selfe shall destroye them before oure face: therfore be not fefraied of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leaped suddenly vpon the. Thus was Se-ron smitten, and his host put to flight, and Judas folowed vpo them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playnesse: where there were slayn egyptian hundredmen of them, and the residue fled into the lande of the Philistines.
 Then all the heathen on euery syde were afrayed for Judas and his brethren: so that the rumoure of hym came vnto the kynge's eares, for all the Centurys coude tell of the warres of Judas.

So when kynge Antiochus hearde these tidynge, he was angry in his minde: wherefore he sente forth, and gathered in host of his whole realme, very stronge armys: and opened hys treasury, and gaue hys host a them to be ready at all tymes.

¶ Neuertheles when he sawe, that there was not monye enough in his treasuries, and y^e howe the discorde and persecucion, whiche he made in the lande (to put downe the lawes that had bene of olde tyme) his customes & tributes of the lande were mynyshed: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes and charges any longer, nor to haue such gyftes, to geue so liberally as he dyd afore, more then the thynges that were befoze hym.

¶ Wherefoze he was heyr in his mynde, and thought* to go into Persides, for to take tributes of the lande, & so to gather much monye. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersee the kynges buytelles, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: & to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, till he came agayne.
